Craft Necessary to Make Up for Idleness in Past 10 Years.

OUR CRUISERS FAR BEHIND

BUT HUGE SAVING IS SEEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Taking a fair view of the probable accomplishments of the London Naval Arms Conference, it is plain it is going to cost the United States more than $500,000,000 to get parity with the British fleet by 1936. But, it should be added, that would be about half of what it would have cost the United States without the London conference.

The United States came here with a fleet far below the British fleet. With the possible exception of capital ships, the United States lags behind in every class. The United States is behind in airplane carriers. In effectiveness the United States is behind in destroyers. The same is true of American submarines, and as for cruisers the United States practically will have to start all over. To get up to any level which the British will approach, the United States would have to build many ships in the next five years.

The Airplane Situation.

Now it is understood the American delegation finds itself unable, as matters stand, to accept the British proposal to reduce the tonnage of airplane carriers for England and America from 135,000 tons, as provided in the Washington treaty of 1922, to a level of 100,000 tons. The reason for this position lies in the fact that the United States at present is technically inferior to England with regard to airplane carriers and this disadvantage would be accentuated by the suggested reduction.

In addition to this immediate technical premise there is a large general premise for the American position. An important part of the American delegation considers the airplane the most important weapon of warfare which will increase in importance. Therefore it may be considered that economies could perhaps be better made in other directions.

Limits Placed on Carriers.

The Washington treaty provided that airplane carrier tonnage in existence or building on Nov. 12, 1921, would be regarded as experimental and replaceable at any time, whereas subsequent airplane carrier tonnage must be used for twenty years before replacement. America has three airplane carriers, the Saratoga, Lexington and Langley. The Langley, of only fourteen knots, is of small importance and does not enter into the calculations. The Saratoga and Lexington, each of 33,000 tons, must be kept for twenty years. That leaves the United States 69,000 tons which may be put into new carriers.

England has two carriers, the Courageous and Glorious, of 45,000 tons total, which cannot be replaced, and four other carriers which may be replaced. This means England has 90,000 tons which may be put into new carriers.

Since the Washington treaty, experts have come to the conclusion that the best-sized carriers are around 15,000 tons rather than twice that size. Only one plane can land at a time on a carrier, regardless of her size.

The American Naval Board recently asked Congress for five airplane carriers of 13,800 tons each to be built from our margin of 69,000 tons. If the United States builds the five carriers proposed it would have seven.

The British in their existing six carriers have used 115,000 tons of their 135,000 allotment under the Washington treaty. But American naval experts do not regard that as a fair statement of the situation. They believe future carriers will be smaller and that the United States should protect itself along that line.

The British, having under the Washington treaty 90,000 tons which

Metcalf Would Buy Rodney To Help Us Attain Parity

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—As a method for obtaining naval parity with Great Britain, Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island today suggested that the United States purchase the British battleship Rodney, the latest thing in floating gun platforms and charge the price against the debt which the British owe this government.

Mr. Metcalf's suggestion was in response to one made by Senator Borah of Idaho that instead of asking the United States to construct a huge battleship to match the Rodney, the British scrap the Rodney, which would scale the British battleship size down to the American without compelling the United States to grow to the British size.

NEW SHIPS TO STAY, COMMONS IS ASSURED

Premier and Alexander Are Emphatic That Latest Battleships Won't Be Scrapped.

CRUISERS HANG ON ACCORD

First Lord Says Estimate of 50 Is Subject to Satisfactory Outcome of Conference.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Senator Borah's suggestion that the British scrap the great battleship Rodney has been received here with complete frigidity. The chances of the suggestion's success may be accurately estimated at exactly zero.

"Certainly not," said the First Lord of the Admiralty in the House of Commons today, and when the official British spokesman was asked if Britain, for the sake of promoting world peace, would sink the Rodney, he replied, "And have you ceased beating your wife?" the well-known retort of counsel to a rival's insistence that any question could be answered by a simple "yes" or "no."

In reply to another question, the First Lord of the Admiralty said he could not, at the present stage of the negotiations between the five powers, make any forecast as to the possible armament reductions by the conference.

One of the questions, put to the Prime Minister himself by Lord Erskine, was whether any proposals from any foreign delegation at the naval conference that England should scrap battleships of the Queen Elizabeth or Royal Sovereign class had been considered by the government.

"The answer is decidedly in the negative," replied Mr. MacDonald.

Further evidence that faith in the Kellogg pact has its limitations was given when Mr. Alexander admitted that Britain's present estimate of fifty cruisers as sufficient for her requirements of national security depended on the results of the present naval arms conference.

Mr. Alexander's statement was made in the course of his replies to various questions fired at the Labor Government by the "big navy" advocates on the Tory side of the House. Questions concerning cruisers were put by Colonel John Gretton and R. G. Boothby, two mem-

DRESS PEACE SIGNED AFTER 8-DAY STRIKE; SWEATSHOP END SEEN

Compact Provides Impartial Chairman and Board to Study Reforms in the Industry.

22,000 GO BACK AT ONCE

Other 8,000 Workers Will Resume as Contracts Are Made With Non-Union Shops.

LEHMAN'S EFFORTS PRAISED

Union President Foresees a New Era in Trade With Abolition of Sub Standard Plants.

The peace agreements ending "the shortest general strike in the history of the garment industry" were signed at 6:30 o'clock last evening at the City Hall and the advance guard of the 30,000 striking dressmakers will return to work today. In a few days 22,000 employes of the three manufacturing associations will be back in the shops and then the 8,000 workers in independent and non-union shops will be sent back if individual agreements are signed in these cases. The strike will be continued against all the non-union shops whose owners refuse to accept the terms agreed upon yesterday.

At the City Hall the three employers' spokesmen and the garment union president credited Lieut. Gov. Lehman's efforts as mediator with the successful consummation of the negotiations. Governor Roosevelt summoned all parties to the controversy to Albany last Friday, requested them to resume negotiations and asked Colonel Lehman to act as mediator.

Colonel Lehman devoted all of Saturday and Sunday to the conferences and jumped into the controversy again on his return to this city Tuesday evening. When the session ended at 3 o'clock yesterday morning the Lieutenant Governor was tired but confident that peace, which hung on the relations of contractors and jobbers, was in sight. The employers resumed their negotiations at noon yesterday and settled their differences at 5:30 on the compromise suggested by Colonel Lehman.

Provide a Trial Period.

Under the agreement the jobbers promise to confine their work for three months to the members of the contractors association and, if this trial period is successful, to continue the practice. Since the contractors association employs none but union workers this means that the jobbers will no longer patronize non-union contractors.

Attempts at evasion will mean appeal to the impartial chairman who will have no opinion but to decide for the contractor if the charge is proved. The contractors sought to have the jobbers promise that dresses made for them in out-of-town contractors' shops should also be limited to members of the contractors association, but this demand was refused, the jobbers agreeing, however, that their out-of-town work would be made in union shops. These terms had deadlocked the negotiations since last Saturday. The final touches were made to the agreement yesterday after Mr. Hillquit and Samuel Blumberg, counsel for the cloak jobbers were consulted in an advisory capacity.

New Era Foreseen.

Confidence was expressed yesterday by President Benjamin Schlesinger of the union that the terms of peace mean the early abolition of the sweat shop and the sub-standard shop which has hitherto evaded union standards. The terms of the agreement, establishing for the first time

Byrd's Ship Heads Into Storm in Ross Sea; Unlikely to Reach Camp Until Saturday

By RUSSELL OWEN.
Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Feb. 12.—The City of New York is making slow time through the Ross Sea because of a heavy storm, and it seems now as if she could not get here before Saturday. She has been in a gale practically all the time since leaving the ice, part of the time being forced somewhat to the westward because of small packs.

The wind, which was from the south, has hauled around to the southeast, so that it is dead ahead for the ship and here it is blowing hard and snow is drifting.

A message from the City of New York this morning to Admiral Byrd said that the ship was covered with ice and safety lines had been rigged so that men could move about without danger of going overboard. She is steaming directly into the wind and occasionally seas go clear over her. The seas and wind have reduced her speed greatly.

One good result of the storm, however, is that the wind shifting from the south may bring some warmer air and halt the formation of pancake ice in the bay, which has been going on for two or three days. Outside the bay ice is a solid curtain of seasmoke where the colder air strikes the water, a sure sign that freezing is not far off, but this shift in the wind should prevent it for a time.

Part of the bay ice has gone out to the western side, near the cove in the Barrier where materials which are to be taken back have been moved to expedite loading. The ice breaking out will permit the City of New York to come into a sort of dock there, more than a mile from where the things are piled, unless more ice goes out from the centre of the bay.

If this should happen and a strong swell come into the bay, the ship would have to be loaded on the eastern side, where it would be protected. It is evident that we are going to get out just in time, as this February is much colder than last year.

About a third of the men in camp are now living in tents on the other side of the bay, where they have stowed the equipment.

They have a street of tents, four or five on each side, and a mess hall made from dog crates. They dug down in the snow, placed the crates along the sides and put airplane propeller boxes over the top for beams. Over these they placed a tarpaulin.

The table is made from a ski of the Ford plane, upside down, the pedestal serving as support, and the benches are smaller airplane skis. It makes a shelter of sorts, although on a day like yesterday and today it is not free from draughts.

ANGLICANS PROTEST SOVIET PERSECUTION

PARLIAMENT TO GET ISSUE

Church of England Will Join Catholics in Intercession for Russians.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, today added his voice to that of Pope Pius XI in solemnly denouncing religious persecution in Soviet Russia. In addressing the Convocation of Canterbury the Archbishop announced that prayers of intercession for Russia would be offered in all Anglican churches on Sunday, March 16.

"We all know," said the Archbishop, "that during that week multitudes of our fellow-Christians throughout the world, at the bidding of His Holiness the Pope, will be joining in our prayers."

Unless the situation in Russia improves, the Archbishop said, he would raise in Parliament the subject of the campaign, which he called "almost unparalleled in the pitiful history of religious persecution."

The Archbishop was not the only church leader to raise his voice today against the anti-religious drive in Russia. The Archbishop of York, Dr. William Temple, said to the York Convocation:

"No words can be too strong to express the indignation and abhorrence with which we hear day by day the news of the revival of persecution such as is incompatible with the elementary principles of civilization."

Cardinal Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster and head of the Roman Catholic Church in England, warned a congregation in opening a new church at Hatfield that the Bolsheviki were determined to carry their campaign beyond the borders of Russia.

"If we cannot crush the movement," he declared "the result not only in Russia but all over the world will be terrible to contemplate."

It was a scathing but carefully worded denunciation which the Archbishop of Canterbury made today. He said plainly that his protest had nothing to do with the resumption of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Soviet Russia or with the political controversy arising from it. Nevertheless, he declared, the mere resumption of relations imposed special responsibilities which England, "in loyalty to its best traditions, cannot ignore."

"The Soviet Government has a representative in this country," the Archbishop said. "Let it take note that a strong public opinion is rising—shared by persons of every class, party and creed—which will insist on the common acceptance of those principles of justice, liberty and humanity, which are the basis of all international intercourse.

"I am taking steps to have a careful inquiry made into the present facts about religious persecution in Russia, and unless there is evidence of a real improvement I may feel bound to deal with the matter in Parliament—not as a matter of politics, but as a matter which concerns the honor of a Christian people and the demands of our common civilization.

"It is not easy to get accurate information about anything happening in Russia, but no one can question the truth of the long and shocking tale of imprisonment, exile and deliberate putting to death of prelates and parish priests, of monks and nuns and of the humblest folk. It is not only one form of religion that has been assailed. It is every sort of belief in God, and the persecution

HOOVER'S SAILFISH BEATEN BY GUEST'S

PRESIDENT EMPTY-HANDED

He Leaves Late on Day's Trip and Quits Early to Watch the New Champion Take Prize.

LONG KEY, Fla., Feb. 12.—Women had their inning in President Hoover's fishing expedition this afternoon when Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, wife of the associate justice, who is a guest of Mrs. Hoover, landed a sixty-six-pound sailfish, the largest of the season here, where sailfishing is the specialty.

Mrs. Stone landed this prize of deep sea fish after a two-hour battle in the Gulf Stream, eight miles off Long Key in the Atlantic, while President Hoover, Justice Stone and Mark Sullivan, another companion of the Hoovers, stood by in small fishing boats and looked on.

In landing the fish, Mrs. Stone did more than retrieve honors for her sex; she likewise stopped the teasing other men members of the party had been giving her husband for returning the last two days empty-handed.

To add to the Stone triumph, the justice himself landed a sailfish today, but the forty-odd pounds of his catch and the thirty minutes it took to land him looked small indeed beside sixty-six pounds and two hours.

Hoover Returns Empty-Handed.

Mr. Hoover came in empty-handed. This was due mainly, however, to the fact that his last two hours, from about 4 until 6 o'clock, were spent in watching Mrs. Stone wrestle with the monster that came very near outdoing her before she landed him safely aboard the little fishing boat, the Dolphin.

Mrs. Hoover quit her fishing as soon as the big sailfish struck Mrs. Stone's hook. She aided the boat's master for a few minutes in instructing Mrs. Stone how to pull him in, but when the big fellow began to break water and dance about the Atlantic waves on his tail, she grabbed her small motion picture camera to make a record of the scenes with which to substantiate this story later in Washington.

Mrs. Hoover and her guest were fishing well clear of the men in the party when Mrs. Stone got the strike which made her the champion so far this season for Long Key. They were well to the south of the men and apparently were watching a big freighter gliding by on its way to Cuba.

A small boat with a secret service operative was following them and quite a bit to the north, possibly a mile, the little fishing boat, Miss Sally, with President Hoover, Justice Stone and Mr. Sullivan aboard was riding the waves.

Battle Won by Moonlight.

Things were not as quiet toward the President's boat as they seemed, however, for Justice Stone was having his troubles with the forty-pounder which he was sure would capture the honors for the day. He had just accepted the congratulations of the President and Mr. Sullivan when they looked in the direction of the other boat and saw a rod bending.

In an instant they saw the big fellow break out of the water and dance across a wave on his tail. They started easing over toward the Dolphin, not suspecting that at the time the bending rod indicated the triumph of a new champion.

They drifted nearer as the battle went on. The whole flotilla began getting further from shore.

Connie Mack Wins Philadelphia Award For 'Most Outstanding Service' to the City

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—The world's baseball championship brought back to Philadelphia last Fall by the Athletics won an illuminated scroll and $10,000 tonight for Cornelius McGillicuddy, their manager.

Baseball's "grand old man," known as Connie Mack wherever the game is played, was revealed as the winner of the Philadelphia Award, established by the late Edward W. Bok and given annually to the resident "who, during the previous calendar year, shall have performed or brought to its culmination an act, or contributed a service, calculated to advance the best and largest interests of Philadelphia."

Owing to the recent death of Mr. Bok the award was presented at a private dinner attended by a small group at the Bellevue-Stratford instead of at a public function at the Academy of Music.

Roland S. Morris, former Ambassador to Japan, presided, and former District Attorney Charles Edwin Fox made the presentation, following an address by Franklin Spencer Edmonds.

Mr. Mack, who capped more than forty years of baseball with another world's championship, came from Florida to receive the award and tendered to members of his baseball club much of the credit which the award indicated was his.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell, founder of Temple University.
Samuel Yellin, ironmaster.
Dr. Chevalier Jackson, perfecter of the technique for the use of the bronchoscope.

TEST FAILED, SAYS GRAHAM

Chairman Asserts That Ten Years' Trial Shows the Need of Finding Some Other Method.

LIGGETT PORTRAYS EVILS

Writer Charges Liquor Traffic Corrupts Various Cities—Crowd Applauds Retorts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Anti-prohibitionists opened a determined drive today to modify or repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law when the House Judiciary Committee began its long-awaited hearings on pleas submitted by the wets.

At the outset the chairman of the committee, Representative George S. Graham of Philadelphia, denounced the law as a failure after ten years of trial.

Walter W. Liggett, a magazine writer, the first witness called, told a story of shocking conditions in Washington, Boston and Detroit and in Kansas, Minnesota and other parts of the country, which, he alleged, were caused by prohibition.

Tomorrow Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York, Representative Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, and former Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland will testify for the wets. The committee then will recess until next Wednesday.

An undercurrent of feeling between the wets and drys was evident as soon as the session started. Representatives Hickey of Indiana, Summers of Texas and one or two other drys on the committee contended that under Chairman Graham's program to give to all an unlimited opportunity to be heard the hearings would run interminably.

Time Schedule Is Planned.

As a result, an executive meeting was held late this afternoon and Mr. Graham was advised to permit witnesses to proceed tomorrow at his discretion. Later a time schedule will be arranged by the leaders on both sides. It is hoped that the hearings can be completed within about two weeks and still give to both wets and drys equal time.

Frequent applause interrupted Chairman Graham's preliminary statement and Mr. Liggett's testimony, as most of the 200 or more in the caucus room of the House Office Building were frankly and militantly wet. Warnings against demonstrations seemed to have little effect.

Among those present were Mrs. Sabin, Captain W. H. Stayton, chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment; Dr. F. W. Buck, secretary of the Dispensary Tax Reduction League, and Miss M. Louise Dross and Mrs. David H. Morton, respectively chairman and secretary of the Women's Committee for the Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Dry Leaders Absent.

Dry leaders were conspicuous by their absence, but Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie of the National Conference of Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, has asked for an opportunity to testify.

A majority of the spectators were women, a number of them widely known in Washington. They evinced the greatest interest in the proceedings.

As most of the members of the Judiciary Committee are drys, the wet leaders exhibit little hope of per-

Young Couple Shot Dead in Bronx Street By Thugs Who Fire From an Automobile

A young man and young woman walking in Macomb's Road a few steps from where it meets Inwood Avenue, in the Bronx, were shot dead early this morning when several men in a big Cadillac sedan fired on them as the car drove by. Neither of the victims has been identified. The sedan got away.

The district where the shooting occurred is a quiet one occupied for the most part by garages. Several garage workers heard the shots, but the police were not able to find any who were actually witnesses to the crime.

Leroy Barrett, an employee in the Sherman Garage, said that when he reached the door after hearing the fusilade, he found the young woman lying on the pavement unconscious. Barrett described here as about 25 years old, blonde, and wearing a brown coat. He said he called a taxicab immediately and rushed her to the Morrisania City Hospital. On the way he tried to revive and question her but he was unsuccessful. She died before they reached the hospital.

The body of the young man was found some distance from his companion. Police say he apparently ran when the firing started. But one bullet struck him in the neck and two others pierced his chest. In the runway of the Live Garage he collapsed. He was dead when employes found him there.

The young man wore a valuable diamond ring on the little finger of his left hand. His clothing was well made. Police were of the opinion that the shooting was the work of racketeers who either were jealous of the slain man's attentions to the young woman or who had set out to "get" him for business reasons.

132 Indicted in St. Louis As Jones Law Violators

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—One hundred and thirty men and two women were indicted here today by the Federal grand jury in its final report to Judge Faris, on charges of violating the Jones law.

The first Federal grand jury here to which cases were presented under the Jones law last year balked at its task and asked District Attorney Breuer not to send it any more cases under the statute. In impaneling the present grand jury on Nov. 4 Judge Faris told its members that as "decent, patriotic citizens" they must regard the various prohibition enforcement acts as binding upon them.

The judge, who has said that he personally does not believe in the Eighteenth Amendment, asserted at that time that all the prohibition laws had exactly the same importance as other laws, no more and no less.

EXPECT CURRY ORDER FOR 'HOUSECLEANING'

VISITS LINKED TO INQUIRY

By W. A. WARN.
Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—A political "Spring housecleaning," there is reason to believe, will soon be under way in New York City, following recent "social" visits made by John H. McCooey, Democratic chieftain in Kings and John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, to Governor Roosevelt. Mr. McCooey was an overnight guest at the Executive Mansion on Saturday. Mr. Curry conferred with the Governor at the Executive Chamber for two hours today.

The visits of these two powerful Democratic leaders followed closely the introduction by the Republicans of the bill calling on Governor Roosevelt to order an investigation of alleged corruption in the administration of New York City, with especial reference to the magistrates' courts, the local administration of justice and the Board of Standards and Appeals. The visits are viewed by some persons at the capital as not unrelated to the Republican action.

Determined to Put Bill Through.

The Republican leaders of the Legislature apparently have received their orders and are determined to put the New York City inquiry bill through.

There is no precedent for shifting from the Legislature, which has the power and the necessary machinery for instituting inquiries of this sort, to the Chief Executive the responsibility involved. As the result there has been a feeling at the Capitol that Governor Roosevelt, should he veto the bill, would not lay himself open to criticism.

The Governor, however, is said to be unwilling to evade the responsibility the Republicans, who are accused of being actuated solely by political motives, would thrust upon him. The Republicans are credited with believing that if the Governor should order the investigation he would incur the hostility of Tammany and its allied organizations in other boroughs and lose a large number of Democratic votes in his campaign for re-election next Fall.

On the other hand, the Republicans reason, should the Governor, with

BROOKHART ASSAILS CHOICE

Iowan Asserts Vote Will Be a Test Between Reaction and Liberalism.

DILL, WHEELER, JOIN ATTACK

Glenn of Illinois Defends Nominee's Record and Endorses Views on Corporations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The attacks in the Senate on the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes as Chief Justice of the United States to succeed William Howard Taft, continued all day today with unabated vigor, and as a result of Democratic and Progressive Republican opposition, action was again deferred, with a probability that the issue will come to a vote sometime tomorrow.

Unless something happens to intervene, the probabilities are that Mr. Hughes will be confirmed by a vote of about two-thirds of the Senate, although only a majority is needed to give him a clear title to the post.

Assertions were made today that Mr. Hughes had lost ground in the past twenty-four hours, and that on the roll-call a negative vote of considerable proportions, possibly in excess of 25, would be cast against him. It was said that at least six Democrats, who last week were counted among those who would vote for confirmation, had lined up with the opposition.

Efforts by Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican floor leader, to bring the nomination to a vote this afternoon proved abortive. There was objection on the ground that several Senators who could not get time today desired to be heard and, accordingly, Mr. Watson consented to adjournment without action until tomorrow.

Mr. Watson remarked, with an air of finality as he moved that the Senate adjourn for the day, that Mr. Hughes would be confirmed "with plenty of votes to spare."

Debate Continues All Day.

Today's debate on the nomination was warm from the start. After Senator Smoot began the day's proceedings with a speech extolling the virtues of Lincoln, the debate got under way at once and continued until shortly after 5 o'clock.

Senator Glenn, Republican of Illinois, reproved the opposition to Mr. Hughes as unbefitting the dignity of the Senate. Senator Walsh, Democrat of Massachusetts, announced early in the discussion that it was his intention to vote for confirmation.

Senators Dill of Washington and Wheeler of Montana, Democrats, and Blaine, Republican of Wisconsin, in speeches criticizing Mr. Hughes, asserted that in view of his training and activity as a corporation lawyer, he was temperamentally unfitted to hold high judicial office.

Mr. Blaine was particularly caustic in his references to Mr. Hughes. He charged that the latter was "not the servant of great corporations but the leader of the whole pack."

"When Congress attempts to prevent the corruption of our legislators, you will find the slimy serpent of corruption winding its way down to the office of Mr. Hughes," he said.

Longworth Attends Session.

Scores of House members, among them Speaker Longworth, spent the afternoon in the Senate chamber. The galleries were packed.

On the face of the situation at the moment of adjournment this evening, according to unofficial checking and canvassing by newspaper correspondents throughout the day, it appeared that the voting strength of the Senate would have divided about as follows had a vote been taken today.

The total expected to vote against confirmation of Mr. Hughes's nomination are:

Those expected to vote for confirmation are:

REPUBLICANS—Allen, Baird, Bingham, Capper, Dale, Deneen, Fess, Gillett, Glen, G-

The total expected to vote for confirmation is thus 57.

Senators Kendrick, Harris and Ransdell, Democrats, all classed as doubtful, but inclined toward confirmation. Senator Johnson refused to reveal his views, but is believed to oppose confirmation.

Senators Heflin, King, Pittman, and Robinson of Arkansas, Democrats, Howell and Reed, Republicans and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, are absent.

Watson Urges Early Vote.

In pressing for a vote just before adjournment today Senator Watson said he was actuated solely by a desire to return to the consideration of the tariff, but both his attempted action and his explanation drew fire from several members, including Senator Borah.

"I have no desire to force a vote on this question," Senator Watson said, "but we repeatedly have expressed a desire to get this question settled. Inasmuch as every man knows how he will vote, it is the business of the Senate to proceed. If I have my way, the Senate will stay in session tonight until a vote is taken."

Remarking that one way to get the question out of the way would be to move it be referred back to committee, Senator Norris said:

"Senator Watson's wish can't be carried out without a great deal of feeling being engendered. If the Senator says to keep the Senate in session till a vote is taken, he may be able to do it, but a great many things will happen that won't be pleasant."

When Senator Watson pleaded the necessity of considering tariff matters, Senator Glass interjected, "Well, let's do so," but Senator Harrison rose to point out that the Senate had debated Associate Justice Brandeis's appointment for two weeks and had gone into a long discussion of the appointment of Associate Justice Stone.

"We have no desire to delay this matter," Senator Borah told the Republican floor leader, "but we don't want this thing closed until it has been presented to the satisfaction of the Senate. I suggest we go along in regular order so that when the question is closed no feelings will be slighted."

Watson Asks Adjournment.

Retreating from his original stand, Senator Watson asked if unanimous consent would be granted to adjourning this evening and agreeing to continue the session tomorrow until a vote was taken. To this Senator Borah agreed, but Senators Bratton and Glass objected.

If there had been evidence of a filibuster or undue delay, Senator Bratton stated, he would consent, but he said he saw no such evidence. He continued to object after Senator Borah, now aligned with Senator Watson on the proposition, said that there would be seven hours available for debate before a normal adjournment hour.

"I would be the last to suggest that there is a filibuster," said Senator Watson, "but I have an overwhelming desire to get back to the tariff bill."

Senator Norris pronounced himself then as "hurt, not angry, but perplexed," following which Senator Glass observed:

"We spent all of Monday discussing a reduction of a fraction of percentage on a tariff schedule. We spent all of yesterday discussing whether to reduce the tariff on plate glass and window glass, and yet we are asked here to terminate debate on one of the most important, if not the most important question the Senate may be asked to pass on. It also excites my perplexity, if not my suspicion."

Senator Watson then put the motion to adjourn and it was carried.

Brookhart for Norris for President.

A feature of today's debate was an expression of willingness by Senator Brookhart to vote for Senator Norris or Senator Borah for President in 1932 against Mr. Hoover, whom Brookhart supported in 1928.

Mr. Brookhart, in the course of his speech attacking Mr. Hughes, was taken to task by Senator Tydings of Maryland for his failure to vote for Governor Smith in 1928. Senator Tydings asked the Iowan if he would vote for Mr. Hoover again in 1932.

"It depends on whom the Democrats nominate," Mr. Brookhart replied. "There are lots worse men than Hoover. Nominate Senator George Norris or Senator William E. Borah and I will support you."

Mr. Brookhart said he voted for Woodrow Wilson in 1916.

Following Senator Smoot's eulogy of Abraham Lincoln at the opening of today's session Senator Dill gained the floor and launched into an attack on the fitness of Mr. Hughes for the office of Chief Justice.

Dill Attacks Hughes on Radio Issue.

Senator Dill devoted most of his speech to the expression of a fear that Mr. Hughes, as chief justice, would adhere to views outlined in a brief to the Supreme Court, that a licensee under the Federal radio act has a "vested right" to the use of the air.

"That is nothing more nor less than the doctrine of squatter sovereignty," said Mr. Dill.

"It is nothing more nor less than the doctrine of a man who took some water out of the river first and claims the right to use it forever. In other words, Mr. Hughes proposes to apply to this indefinite something called radio frequency the same property right that has been confirmed in the physical things which I have mentioned.

"Every other great domain, every other great public resource of the nation, has been largely gobbled up by private ownership. Private ownership has taken over practically all of our coal and oil lands. Now radio, this one great public domain, under the theory laid down by Mr. Hughes in the General Electric Company case, would be gobbled up by a few private owners.

"It would mean that if the doctrine of 'vested rights,' as asserted by Mr. Hughes, was carried out, those who first get their instruments on the air will be forever in possession of the right to use those instruments. If the theory of Mr. Hughes becomes the law of the land, it will be impossible ever to use any of the wave lengths now being used for communication by the government or anybody else unless the private owner who squatted on the wave length shall be paid."

Fears Attitude of Nominee.

Senator Dill voiced the belief that no court ever would confirm private ownership of a wave length, and added:

"I am unwilling to take the chance of allowing a man of the great legal ability of Charles Evans Hughes to pass upon that question, in the light of the document he has written on the constitutional construction of the subject."

"Democrats and Republicans," Mr. Dill continued, "should realize when they vote to confirm Mr. Hughes as chief justice that they will vote to put a man in that position who will read into the decisions of the court doctrines that will overturn and destroy practically everything that liberals like Jefferson and Jackson stood for in their day, and for the reason that in practically every decision he has written and every plea he has made, when property rights and human rights conflict, he has been on the side of property rights, and property rights have dominated in the contest.

Says Three in Court Are Liberal.

"There are nine members of the court and three of them are consistently found taking the side of humanity rather than the side of property. Six of them nearly always —some times only five—take the other view, and now it is proposed to put a man on that bench who will side with the majority rather than with the minority.

"As one of those who believe that the future of mankind depends on the elevation of human rights above property rights, I do not want to see another man placed on that court who takes the opposite view."

Taking cognizance of Senator Smoot's eulogy of Lincoln, Senator Dill said that Mr. Lincoln would have stood no chance for chief justice, because he was regarded by the conservatives of his day as a radical.

Senator Glenn replied that Mr. Lincoln might have stood no chance, not for the reason Mr. Dill mentioned, but because Mr. Lincoln, as a lawyer, represented a great corporation, the Illinois Central Railroad. That, Mr. Glenn added, would bar him in the eyes of the Progressives who were opposing Mr. Hughes.

In a series of questions Senator Shortridge indicated that he favored confirmation of Mr. Hughes, and was displeased with repeated assertions that the nominee upheld "property rights" as against "human rights."

Senator Dill recalled that in 1916, while running for President, Mr. Hughes had been beaten in California.

"I am a little bit interested in the viewpoint of the Senator from California," observed Mr. Dill. "I take it he is a champion of confirmation of Mr. Hughes. The same people who elected the Senator, however, voted against Mr. Hughes. I wonder what the Senator has to say about that."

Shortridge Denies Parallel.

Mr. Shortridge replied that Mr. Hughes's defeat in California was political history that had no bearing on the pending issue.

"Then the Senator is following his own judgment and not the judgment of the people of California," Mr. Dill rejoined. "They passed on Mr. Hughes and voted against him."

Mr. Shortridge replied: "I think I am warranted in saying that, for the moment at least, I am representing fairly the matured judgment of the good men and women of California."

Mr. Dill resumed:

"The people of California, when confronted by two men holding diametrically opposite views on the economic question I am discussing, voted against Mr. Hughes and for Mr. Wilson, thus destroying a normal Republican majority."

"Mr. Hughes was then running for President," declared Senator Shortridge. "The proposition now is to put him on the Supreme bench, and I will venture to bet a maraschino cherry that the people of California would vote half a million in favor of his confirmation."

"If the Senator has no more faith in his bet than a maraschino cherry," Mr. Dill retorted, "I hardly think it is worthy of notice."

Brookhart Sees Test of Progressives.

Senator Brookhart contended that with agriculture depressed and unemployment "stalking through the land," care should be exercised in the selection of Federal Judges. He declared that John Marshall first enunciated the doctrine that the Supreme Court should pass upon the constitutionality of laws enacted by Congress, and that out of it had grown "confiscation of the earnings of the people."

Mr. Brookhart stated that the vote on the Hughes case would be a test of progressive as opposed to reactionary strength. He urged those in sympathy with the progressive thought to vote against Mr. Hughes.

"I want this vote," he said, "to be the foundation to test the progressive principles of members of the Senate in their political contests and issues. I hope it will become a landmark and a starting point, and if it is, and the people realize that the real trouble lies with the Supreme Court itself, they will then take this matter in hand, and follow the course which the Declaration of Independence itself lays down for a long line of abuses.

"I voted against the confirmation of Pierce Butler on that court, and I have never regretted it, because his whole career on the court has justified the position I took.

"I voted for the confirmation of Harlan F. Stone when most of the progressives did not; but I happened to have had a little closer contact with Mr. Stone, and I thought I found in him those elements that would lead to his progressive and humanitarian determination of these questions and I have never regretted voting for his confirmation.

"I shall vote against the confirmation of Mr. Hughes, and if I prove to be mistaken I will admit it, as I have in every other case in the past."

Tydings Criticizes Brookhart.

Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland, reminded the Senate that Mr. Brookhart supported Mr. Hoover for the Presidency and was now seeking to defeat the President's choice of a Chief Justice.

"It has occurred to me," said Mr. Tydings, "that in the last Presidential campaign, one of the candidates took a rather liberal attitude on the economic questions to which the Iowa Senator has just referred, and the other candidate took no position at all. We might have prevented this very situation against which the Senator is inveighing had we then supported the candidate who believes in the liberal policy, rather than in property rights."

Mr. Brookhart replied that perhaps he had made a mistake in supporting Hoover, but that at the time of the campaign he did not see that any good would be accomplished, from the progressive standpoint, by the election of Governor Smith.

"The way to get liberal policies incorporated in the government," Mr. Tydings retorted, "is to elect a liberal President and not to support a reactionary who will name reactionary appointees. That was the issue to a large extent in the last campaign. Certainly all of the things the Senator seems to contend for were at stake in that campaign, and he decided with the reactionary group."

Mr. Brookhart reminded Mr. Tydings that yesterday Senators Wagner and Copeland of New York, Democratic supporters of Governor Smith in the last campaign, delivered speeches in support of the Hughes nomination.

"That may be true," replied Mr. Tydings, "but I cannot imagine Mr. Hughes having been appointed if the other candidate had won. The reason I take the liberty of now interrupting the Senator is that it occurs to me that when we get to a Presidential election all of this philosophy which he advocates between elections seems to disappear."

Walsh Urges Confirmation.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts said that he had "little difficulty in reaching the decision that Mr. Hughes possesses all the requirements of learning and ability" for the high office of Chief Justice.

"I entertain only one doubt, or perhaps I had better say, I am concerned about only one shortcoming that may become apparent if Mr. Hughes is named Chief Justice," he continued.

"I refer to his fundamental attitude toward what I consider the most important economic and social question of the present and for many years to come, namely, that of proper control and regulation of all public utilities in the public interests.

"It is difficult for me to believe that Mr. Hughes will not be able, in the high and exalted office of Chief Justice, completely to remove himself from the associations and environment which have led him to urge as a judge in his earlier career, and recently as an advocate, views that seem to be more favorable to the rights of property than to the rights of the public.

"I shall not, however, prejudge his future course to the extent of withholding my vote for confirmation. But I hope the discussion that has taken place in connection with this confirmation will have its influence in indicating to him the very keen and intense interest that the public have in this question, the public scrutiny the court will be under, and the concern which many of the representatives of the people in the Congress entertain toward the application of liberal, legal and economic views in the settlement of the question to which I have referred."

Glenn Praises Hughes's Record.

Taking up the criticisms of opponents of confirmation, that Mr. Hughes's corporation affiliations precluded him from determining in a judicial spirit fundamental questions submitted to the Supreme Court, Senator Glenn contended that Mr. Hughes's record in various public offices was a sufficient answer to such criticisms.

He insisted that Mr. Hughes had not violated the proprieties, as alleged by Senator Norris and others, in accepting reappointment to the supreme bench after having retired from the court to run for President. He asserted that as Governor of New York, Mr. Hughes had given sympathetic consideration to "human rights" as distinguished from "property rights."

"I wonder why it is," said Senator Glenn, "that some people are not pleased with this nomination. I presume it is natural. Certainly there is no objection to their not being pleased. It is their right and their province and their duty to present their views. Some objection was made because Mr. Hughes was an advocate, it is said, of Federal control, Federal power and mounting power in the decisions of the Supreme Court as against State rights.

"That objection came from a distinguished Senator from a distinguished State, and from his State came the first man who was most of all responsible for interpreting this Constitution of ours so that it would be a great uniting compact, binding and enforceable, rather than that the government should be a series of States with divergent views and ideas and with the loosest kinds of ties.

"John Marshall was the name of that man, one whom the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Brookhart] has criticized so severely here today.

Attacks Critics of Conditions.

"I wonder if it is true that this nation is so bad as it is painted here. We have heard criticisms today, and we heard them yesterday, of all the branches of the government. Nothing is right in the United States. Everything is wrong. The country is going to ruin as fast as it can, all human rights and all human liberties are being taken away.

"We hear the legislative branch of the government criticized, not so much today and yesterday, as it has been criticized right along.

"It is said that while over at this end of the Capitol there is some element with liberal progressive and liberal tendencies, the legislative branch is in a most deplorable condition because at the other end of the Capitol there is an oligarchy, a czarist body, that is a body of reactionaries, striking at the vitals of the common people of the United States, and that over here there is a crowd who are reactionary and are joining in that effort."

Senator Glenn attacked the contention that Mr. Hughes should not be confirmed because he was defeated in his Presidential campaign.

"Does the Senator think that all lame ducks ought to be put on the bench?" interrupted Senator Brookhart.

"If there were none of them any more crippled in body or in mind or in intellect than Mr. Justice Hughes, I think it would be a very good thing to do," Mr. Glenn replied.

All Branches Criticized.

"As I have said," he continued, "we hear the legislative body criticized, the Executive criticized, strongly and vigorously, in respectful and decent terms, of course, but this man, elected in the last election by the people, is criticized violently here today. So the legislative branch is no good, the executive branch is in improper hands, and the Supreme Court of the United States, the judicial branch is likewise criticized because, it is said, it is controlled by a majority of reactionaries. The country is in a desperate and deplorable condition, is it not, with nothing good in any of the three departments?

"I take issue with those who take that position. I recognize their right to take that position, but I take this occasion to take issue with them. I believe that the rights of the common men and women in the United States, the wage earner, the farmer, the mechanic, the artisan, the small storekeeper, the white-collared clerk —I believe that as time goes on they are improving in condition.

"I believe their rights are being protected; I believe that as the days go by no other nation in the world is advancing so rapidly in humanitarian measures for the protection of all human rights and liberties and freedom.

"I take issue, with great respect and with great admiration, with the distinguished Senator from Idaho (Mr. Borah) when he says the most vital problem of the United States today is the question of the valuation of utilities, and of rates for utilities, and economic problems of that kind.

Sees Problems Unchanged.

"I believe that in the United States the vital problems of today are much as they were when this government was founded. I think we should have a man, able and experienced and wise enough to understand and interpret those great provisions for American liberty and for American advancement—the right of freedom of speech and peaceable assembly, the right of freedom of the press, the right of a man to a trial by a jury of his peers, the right to protection against unlawful invasions or the quartering of troops in his home in time of peace.

"The right of religious worship, of tolerance, is a great question in the United States, and more vital to American liberty and to the perpetuity of American institutions today than is this passing problem, always first, perhaps, to a certain extent, of the rate of return to some utility here or some utility there."

Referring to decisions of the Supreme Court, notably the one in the Baltimore street railway case, holding that utilities were entitled to a certain return on their investments, and the charge of Senator Brookhart and others that Mr. Hughes's views in this regard were in accord with the views of the majority of the court, Mr. Glenn said:

"I cannot agree with the idea that individuals and corporations should be limited to a maximum gain of 4 per cent but that no limit should be placed upon their possible losses; I do not think it is sound. I think that some inducement should be held out for initiative and enterprise and energy. I think it is the thing which has made this country great. I think it is the thing which has made it prosperous."

Question of Communism Raised.

Mr. Glenn referred to Russia, visited by Mr. Brookhart, who, after his tour, eulogized the Soviet aims, but declared that he preferred the American plan.

Senator Norris asked if Senator Glenn could see any analogy between "the conditions that existed in Russia under the Czar, when all the property got into a few hands, and the conditions the Senator has praised here, of big corporations getting money."

"Does he have any idea," Mr. Norris added, "that what happened over in Russia, if we keep on following the Czar's methods, may happen here?"

"I have no fear in that regard at all," replied Senator Glenn. "I believe that the situation, even under the old régime in Russia, was better than under the present system, where even the right to worship God is denied the common people."

In conclusion Senator Glenn said:

"Let us keep in mind, not the question as to whether this man agrees with us in all things or not, whether or not he differs with us upon this thing or the other; let us recognize that on the supreme bench, as in this body, not one single line of thought should be represented but different and varying ideas of governmental and legislative and legal policy.

"Let us remember that we are not a nation composed of a single set or class of people. Let us remember that not one class of people but all classes should have representation here, not a unanimity of opinion.

"Let us not condemn a man because he does not agree with us. Let us first look upon his career, his record, his accomplishments, and if we believe he is honest and able and experienced and capable, let us be modest enough to appreciate and admit that at times we ourselves perhaps may be wrong and he may be right."

Wheeler Opposes Nomination.

In opposing the nomination Senator Wheeler spoke with some warmth.

"You would not vote for Hughes for President and you should not vote for him for chief justice," he said, addressing the Democrats. "As a member of the court, because of his corporation environment, he would unconsciously lean on the side of the great corporations of the country."

Mr. Wheeler said he had no doubt as to how the Republicans would line up on the nomination.

"He represents their ideas on economic questions," said Mr. Wheeler. He charged that as Governor of New York Mr. Hughes vetoed a bill to grant women teachers equal pay with men, that he sent a message to the Legislature against the income tax, that he had disapproved a five-cent fare for Coney Island, a two-cent-a-mile act for the State of New York and a full-crew bill. This "record of vetoes," Mr. Wheeler said, showed how Mr. Hughes stood on the "human side" of economic questions.

"It shows the whole trend of his mind from the day he became Governor of New York down to the present moment," Mr. Wheeler stated. The question at issue, Mr. Wheeler declared, is the same one that divided Hamilton and Jefferson.

"I am not going to vote against Mr. Hughes because he is a Republican," he said. "I am going to vote against him because of the economic views that he holds. I propose to show here that I do not approve of his economic viewpoint."

Connally Calls Hughes Unfit.

Senator Connally of Texas said that the Supreme Court had decided many large and important questions, but that the country was now faced with great economic questions, such as whether the powers of Federal and State Governments are adequate to control and regulate aggregated masses of wealth which were rapidly seizing and controlling the necessities of life.

He declared that the Supreme Court is the greatest influence in the legal field of the nation, and by powers of construction is able to say what is a reasonable rate of return to public utilities, to strike down an act of Congress or an act of the Legislature of any State; "and in the final analysis, the Supreme Court of the United States is the most powerful branch of the government, supposedly consisting of three coordinate branches."

Senator Connally predicted that with Mr. Hughes on the bench shrewd lawyers would bring to light briefs he had filed while an advocate before the court on some important question and artfully remind the court that Mr. Hughes had advanced such views before the court. The Texas Senator asked whether Mr. Hughes could divest himself of fixed convictions, "or shut his mind to the training he has had."

"Can he so exclude from the forum of his intellect convictions that have resulted after hours of study in his library?" asked Senator Connally. 'It is absolutely unthinkable."

Utilities Called Big Issue.

Mr. Hughes, he said, appeared before the Supreme Court representing views in valuation of utilities with which a great body of the people do not agree. In developing this point, Mr. Connally said that one great issue is the control by power companies of water power resources. The question is intermingled with public utilities, he said.

"We are soon to face the question of chain banking," he continued, "whereby it is proposed that a chain of great banks may extend through the United States, with their control in the great centres of New York and Chicago. Mr. Hughes has already expressed his view with reference to questions relating to great railway and transportation problems."

Mr. Connally said that in passing upon the confirmation of public officials the mind of the Senate was not to be closed to all questions except that of the character of the appointee and whether he was versed in the law. He said in conclusion:

"Looking forward into the years that face us immediately and believing that we face the greatest contest of the last half-century, the contest as to whether this government is to control the great corporations and trusts or whether the great corporations and trusts are to control this nation; believing that Judge Hughes is honest but intellectually biased, intellectually already set in his views, intellectually already having rendered a decision on most of these questions, already recorded the decree in his own mind, I, as a Senator, refuse to vote to confirm him as chief justice."

Tomorrow Senators Borah and Norris intend to re-enter the debate. Two other Republicans, Senators La Follette and Nye, also are expected to take the floor in opposition to Mr. Hughes's nomination. It was said tonight that Senators Smith and George would announce their opposition in tomorrow's debate.

Reports of Withdrawal Denied.

Reports circulated in Washington that Mr. Hughes might ask President Hoover to withdraw his nomination because of the attacks on him in the Senate are without foundation, it was learned here yesterday. Mr. Hughes, it was learned, has given no consideration whatever to such a move.

HOOVER'S SAILFISH BEATEN BY GUEST'S

lowed up to the southwest, but the catch had not yet been landed.

While the big fish continued to jump out of the water, the Miss Sally kept well clear. Then when it was evident that he was tiring and his jumps ceased to be so furious, the spectators drew nearer until within talking distance. They were this close for many minutes, however, before the fish, outdone by a woman, lay on the Dolphin's floor.

By this time the moon was up and seemed to be defining a lane along which the President's little fishing fleet filed back to its base at Long Key. It was well after dark when the party arrived back at the Saunterer, President and Mrs. Hoover's houseboat residence, anchored about a quarter of a mile off the gulf shore of the key.

The President did not put out for the sailfish waters until well after noon. It was reported about the fishing docks that he was taking the morning in which to give some attention to the latest developments of the London naval conference. This report was circulated largely among members of his party, who noted an unusual telephone and telegraph activity in the President's communications office last night.

Fishermen on the dock, however, had their own opinions. Skippers of the small fishing boats which have been out daily with the President and his party said that it was more a question of sunburn than pressing business, and they added that Mr. Hoover was well enough acquainted with the sailfish to know that he struck better in the late afternoon.

When the President started out this afternoon it was with the idea of tangling with sailfish. He had angled for the "ice box" yesterday and had failed, and he turned that part of today's expedition over to his secretary, Lawrence Richey, and his personal physician, Lieut. Commander Joel T. Boone, who followed in his fleet to fish off the reefs.

Four boats were in the little fleet when it popped out from the gulf under the Florida East Coast Railway viaduct into the Atlantic. In the ocean it was joined by a fifth, the Orca, a fishing boat sent here especially for the President but which today he turned over to the newspaper correspondents.

It was evident from the start that the women intended having their fun strictly "on their own hook." The trip outbound was hardly under way before the Dolphin, with Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Stone aboard, dropped behind to roll in the waves kicked up by the fifty-foot Orca.

When the rougher water was encountered nearer the Gulf Stream they left the wake of the Orca and made off to the south, with the small Secret Service boat bobbing along behind.

They cruised around for a bit, then dropped over their hooks, and it was not long from that time until the strike came which tonight made Mrs. Stone the envy of this fishing base.

DIES IN PLUNGE OFF PIER.

Man, Awaiting Liner, Falls or Is Pushed Into Water by Crowd.

An unindentified man, about 35 years old, was drowned last night when he fell or was pushed into the water by the crowd of persons waiting on Pier 84, North River, at the foot of Forty-fifth Street, for the liner Vulcania to dock.

Members of the crowd raised a cry when the man fell into the water and deckhands and pierhands threw ropes to him, but to no avail. The marine police were notified and they recovered the body after grappling for about two hours.

The man was 5 feet and 5 inches in height, weighed about 140 pounds and had brown hair and mustache, brown eyes and dark complexion. He wore a brown suit, dark brown overcoat, black shoes, white socks and white shirt and collar.

Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College will leave tomorrow on the Saturnia for Egypt. Miss Gildersleeve, who is on her sabbatical leave, will remain abroad until Autumn. During her absence Prof. George Walker Mullins will be acting dean.

WARD WARNS PARTY ON FARE ISSUE HERE

Declares Opposition From 'Certain Element' to Five-Cent Rate Weakens Forces Here.

GOVERNORSHIP BID IS SEEN

Roosevelt's Stand on Budget Is Criticized by Attorney General in Lockport Address.

Special to The New York Times.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Attorney General Hamilton Ward, in an address regarded as a bid for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination which was delivered here tonight before the Grant Republican Club, attributed the weakness of the party in the city of New York to opposition to the five-cent fare "from a certain element in the Republican party, in the city whose strength is not of the kind that enables them to carry a single Senatorial or Assembly district."

The Attorney General pleaded for a better understanding and cooperation between the city of New York and the rest of the State. He expressed his regret at the sharp play of politics at the State Capitol, lamented the decline in legislative power over State expenditures before executive encroachment, as represented by the executive budget, and voiced entire disagreement with Governor Roosevelt in his contention that the Public Service Commission should be merely a fact-finding body, on the alert, mainly, as a defender of the people against the utility corporations. He also upheld the right of the Federal courts to adjudicate rate disputes.

Sees Change Toward the Budget.

Attorney General Ward declared that the revision of the budget making process had resulted in a "different attitude toward the expenditure of public money on the part of the leaders of the two parties."

In this connection, he brought up an item of $83,314, which Governor Roosevelt inserted in this year's budget to defray the cost of his fight before the courts to have his view on the segregation of budget items upheld against that of the Republican Legislature. He pointed out that Ex-Governor Nathan L. Miller, who had appeared as counsel on the other side, had given his services free of charge.

"When the suit was commenced," Mr. Ward declared, "The Governor was represented by his counsel, Edward Griffin, who was on the regular payroll of the State at a salary of $10,000, but as soon as the proceedings got well under way, May 15, 1929, Mr. Griffin resigned this position and resumed private practice in New York City and now asks $25,000 for that portion of the few months of his time that was occupied in the matter.

"One of the most interesting of the State cases that I have had to do with brings up in a different fashion the question of Executive power. I refer to the telephone rate case.

"I have recommended that legislation be enacted, making the record and evidence taken before the Public Service Commission the record and evidence in any court in which the matter may be reviewed. Such evidence can be taken before persons who should be experienced and expert in the business of rate making and persons who have the background and history of the utility involved. In such a manner the facts ought to be taken and found with reasonable expedition.

Calls for Judicial Utilities Board.

"However, this means that the Public Service Commission must be treated as having judicial powers and judicial responsibility. They are there to defend the State against the utilities and the utilities against the State. The last thing a public service commission should do, which seeks to hold the scales of justice impartially, is to accept direction from one of the parties, whether it be the utility or the State, speaking through its Executive.

"We should expedite justice so that it will keep step with industry and invention, but it still must be justice.

"The thing I do not like about Albany is the tendency to give political aspect to public matters, and in this State the difference is accentuated by the fact that the strength of the Democratic party is almost wholly confined to the metropolis.

"Any party policies that are intended merely to harass the government of the great metropolis are a mistake. But as long as the upState and the metropolis are joined together in lawful wedlock it ill behooves any man to put them asunder, or try to make political capital out of any imagined differences.

"I believe the Republican party is conscious of these things. Our problems, it seems to me, can best be solved by mutual effort and confidence and not by waving political flags and mutual distrust.

"Why are the majority of the voters in New York City against the Republican party in State matters? It seems to me the answer is not far to seek. If there is anything the people of New York City insist upon it is a uniform fare of five cents in their subways, and other railroads and they have succeeded in obtaining it, with no help, but frequent opposition, from a certain element of the Republican party in New York City, whose strength is not of the kind that enables them to carry a single Senatorial or Assembly district.

"The five-cent fare is certainly a local matter and we cannot expect much of local leadership if we insist in forcing that issue on the public of Greater New York."

Workers in Massachusetts District Urge Administration to Tackle Unemployment.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Democratic hopes took a strongly optimistic trend today on account of yesterday's victory of the Democratic candidate in the Second Congressional District of Massachusetts, which had never sent a Democrat to the House of Representatives in the thirty-seven years since its organization.

While this district was carried by the Democratic electors in 1928, when former Governor Alfred E. Smith was the Presidential candidate of the party by a majority of 514 it returned in the same election the Republican candidate for Congress, William Kirk Kaynor, by a majority of 8,488.

Representative Kaynor was killed in an airplane accident at Washington as he was returning to spend the Christmas holidays at his Massachusetts home. Yesterday's election was held to fill the vacancy caused by his death.

According to officers of the Democratic National Committee the outcome of the election is particularly significant because it was fought on national issues, except prohibition. Republican and Democratic candidates were wet. Jouett Shouse, in charge of the committee's Washington headquarters, stressed this today and also contended that the Democratic victory in this banner Republican constituency was a rebuke to President Hoover in that, as he expressed it, "the one definite issue was the record of the Hoover Administration."

Stobbs Blames Tariff Delay.

A Republican explanation came from Representative George R. Stobbs of the Fifth Massachusetts District. He expressed the opinion that the result seemed to show clearly that dissatisfaction with industrial conditions in the State was responsible, but that the prohibition question played a part. Mr. Stobbs took occasion to give a dig to the Senate's delay in passing the tariff bill as a contributory cause. He said that the feeling of business uncertainty and the delay on the tariff measures were among the various causes which brought the Republican overturn.

What encourages the Democrats most, as Mr. Shouse did not fail to point out, is that what happened in Massachusetts yesterday was in line with a series of Democratic victories in by-elections since the overwhelming defeat of that party in the Presidential election of 1928.

Mr. Shouse listed the Democratic Gubernatorial victory in Virginia in November as showing that the party rift, which gave the State to the Hoover electors in 1928, had been healed; the election of a Democratic representative in the Fifth Georgia District, which had been carried by Hoover; the return of a Democratic representative from the Third Kentucky District, which had elected a Republican to Congress in 1928, and the slight majority given the Republican candidate for Congress in the Minneapolis District of Minnesota, which had been carried in 1928 by 50,000 by Walter H. Newton, now one of the President's secretaries.

Municipal Victories Also Cited.

Democratic victories in municipal contests in up-State New York and Indiana were cited also by Mr. Shouse as showing a decided Democratic trend in the comparatively brief period since the defeat of Governor Smith.

In the campaign in the Second Massachusetts District, which ended yesterday in victory for William J. Granfield, the Democratic candidate, over his Republican opponent, Fred D. Griggs, national issues seemed to have been pretty definitely drawn. Claudius N. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Senator Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts sent appeals to the voters of the Second District to elect Mr. Griggs and thus show loyalty to President Hoover.

Senator David I. Walsh, Senator Gillett's Democratic colleague, made a speech for Mr. Granfield in which he called on the voters to protest against the alleged failure of the Hoover Administration to acknowledge or seek to remedy the unemployment situation, characterized by him as grave. Senator Walsh also discussed the tariff situation and in this connection spoke of the depression in the industries of the State.

Democrats here found an additional source of comfort over the Massachusetts victory in the fact that the Second District is the home of former President Calvin Coolidge. His home town of Northampton went Democratic in every ward.

The district was represented in the lower house of Congress for thirty years by Senator Gillett, who never lost an election. Springfield, where the Senator lives, went Democratic by more than 3,000 votes. Senator Gillett declined to comment on the Democratic victory, saying he desired further information before doing so.

Concede Democratic Trend.

Information here as to political thought throughout the country is somewhat vague. Some observers think that there has not been any crystallization sufficient to indicate the attitude of the electorate toward the Hoover Administration. Regular Republican Senators and Representatives express confidence that their party will be successful in the Congressional elections this year—that is, the Senate and the House will continue to be controlled by Republicans—but some of them concede that there are bad spots here and there which may be symptomatic of a strong Democratic trend in the Presidential elections of 1932.

Garner Sees Victory Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—Election of William J. Granfield, Democrat, as Representative, yesterday was said today by Representative Garner to be an indication "of what is going to happen in November."

Mr. Garner said the administration has failed so far in that it has had no leadership and no policy.

"No one knows what the President stands for and the leadership in the House seems to hesitate to take a definite stand in view of the President's unknown position," he said.

"The Senate is divided and already has expressed its loss of confidence in the President in a number of ways."

Party Workers Call for Action.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 12.—Yesterday's revolt of Republican voters which returned William J. Granfield, Democrat, a victor over Frederick D. Griggs, Republican, in the special Congressional election by a majority of 6,421 votes was followed by an openly voiced revolt of many Republican workers today.

Their contention is that the Republican cry of prosperity is worn out and that the thing for the administration leaders to do is to recognize the existence of a depression at least in New England and try to work out some remedial plans.

They admit that the business situation is spotty and that some plants in every town are doing a good business, but say that the unemployment is sufficiently extensive to cause dissatisfaction.

Mr. Granfield's majority over Mr. Griggs was 6,421 votes.

Republican Leaders Stirred.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 12.—The Democratic victory yesterday in the Second District has jolted Republican leaders into recognition of the problems they face in the State and Senatorial campaigns ahead. A survey has been started to determine the cause of yesterday's setback and how much prohibition and unemployment entered into the election as issues.

Frank J. Donahue, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, said today:

"In the magnitude of its rebuke to the Republican party and as an augury of what is to be expected in the coming State election, the result in the special election in the Springfield district has its only parallel in the by-election in the old Fourteenth District in 1910, when Eugene N. Foss was swept into Congress in a strong Republican district."

General Edwards, although silent on any boom for himself, remarked: "The result is very, very significant. I think that hypocrisy and cowardice have received a jolt."

BERKEY GROUP FREED IN PITTSBURGH TRIAL

Former Judge and Twelve Aides Were Accused of Liquor-Gambling Conspiracy.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 12.—Former Judge John A. Berkey and twelve other defendants in the Somerset liquor conspiracy case were found not guilty today in a verdict delivered to Judge Schoonmaker in Federal Court.

The case was considered by Federal officials to be one of the largest wet conspiracy cases tried in the State since the advent of prohibition. Every man implicated in the charges was either acquitted or discharged by the court.

John M. Coldiron had been sent from Washington as special prosecutor to handle the case.

Mr. Berkey and his codefendants went on trial Feb. 3, charged with operating a combined slot-machine and liquor ring in Somerset County. They were accused of selling "protection" to those who contributed to Berkey's political pot.

The government built its case around two witnesses, Claude A. M. Welsh, former treasurer of the Berkey political organization and the secretary and treasurer of The Public View, a newspaper owned and controlled by Berkey, and James Turnbull, a prisoner under sentence for liquor law violations.

State Chairman Tells Knight and McGinnies to Consult Leaders Here on Transit Unification.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—William J. Maier, chairman of the Republican State Committee, is here tonight as the guest of the Albany County organization which recently was reformed with his backing by the elimination of its old chairman and the election of Isadore Bookstein, who was approved by Mr. Maier.

The State chairman received a cordial greeting when he appeared at the Lincoln dinner and made a vigorous speech.

Previously Mr. Maier had been in conference with Senator Knight and Speaker McGinnies. One of the topics discussed was the Untermyer transit unification bill, soon to be introduced on behalf of the New York City Administration. Mr. Maier said he had told the two legislative leaders to get in touch with party leaders in the city with a view to ascertaining sentiment among city Republicans on this measure.

With a State election in prospect, the political effect of any action by the Legislature on a New York City transit measure has become a subject of importance, especially in view of the deadlock reached over a demand, voiced by the Republican leaders here, that a proposed clause to guarantee a five-cent fare for all time on the unified transit system, regardless of the return from operations, be eliminated.

Congratulates Albany Group.

In his speech to which the party leaders in the Legislature and many Republican lawmakers listened, Mr. Maier congratulated the Albany County organization on the "new spirit that had been born within their organization" with the change in leadership, and expressed the opinion that scars incurred in the spirited battle leading up to this had been healed.

Some Albany Republicans, now in eclipse, may not agree with this, but the remark was applauded nevertheless.

"There is in this community, as in every community," Chairman Maier went on, "a large class of intelligent citizens who, repelled by that sordid side of politics which receives so much attention in the newspapers, declines to take any part in public affairs. These good people frequently pride themselves upon knowing nothing whatever about politics. They seldom go to the polls. They want good government and upright party management, but they do not lend even a small part of their energy to establish these things.

"They are cynical in a marked degree toward all parties and toward all government. The good citizens of any community outnumber the bad citizens by a very large majority. Of course if the good citizens of this community can be convinced that what the Republican party has to offer is better than what the Democratic party has to offer you will have no difficulty in electing your candidates.

"But the good citizens must be aroused, and particularly the interest of those stay-at-homes of whom I have spoken must be enlisted. It does not very often happen that you can make a Republican out of a Democrat. Those few who are converted from one party to another are too often won over by purely selfish and unworthy motives.

"To build up a strong organization, a fine, fighting army of party workers, is one of the most important tasks that lies before you. You can work effectively for the Republican party if you work for the city and county of Albany, and if you are sincere, as I know you will be, the people of Albany will respond. That

Woman Censures Governor.

Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves of St. Lawrence, lone feminine member of the assembly, was another speaker. She censured Governor Roosevelt for his failure to approve last year a bill which provided for a bridge across the St. Lawrence, because it was to be privately built and operated for tolls.

She also accused the Governor of playing politics in awarding honorary positions on the visiting boards of State institutions and cited an instance where he had appointed a Democratic woman from St. Lawrence to succeed a Republican woman on the board of visitors to the Women's Relief Corps Home at Oxford over the protest of that organization and the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Maier, who is going to Florida for a ten-day vacation, said he was getting ready for a State-wide tour to sound sentiment in the party with regard to Gubernatorial candidates.

WEIGH TRANSIT BILL AGAIN.

Albany Leaders and City Officials Meet Here Today.

State and city transit officials will renew today their efforts to agree with Republican legislative leaders on the provisions of the Untermyer rapid-transit unification bill now awaiting introduction at Albany. Senator John Knight and Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies, who will be in the city on another matter, are expected to confer some time during the day with William G. Fullen, chairman of the Transit Commission, and John H. Delaney, chairman of the Board of Transportation.

It is possible that the Republican leaders will be advised of Mayor Walker's attitude toward omission from the Untermyer bill of clauses regarded as safeguarding the five-cent fare for the proposed unified transit lines. Aldermanic President McKee and Mr. Delaney will discuss this phase of the situation today.

There is also a possibility that Senator Knight and Speaker McGinnies again will discuss the bill with Samuel S. Koenig, chairman of the Republican County Committee. Mr. Koenig already has indicated his belief that the local Republican organization should not be placed in the position of opposing a unification program which promises improvement of local transit conditions. Persistence of the Republican majority leaders in blocking the measure, Mr. Koenig is said to hold, would make more difficult the work of strengthening the New York County Republican organization.

The attitude of James L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, in again attacking the unification bill, was criticized yesterday in a statement issued by the Manhattan Stockholders' Protective Committee, representing shareholders of the elevated lines. The statement accused Mr. Quackenbush of misrepresenting the recent action of the State Chamber of Commerce, which endorsed the idea of unified transit but objected to "political" features of the bill. "The committee declared that Mr. Quackenbush's attack, incorporating quotations from the chamber's formal resolution and report, had ignored its endorsement of the principle of unification.

Dr. Grant C. Madill of Ogdensburg and John Lord O'Brian of Buffalo, also Republican candidates, were formally elected as regents of the Fourth and Eighth Districts.

TUTTLE IS BOOMED BY R. W. LAWRENCE

Hoover Man Proposes Him as 'Next Governor' to Revive the Republican Sway in State.

HILL SAID TO BACK HIM

Party Women Applaud the Federal Attorney, Who Smiles but Is Silent on Candidacy.

United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle was hailed as "the next Governor" yesterday at the thirtieth annual Lincoln Day luncheon of the New York State Woman's Republican Club Inc., at the Hotel Plaza, where Mr. Tuttle was a speaker.

The formal declarations of approval of Mr. Tuttle as the Republican Gubernatorial candidate—practically the first to be given in a public gathering—were considered significant when coupled with additional information gained elsewhere.

For one thing, Richard W. Lawrence, president of the National Republican Club, was among the speakers to put Mr. Tuttle forward as the man who could lead the Republicans to victory in the Fall election. Mr. Lawrence, it was pointed out, is generally considered among the Hoover group in the State which has been understood to oppose Mr. Tuttle.

Hill Support Seen.

Mr. Lawrence praised the United States Attorney, who, he said, could revitalize the party in the State. Friends of Mr. Tuttle also said later that William H. Hill of Binghamton, chief Hoover leader up-State, was "for Tuttle." From these two facts they concluded that the Hoover group, controlling the State organization as it does, must not necessarily be considered as a barrier to Mr. Tuttle's nomination.

Mr. Tuttle, is is understood, is still undecided himself about the nomination and while he beamed at the luncheon when the Gubernatorial references were made, offered no comment.

The statements regarding Mr. Tuttle were made almost as parenthetical remarks by Mr. Lawrence and by Mrs. James G. Wentz, club president, but the guests seized upon them as opportunity for considerable applause.

Mrs. Wentz brought the first outburst when in introducing Mr. Tuttle she praised him for his work as Federal Attorney, and closed by calling him "the next Governor." Mr. Tuttle smiled a recognition of the reference when he rose to speak, but otherwise ignored it. Later Mr. Lawrence, speaking on the need for intensive political labor by the Republicans to end the Democratic sway in the State, turned toward the Federal Attorney and referred to him as: "This gentleman who I hope and pray will be the next Governor of the State; he is the man who can revitalize the party with his leadership."

Tuttle Extols Lincoln's Example.

Mr. Tuttle, in his address, dwelt on the example that Abraham Lincoln provided for present-day Americans in their attitude toward current and future affairs. He asserted that Lincoln served as a continual reminder of the necessity for faith, courage and unselfish leadership.

William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives, another speaker, assailed "government by commissions." Mr. Page said he had no objection to commissions as fact-finding bodies, but added:

"The permanent commission, however, makes for centralization of government. It is nebulous in its duties and is an extravagant embellishment which fastens on the government and which interferes with the functions of departments set up explicitly for certain duties and responsible to the President, who, in turn, is responsible to the people. These commissions are set up under the false idea that they give the peole more power, but in reality they have undermined the foundation stones of the American Republic."

Major Gen. Hanson E. Ely also spoke, urging a national defense adequate for full military protection, but not of such size as to cause other nations to fear the United States.

CURRY EXPECTED TO 'CLEAN HOUSE'

By W. A. WARN.

recent disclosures of irregularities in the City Administration, veto the bill and dodge the responsibility, he would lose the votes of a large body of independents who, under the circumstances, would vote for his Republican opponent.

Governor Roosevelt, it is said, is well aware of the justification he would have for vetoing the inquiry bill and may still do so. But, according to his friends, he is unwilling to be placed in the position of being deterred by fear that he would lose Democratic votes in New York City. He is said to feel, also, that if conditions exist calling for a housecleaning in an administration controlled by the Democrats, the party should not hesitate to use the broom.

Governor Told Not to Fear.

It is understood that not only Mr. Curry but Mayor Walker has assured the Governor that if he should order the investigation and conduct it through his appointees in the spirit every one who knows him would expect, his decision would not be held against him by the voters of his party in New York City. Nor, the Governor has been assured, would a thorough inquiry, if fairly conducted, disclose anything to discredit the party in the coming election.

Mr. Curry, after his visit, declined to make any extended comment on the topics of their conversation. He denied, as did the Governor later, that anything was said regarding the two vacancies on the Public Service Commission.

"I think both Mr. Curry and Mr. McCooey understand that those will be non-political appointments and that the Public Service Commission will be out of politics as long as I am Governor," Mr. Roosevelt said.

The call of the Tammany chieftain, the Governor said, was primarily "social."

"Mr. Curry has been South, so we talked about real estate at Biloxi, Miss., and Warm Springs, Ga." The Governor said with a laugh. "I told him that I would buy some lots at Biloxi if he would buy some at Warm Springs, which I am interested in developing."

Governor Roosevelt said he had not so far found a successor to Dr. Mathias Nicoll Jr. as State Health Commissioner and indicated that he might be compelled to select some one not now a resident of the State.

He stated that he had not received from the Appellate Division of the First Department any recommendation for a designation to fill the vacancy created by the recent resignation of Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, but would act in accordance with the recommendations of Justice Proskauer's former colleagues.

STEINBRINK MEETS M'COOEY ON JUDGES

Brooklyn Leaders in Conference on Division of Proposed Eight New Places.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 12.—John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Brooklyn, admitted tonight that he had conferred here with Meier Steinbrink, Republican leader of Brooklyn, on political matters affecting their home borough.

Although Mr. McCooey declined to reveal the nature of their discussion, it was learned from another source that it dealt principally with the proposal for additional judgeships for the Second Judicial District, which comprises Suffolk, Nassau, Queens, Kings and Richmond counties.

"Yes, I had a political conference with Mr. Steinbrink," said Mr. McCooey, who is on a vacation with Mrs. McCooey at the Hotel Shelbourne. "I cannot tell you the nature of our conference, as our plans are not as yet consummated."

Both leaders favor the proposal to give the Second District eight more judges, it was learned, but they have not reached an agreement as to how the extra judgeships are to be apportioned between the two political parties.

It was understood that Mr. McCooey proposed to give the Republicans two of the eight places and, in addition, have his organization endorse Justice James C. Cropsey, Republican, who will seek re-election to a fourteen-year term this Fall.

Some observers predicted that Mr. Steinbrink eventually would get three places besides the bi-partisan approval of Justice Cropsey. It was pointed out that although the Democratic organization is the stronger in the Second District, Mr. Steinbrink's help is essential in having the measure enacted by the Republican-controlled Legislature.

If the two leaders reach a full agreement before Monday, it is expected that the measure will be introduced in Albany next week. Republican legislators are expected to sponsor the bill.

Mr. Steinbrink, who has been at the Hotel Traymore with his wife and family since last Saturday, departed tonight for Brooklyn.

"I am selling space I used to waste"*

AN inefficient janitor, a tenant's complaint, and a little simple arithmetic convinced Mr. Keil that old-fashioned methods of heating his 3-story apartment building were actually losing him money.

By changing his fuel supply to automatic Gas Heat, he has converted his janitor's apartment and fuel bin into rentable space for occupancy by a modiste, a tailor and a confectioner. The heating system needs no care except an occasional inspection by gas company engineers; tenants in every apartment have forgotten their old complaints about heat and hot water; and Mr. Keil sums it all up by saying:

"I wouldn't take $5,000 for my gas furnace, if I knew there were no others to be had."

When hard-headed business men take this dollars-and-cents view of Gas Heating, surely there must also be something in it for the householder, who places a value on the comfort, convenience and cleanliness of his home.

UNITED STATES FIRM ON CRUISER CLASSES

Objects at London Experts' Committee Meeting to Division by Tonnage and Guns.

PROBLEM GOES TO CHIEFS

Group Is Expected to Take Up Today Resolutions for 'Humanizing' of Submarine Warfare.

By L. C. SPEERS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A long drawn-out meeting of the first committee of the London Naval Arms Conference this afternoon emphasized the position of the United States in the matter of cruisers, which is for classification by guns and not by tonnage. This means the United States has not given ground from the original stand of the general board of the navy, which is for limitation by guns only, leaving each nation subject to the treaty free to fix the tonnage of this class of ships up to and including 10,000 tons.

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, presided at the meeting in St. James's Palace to receive the report of the committee of experts which for more than a week has been wrestling with problems involving classifications by guns and on a tonnage basis and at the same time seeking a method of reconciling the different positions of the five nations. A sharp division developed in the first committee when Britain supported Japan and offered an amendment to the experts' report so as to provide for the division of cruisers by tonnage as well as by guns.

America Makes Reservation.

The United States promptly entered a reservation reiterating that America was for limitation by guns only. The reservation of the United States, which was supported by France, was submitted by Ambassador Gibson and Secretary of the Navy Adams. The Americans made it plain that the United States, while ready to discuss a limitation of the basis of gun power, reserved the right to build cruisers of any size within the treaty limits, in other words, eighteen cruisers with 8-inch guns and the rest of any displacement up to 10,000 tons, but with guns not in excess of six inches.

Italy, while apparently inclined to favor the American-French plan as against the Anglo-Japanese plan, went on record in favor of the global principle. Other categories were covered in the experts' recommendations, but the only sharp cleavage was in the matter of the classification of cruisers.

The committee debated the report paragraph by paragraph, finally deciding to submit the experts' report to the heads of the delegations along with the recommendations submitted at the meeting. Therefore the British proposition with the American reservation goes with the experts' findings to the committee of the whole, which meets tomorrow.

On the proposition to permit the transfer of tonnage from one category to another, the findings are suggestive in nature, except in the case of large cruisers, it was recommended that no transfer downward, from big to little cruisers, be permitted. It was indicated that the question of the percentages to be transferred from one class to another was a problem which would require more study.

Still another matter in controversy at this conference, which still is the subject of investigation by experts, is the proposition to merge cruisers of a tonnage of less than 5,000 with surface vessels of other categories of approximately the same tonnage, for instance destroyers. It is understood the experts believe the conference should give close study to this proposal as a concession to France and Japan which favor merging these smaller units in a single classification.

The United States and Britain apparently are little interested in this proposal so far as their sea forces are concerned.

The big question of the tonnage of each category, it was stated, was not included in the report and will come before Secretary Stimson, Premier MacDonald and the heads of other delegations tomorrow.

The expectation that the experts would take up today the American-French submarine regulation resolutions, which were referred to the committee by the plenary session yesterday, failed to materialize and the question of drafting a paper placing submarines on the same basis as surface vessels in the matter of sinking merchantmen in wartime probably will be called up tomorrow. Outside of writing a treaty in the form of a pledge by the signatories to "humanize" submarine warfare, the other angles of the submarine problem such as size and armament are expected to require considerable study and time.

Secretary Stimson and his American colleagues were in executive conference most of the day. Late this afternoon Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan conferred with Senator Reed. When asked what was the purpose of the conference, Senator Reed said Ambassador Matsudaira had requested secrecy for the time being.

Women Protest to President On Naval Program at Parley

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom today telegraphed President Hoover at his Long Key (Fla.) fishing base, asking him to instruct the American delegation at the London naval conference to change its announced cruiser and battleship construction policy.

"On Armistice Day," the telegram said, "the American people welcomed your courageous pledge, 'We shall reduce our naval strength in proportion to any other. Having said that it only remains for the others to say how low they will go. It cannot be too low for us.'

"At the London conference the American delegation's program for cruiser and battleship construction clearly violates your stated policy. May we respectfully urge that you require your delegation to make the Hoover reduction policy the official American policy at the conference, as expected by the millions of peace advocates who have been supporting you."

Acting Secretary of State Merely Deplores Shooting at the Piano Player.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The State Department does not intend to attempt to answer critics of the American delegation at the London naval conference or of the program it is urging there, so long as the conference is in session; but its feeling toward Congressional and other spokesmen who have announced opposition to various developments at London or who have come forward with constructive suggestions of their own was reflected today by Joseph P. Cotton, the Acting Secretary of State, who said:

"This business of shooting at the piano player is an indoor sport I deplore."

Mr. Cotton made his statement in response to newspaper inquiries and did not enlarge upon it. The use of figures of speech drawn from Wild West days is a favorite one with Mr. Cotton in declining to comment for publication upon the London conference.

Mr. Cotton said he had received no report from Secretary of State Stimson bearing upon the suggestion of the American delegation that the United States should be permitted to build a new battleship in order to attain parity with Great Britain or on the submarine proposals advanced at the plenary session yesterday.

Negotiations on Ratio Questions Are Expected to Be Slow—Philippines Under Consideration.

By CLARENCE K. STREIT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Simultaneously with the announcement by the Japanese delegation that it will publish tomorrow a statement of its general position on the naval issues before the conference, the Japanese, who since Feb. 4 have been silently pondering the tentative proposals of the United States, made their first move this afternoon in continuation of these private negotiations.

Ambassador Matsudaira, Japanese envoy to Great Britain, whose hereditary position coupled with the marriage of his daughter to the Emperor's brother makes him one of the most influential members of the Japanese delegation, called at the Ritz Hotel and conferred for a half hour with Senator Reed, who has visited Japan and is playing a rôle second only to Secretary Stimson in Japanese questions.

Discuss Our Proposals.

Mr. Matsudaira not only gave Senator Reed an advance copy of the statement which Japan will issue tomorrow but, it was explained in the Japanese delegation, "discussed much more besides." The discussion related to the recent American proposals.

It can now be said that the American delegates when they conferred with the Japanese Feb. 4 handed them a provisional table giving the figures on tonnage which Japan should get in each category. The table, which not only dealt with rates and figures for auxiliary ships but with revision of the Washington treaty on replacement and scrapping of capital ships, was explained orally to the Japanese. The situation in regard to this offer, it was admitted on both sides, had been "stationary" up to this afternoon because, according to the Americans the Japanese had "not yet replied to our offer."

Mr. Matsudaira's visit today was described in the Japanese delegation as "the real beginning of an exchange of views" between the Japanese and Americans on the bedrock questions dividing them. The Japanese carefully avoid saying that he gave the Japanese "reply" to the proposals, but allow it to be understood that Mr. Matsudaira explained to Senator Reed that Japan agreed to "some" points in the American offer but was still unable to accept other points, those being the most important ones, including cruiser and submarine ratios.

How difficult they are to solve may be gathered from a statement from an authoritative Japanese source this afternoon that "the negotiations are likely to be very slow and arduous, especially because not only complicated, technical points are involved, but very grave questions of principle." By these questions of principle it is made plain that the theoretical matters as to what Japan would receive in each category were meant. In other words, the concessions which the Americans are willing to make in tonnages for Japan still are outweighed in the Japanese view by ratios, such as 10 to 6 in big cruisers, at which she is asked eventually to crystallize her naval strength.

Closer on Capital Ship Plan.

The capital ship proposal appears to be among those on which agreement is closer. The Japanese, it is reported, while still averse to scrapping the Kongo prematurely, are willing to consider scrapping another capital ship in its place, thus getting down by 1931 to the 15 to 9 status which the Americans have proposed.

The statement which the Japanese will publish tomorrow will be similar in scope and treatment to the recent American and British statements, it is said, but is not intended as a reply to them. It will constitute, however, it was explained in the delegation, "the first official declaration of the Japanase attitude," for, it was added, "the previous statements made, not only to the public but to the American and British delegations, were only semi-official."

It will be recalled that whereas all other delegations have used occasions of the plenary sessions to put on the conference record their fundamental policies, such as parity, the Japanese so far have refrained from taking such a definite stand for their 10-to-7 ratio policy.

Hugh Wilson of the American delegation today denied reports that any proposal had been made or received officially by the American delegation on the question of neutralizing the Philippines. When asked whether such a move was likely he said he did not want to go into the future. It can be added that whether or not either the Japanese or American delegations are "officially" studying the neutralization suggestion its possibilities are being none the less considered separately by some members of each delegation.

ITALY EAGER TO SEE FRENCH STATEMENT

Delegation Believes Knowledge of Tonnage Demanded Is Big Step in Parley.

By ARNALDO CORTESI.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—With the publication tomorrow of the French statement of their position in the conference, the Italians believe the stage at last is being reached where the naval needs of the various countries can be discussed in cold figures.

Although the Italians express pleasure that the conference finally has reached this "realistic stage" they have not for the present any intention of following France's example. They hold that their claim for parity with any Continental European power exempts them from the necessity of translating their needs into figures at this stage of the proceedings. They take the position that since Italy voluntarily bound herself not to build a fleet larger than that of any other power in Europe, it is not for them to say how large the Italian fleet shall be, but for France, which by fixing the maximum limit of her own fleet, will automatically fix the maximum limit of the Italian fleet also.

Foreign Minister Dino Grandi and other members of the Italian delegation are wondering how the French statement, which it is believed, will be for between 700,000 and 800,000 tons and the Italian plea for parity will be accepted by the other powers, chiefly England. There is no evidence for the present that England has any intention of abandoning the two-power standard, which means that England will wish its navy to be as strong as those of any two navies in Europe. As the tonnage of the British Navy, according to agreements with the American delegation, would appear to work out at about 1,200,000 tons, this leads to the conclusion that if the Italian parity is accepted, France and Italy will have to be content with a maximum tonnage of 600,000 each. While this would suit the Italians admirably, it is highly unlikely that the French would accept such a sweeping cut in their naval program, at least without a considerable fight.

What the Italians fear is that England, in order not to antagonize France, may be inclined to the view that the 1,200,000 tons available for both France and Italy should be split in the proportion of, say 700,000 for France and 500,000 for Italy. What they hope is that England may prefer that the fleet of its neighbor across the English Channel be as weak as possible and may welcome the Italian parity demand with France as a convenient way of lopping 100,000 tons off the French fleet, saying the French and Italian fleets should be 600,000 tons each.

The Italians also are very hopeful that they may count on some measure of support from the American delegation, but Secretary Stimson has given no indication that he intends to take sides in what he very reasonably considers to be a private quarrel of France and Italy.

FRANCE TO OUTLINE NAVAL STAND TODAY

Tardieu Expected to Reiterate That She Seeks, Not Parity, but Adequate Tonnage.

WILLING TO CUT PROGRAM

Modifications Based on General Agreement Likely to Be Subject to Reservations, However.

By P. J. PHILIP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Premier Tardieu has promised that by tomorrow evening he will have ready for the naval arms conference and the press a statement of the French position and intentions similar in form and intent to those issued last week by the American and British delegations.

As indicated last night, this statement will be somewhat in the nature of a conditional undertaking by France to slow up her building program in the same proportion as other countries engaged in the conference.

The French Premier will base his position on known facts as to France's policy, which has been openly proclaimed during the past six years, not to accept nor seek parity with any country. He adheres to his declaration on the first day of the conference that the only criterion which France can accept is that of her own needs, although he admits that these may be qualified by the action of other countries in reducing their naval strength.

At present France has 512,000 tons in commission. The building program drawn up in 1924 provides for a fleet of 804,000,000 tons by 1942. At a normal building rate of 40,000 tons a year France would have about 720,000 tons in 1936. It is this building rate of 40,000 tons a year which the French Government is prepared to reduce during the next six years if there is frank cooperation among the other countries engaged in the conference.

The French are not by any means anxious to push on with construction, for they have abundant other uses for the money the new ships would cost. Furthermore they see an advantage in waiting to see what improved use can be made of their tonnage.

Their proposal, it is believed, has been found acceptable by the British, with whom it has been discussed, and by the Japanese, although the British probably would prefer an even slower building program than the French will agree to.

To the argument that construction should be reduced to a minimum the French, however, are able to reply that they are far from seeing why they should not build up toward their national needs as long as the United States is doing the same.

Their present program provides for a kind of two-power standard in Continental Europe, for by 1936 they would possess a fleet equal to that of Italy in the Mediterranean and Germany in the North Sea. Italy's assent to the French proposal has, of course, to be obtained at this conference with an agreement not to push ahead with building while the French lag behind. The French also make a reservation regarding Germany. If the construction of program cruisers of the Ersatz Preusen type is pushed forward by Germany, France will reserve the right to replace during the next few years her present old battleships by others of smaller tonnage and probably much greater speed, but within limits set by the Washington conference.

MANY SHIPS NEEDED TO GIVE US PARITY

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

they might put into new carriers, could build seven of the approximate size recommended by the American naval experts which with the Courageous and Glorious would give her nine carriers against America's proposed seven.

If the carrier tonnage is cut to 100,000 Britain could build with her 55,000 tons remaining, after deducting the tonnage of the Courageous and Glorious, four of the suggested new size, giving her six in all. At the same time the United States, with 35,000 available building tonnage, could build only two such craft, giving with the Saratoga and Lexington only four carriers, a disadvantage figured at 50 per cent.

It is quite apparent the Americans may suggest shortening the period of usefulness of the Saratoga and Lexington, as well as of the Courageous and Glorious, which might help the American position. It is evident other adustments are possible which, in placing the United States in a safer situation, would place carriers in a different aspect.

But there is another important item, namely, that the Washington Treaty does not limit airplane carriers of less than 10,000 tons. It is obvious this would leave the United States free to build that size as things stand. In return for American agreement to adopt a proposal to extend the limitation to embrace possible smaller carriers, America might wish to ask Britain to take some measures to adjust the airplane carrier position.

The unfortunate situation in which America approaches consideration of carriers, having only two carriers of 66,000 tons together, against six British carriers totaling 115,000 tons, calls attention to other relative disadvantages of the American navy, due to conditions for which Secretary Stimson and his colleagues cannot be blamed.

Faces Big Building Program.

Due to America's small building, she faces the prospect of having to undertake a very large construction program under the proposed London treaty in order to reach parity with Britain by 1936, even taking the most optimistic view of the cuts the British may make.

Naturally this situation reacts in a way to bring unjust criticism upon the American delegation. In a conference called by some a reduction conference, the Americans must take the position of asking for permission to build in order to adhere to the principle of parity which for the moment must be regarded as priming the American desire for reduction.

In battleships, under the proposal to reduce to fifteen each in 1931, the British capital ship fleet not only would have a slight tonnage advantage, which would be offset somewhat by America's heavier ordnance, but the average speed of the British ships is some two knots above the American average. That explains why the Americans are asking to build one more full-size battleship to even the score.

The United States has two 10,000-ton cruisers built while the British have eleven in commission, two to be completed this year and four others which lack only a few tons of the 10,000 limit. To get eighteen 10,000 tonners America must complete the six under construction and build ten more. To reach the 327,000 tons on which Secretary Stimson has agreed with Premier MacDonald, America must build about 200,000 tons.

America has 250 or more destroyers in commission. But they are not good destroyers. The United States has no flotilla leaders, of which England has sixteen. The United States has only a few new destroyers whereas Britain has not only more new ones but has twenty-five modern craft under construction. America has no destroyers under construction.

Practically all the American destroyers were built in the last days of the war on what is regarded as an unhappy fashion and practically all of them will go out of date about 1936. This means that even if destroyer tonnage is cut to 150,000 the United States must between now and 1936 build a large number to have any sort of destroyer fleet by 1936, when, theoretically, parity with England is to be reached.

America Low in Submarines.

American experts list their submarines below those of England, France or Japan despite America's larger numbers. England has sixteen submarines under construction; the United States has five. This situation means that to have actual parity with England in submarine efficiency the United States must build a good many undersea boats between now and 1936.

Taking into consideration only cruisers, destroyers and submarines, it is quite likely the London treaty arrangements will necessitate a building program by the United States in the next five years of well over $500,000,000, even if the battleship holiday proposed by President Hoover is put into effect. It is quite apparent no other nation represented here, especially Britain, will have to embark on any such construction to reach the position which will be allotted.

It is quite apparent that this situation, which causes some sarcasm to be directed toward the American delegation, is not the fault of Secretary Stimson. If the United States has a shortage now which must be remedied to achieve parity, it either is the fault of Congress in not voting building appropriations for the past ten years or the fault of the government in misjudging British activity in construction. Seeing that parity is America's guiding motive, with reduction desirable but incidental, it may as well be realized that the London conference is going to bring small direct saving to the American taxpayer in the next five years.

However, there is another way of looking at it. There is every reason to believe the conference will bring a large indirect saving. In the first place, the United States should without the London conference have to do no small part of the construction it will have to effect to reach parity under the terms to be reached here. In the second place, without the London conference and a battleship holiday the United States would face a battleship replacement program in the next five years the cost of which Secretary Stimson has reckoned at $400,000,000.

Taking this view of it, the London conference promises to make it some hundreds of million dollars cheaper for the United States to attain parity with Britain than it might have cost without the London conference. In other words, the United States must spend money but will stand to get more for it. The London conference will make parity cheaper for America.

L'Avenir Says Equality With the British Gives America Control of That Civilization.

By CARLISLE MacDONALD.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—There is general satisfaction in France over yesterday's submarine debate at the London Naval Arms Conference. The undersea arm, French opinion is convinced, has now been definitely retained as a convenient and economical adjunct to secondary navies with large responsibilities, and it is felt that the French Minister of Marine, in his able statement of his country's position, removed the negotiations from confusion and again placed the conference upon the road to reality.

Of all the comment which has appeared in the French press since the naval conference began, perhaps the most arresting, from the American standpoint, is the article in this morning's l'Avenir asserting that with the accomplishment of parity with Great Britain the United States becomes the undisputed master of the Pacific and the peoples of the Far Eastern world. The newspaper is the organ of the French steel trust and as such reflects the views of big business.

"Old Europe," the article says, "vainly struggles, but its light fades before the stupendous development of civilization in the Pacific—the New World of which the United States has made itself guardian, needing its markets for its ever-increasing production.

"Our good friends from the United States may tell us whatever they like concerning their sudden discovery of an ardent desire to possess a formidable fleet at least the equal of Great Britain's, and that such a desire, which they never had before, is due to an inspiration from heaven received by their Admiralty. We French must not admit of such a summary explanation without scrutinizing it, for if we inquire into the most likely motive for America's big navy desires, we shall find it in the statistical records of their production and foreign trade.

"Only two powers could thwart the colossal undertaking of the United States — Britain and Japan. Five years ago the certainty of war in the Pacific was admitted in Europe by every one, but the abandonment of Japan by Britain altered the problem.

"Great Britain threw up the sponge and abandoned her claim to rule the world by accepting equality with the New World. Equality suits old Uncle Sam because it spells his mastery of the Pacific. That ocean will hereafter be his and the civilization of the Pacific will be controlled by him."

Answering the question as to what is Europe's rôle in the new state of affairs, the writer says the Continental naval powers will be forced to submit to a condition in which no two European fleets will be permitted to attain the strength of Britain's fleet, while the submarine will be so restricted that it can no longer be a danger to Britain's "new secondary naval position."

31 HELD IN HAITI DISORDERS

Orators Stir Crowd After Aux Cayes Memorial Service.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Feb. 12 (AP).—Thirty-one persons were arrested here today during disorders that followed a memorial service in honor of the Haitians who were killed at Aux Cayes on Dec. 6 in a clash with a force of marines.

Today's disorders were swiftly quelled by the garde nationale.

Following a memorial mass in the cathedral, the leaders addressed a crowd of 400 in front of the cathedral speaking of the misery of the people and blaming the government, asserting that it was backed by American machine guns. The speakers expressed the hope that the Hoover commission would allow them to express their convictions free of fear of the interference of machine guns.

With disorder developing, a small detachment of the Garde Nationale dispersed the crowd, making eighteen arrests, including four speakers. After the prisoners had been transferred to a police station a second crowd gathered and thirteen arrests were made on charges of obstructing traffic and refusing to obey police orders. The trouble lasted about half an hour.

bers of the die-hard group, who wanted to know if anything except the signing of the Kellogg pact had happened to induce the government to reduce its cruiser estimate to fifty from the seventy vessels that were considered as the irreducible minimum as recently as 1927 at Geneva.

"The estimate of fifty cruisers," replied Mr. Alexander, "has been arrived at after full investigation. There have been many consequences following from the Kellogg pact signing. Fifty is the figure which will, it is believed, meet all requirements for the period of the agreement, which, it is hoped, will be reached as a result of the London naval conference. But the estimate is subject to the satisfactory outcome of the conference."

In response to requests for information concerning the strength of Britain, Japan and the United States in 1929 as compared with 1914, Mr. Alexander submitted figures showing that Britain's naval tonnage had dropped from 2,160,326 to 1,201,930, that Japan's had increased from 522,082 to 771,908 and that the tonnage of the United States had increased from 845,320 to 1,095,992. The decrease on the part of England, and the increases for Japan and the United States covered the categories of battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers, torpedo boats and submarines.

According to the Admiralty figures, Britain is the only one of the three naval powers which has decreased her navy personnel in the same fifteen-year period from 1914 to 1929. Great Britain, exclusive of the Dominions, decreased her personnel from 146,047 to 98,023. Japan increased from 50,648 to 85,000 and the United States increased from 67,258 to 114,500. The British dominions have increased their naval personnel from 5,000 to 8,000 in the same period, the figures showed.

Returning to the subject of cruisers, Commander A. R. Southby asked if any of the six British cruisers now laid up for repairs was for sale.

The First Lord said none was for sale.

Matsudaira-Stimson Talk Opens Way for Meeting of Secretary and Wakatsuki.

JAPAN SEES VIEWS IGNORED

Wants Our Delegates' Reasons for Opposing 70 Per Cent Ratio—Election a Large Factor.

By HUGH BYAS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Feb. 12.—A conversation today between Ambassador Matsudaira and Secretary Stimson prepares the way for a meeting between Mr. Stimson and former Premier Wakatsuki, at which Mr. Wakatsuki will take steps to ascertain what modifications America is prepared to consider. No instructions have been sent to Mr. Wakatsuki; nor has he transmitted any opinions whatever on the American proposal.

Dispatches from America reporting that the public was surprised at Japan's reaction against Mr. Stimson's proposals have caused genuine surprise here. Japanese officials ask how Americans could suppose that a scheme which ignored all the arguments which Japan had advanced for the last three months could be acceptable.

As the Japanese see it, the strong point in their position is that 70 per cent cannot possibly endanger the United States. Therefore, when Mr. Stimson sees Mr. Wakatsuki he probably will be asked his reasons, as distinct from reasons connected with the Anglo-American parity, why the United States objects to Japan's having 70 per cent.

A study of the American plan has convinced some officials of a possible loophole in the optional clause enabling Britain and America to duplicate each other's fleet. If the United States exercised her option by building down to Britain's fifteen 10,000-ton cruisers Japan's existing twelve 8-inch gun cruisers would be exactly 70 per cent. It is difficult to say whether the Japanese expect that America would seriously consider such a suggestion, but it would offer to Japan an ideal solution.

The press harps on the way Japan was ignored in Mr. Stimson's scheme. The Jiji declares that Japan's security was treated with contempt and her needs utterly disregarded. The Nichi Nichi agrees that Mr. Wakatsuki did not need to answer an American statement which passed over all the efforts Japan had made to explain her position. All the papers agree, however, that Mr. Stimson's proposal is but a first bid to test Japan's attitude.

The suggestion that Japan and America each build a 35,000-ton battleship was found particularly objectionable.

The Osaka Asahi says the proposal to scrap two old ships and build a new one is pure craziness. It thinks the plan reveals the power of the American "big navy" circles and calls the conference a mass of contradictions between President Hoover's and Prime Minister MacDonald's political idealism and the very practical ideas of parity held by the American Navy.

The battleship proposal, it adds, shows the American Navy is more interested in parity than in limitation. The British battleship plan is supported here as preferable to the American because, while the latter would give Japan a new Rodney, the former would have her money.

The suggestion that Japan have only 40,000 tons in submarines shares unpopularity with the battleship scheme. Even the ardent supporters of naval reduction declare that Japan should reject it at whatever cost.

An important factor is the general election, which will end Feb. 20. Even if the government were disposed to reduce its demands it could not do so at present. Concessions now would lose the election.

CHINESE IN SUBMARINE TRIP

Naval Mission in England Sees Undersea Craft in Operation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 12.—The Chinese Naval Mission, headed by Admiral Tu, which is visiting Portsmouth on the British Admiralty's invitation, today was taken to sea in a submarine and the operation of the undersea craft demonstrated to them. Admiral Martin Nasmith, V. C., head of the British submarine service, accompanied the mission on the trip. Afterward the visitors saw various types of naval aircraft at Calshot and were taken up in a seaplane for a flight from Calshot to Portsmouth.

An ordinary stocking under the microscope

SMART young things started the fashion last Summer when they wore their stockings inside out to make it appear that they weren't wearing stockings at all. And then they discovered that the reverse side of the stocking accomplished a lot of other things as well! Because its lustre was reduced it made legs appear slimmer, it had subtler color value, it looked lots sheerer, didn't show rings, even seemed to wear longer.

And then a very up-and-coming stocking concern took the young things' tip and came to the rescue with Rograin. It looks a dollar sheerer than it is. It wears a dollar longer than it looks. It smooths out the seams until they appear as little silken veins.

Rograin is the modern stocking, the smart stocking for 1930.

WARNS OF NEXT CONFLICT

Late French Premier Dwells on Failure of Wilson Ideals in Last Bitter Post-Bellum Chapter.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The first resumé of the widely discussed posthumously published book by Georges Clemenceau, "The Grandeur and Misery of a Victory," which appeared in Paris this evening, discloses the most absorbing of all thirteen chapters to be the one which relates the story of General Pershing's blunt refusal early in 1918, in the face of the utmost pressure from France's great wartime Premier, to throw his large forces of untrained American doughboys into the trenches to forestall a repetition of the disaster on the British front.

Premier Clemenceau came to the Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces and urged him in the most importunate terms to send his fresh, enthusiastic troops to replace the decimated, discouraged French poilus, then hard-pressed at all points by the German offensive. The slowness with which the new American army was organizing itself into an active fighting unit was costing the French army dearly in blood and lives, Premier Clemenceau told General Pershing. Furthermore, those American contingents which were ready for the front were coming up entirely too slowly.

Pershing Adamant in Refusal.

Despite his plea, the late Premier relates, General Pershing steadfastly refused to send "green recruits" into the thick of the most complicated modern warfare. Thus, while the American high command was taking the time it demanded for training and organization, the exhausted French forces on a vast front extending from Amiens to Ypres each hour held the fate of France in their tired hands.

This is but one of the stirring historic events recounted in the book, which is described as dramatic and arresting from beginning to end. The resumé is printed by L'Intransigeant from a dispatch sent to La Nacion of Buenos Aires.

On the pretext of defending his own policy, M. Clemenceau makes the most ruthless observations, it is said. His "ferocious and enraged pen" spares no one. In Chapter 7 he violently attacks Marshal Foch, whom he accuses of insubordination. He attacks the late Rénè Viviani for having attracted the attention of the world to the pacific tendencies of France by ordering the French Army to withdraw ten kilometers from the German front. He attacks the former President and Premier, Raymond Poincaré, repeatedly, and finally "the Legion of Politicians," whom, he asserts, tore into shreds the Treaty of Versailles.

Softens Attack on Foch.

While in the first three chapters he severely criticizes Marshal Foch for his "incomprehension" of the meaning of unity of command, he nevertheless renders homage to the heroism of the late Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies. Of Marshal Foch's strategy, however, he expresses grave doubts. Toward the end of his book, which was written after the death of the Marshal, his whole tone is changed and there is a marked softening in all his remarks regarding the great French military leader.

Referring to Parliamentary interference in the conduct of the war, M. Clemenceau is quoted as saying to Marshal Foch, "Where would you be, my poor Marshal, if I had not placed my chest between you and your judges?"

About Lloyd George, M. Clemenceau pens a eulogy full of good humor and gayety, but later he admits the former British Prime Minister to be proved an enemy of France in the years after the war.

Stern and unrelenting though he is, M. Clemenceau admits having shed copious tears on the day of the signing of the armistice. But in discussing Germany before the bar of Versailles, he refers to the Germans as still arrogant. His sixth chapter is a bitter attack on the German industrialists, aristocrats, philosophers and savants, compared with whom the French people are described as an infinitely superior race.

Devotes Chapter to Wilson.

King Albert, Balfour, Bonar Law, Colonel House, Sir Robert Cecil, Orlando, President Hoover, Sonnino, Hymani, Benes and Paderewski all are treated in the clear, sharp ironic phrases of M. Clemenceau. The tenth chapter is devoted to President Wilson, "his great philosophic flights, his shock in encountering the realities of shattered Europe, his political inexperience and, finally, the failure of his generous ideals."

The last pages of the book are given over to violent bitterness and to the disillusionment of those who struggle for a new peace and for the liberties of peoples. The book concludes with the expression of profound fears of a new war. Its final sentence, penned just before the stroke which caused M. Clemenceau's death, is a warning to the world that "within the sound of the Geneva guitar, new violences are being germinated."

Pontiff Wears Rochetto Presented by Italian State—Rulers Send Their Congratulations.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Feb. 12.—Vatican City was again beflagged today on the occasion of the eighth anniversary of the coronation of the Pope. Papal flags were also hoisted at the Papal buildings in Rome as well as at the embassies and legations accredited to the Holy See.

A large number of telegrams of congratulation were received by the Pontiff from sovereigns and chiefs of States, including one from King Victor Emmanuel.

A solemn service was held in the Sistine Chapel attended by the Pope and a large number of Cardinals and high Church dignitaries. According to custom, mass was celebrated by the first Cardinal created by the reigning Pontiff. In a special tribune was King Gustaf of Sweden, while other tribunes were occupied by members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican, wearing full uniform, the Knights of Malta and members of the Roman aristocracy.

On the way to the Sistine Chapel, the Pope, who was borne on the sedia gestatoria, was warmly applauded by hundreds of persons who filled the adjoining halls.

After mass the Pope received the homage of the Cardinals.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12 (AP).—At the solemn high mass in the Sistine Chapel the Pope wore the rochetto of rich lace which the Italian Government presented to him yesterday, with a great white and gold mantle over all.

Near the end of the service the Pope imparted the apostolic benediction. It had been believed he would possibly bless the city and the world from the balcony in front of St. Peter's, but at the last moment he decided to withhold this for another occasion, possibly after the expiatory mass on March 19.

A Te Deum and thanksgiving service were sung this afternoon at St. Anne's Church in Vatican City, and the new building of the Pia Pontificia School was blessed in honor of the anniversary of the coronation.

On Friday the Noble Guard will celebrate with a reception in its quarters.

Briton Admits He Left Dummy Device in Museum to Create a Story.

LONDON, Feb. 12 (AP).—A fine of £20 or two months' imprisonment was the sentence imposed today upon Frank Biggs, 21-year-old clerk who placed a "bomb" in the India Room of the British Museum ten days ago in an attempt to manufacture a sensational newspaper story and so forward his journalistic ambitions.

The bomb, it was brought out, was virtually a dud—a tobacco tin filled with putty, except for two and one-half ounces of some explosive, apparently taken from fireworks.

Biggs, who acted as his own counsel, declared he had no intention of committing an outrage, but simply desired to forward his plan to become a newspaper man. He pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing ammunition without a certificate. He was given two weeks in which to find the money to pay the fine.

One Bolshevik Is Seized and Ex-Official Arrested.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, Feb. 12.—Under cover of a shooting affray between Russian and Rumanan frontier guards, a number of Soviet couriers tried to enter Rumanian territory yesterday near Kishineff. They were detected, however, and forced to recross the river in boats under sharp fire from the Rumanian outposts.

One courier, named Wonghetich, did land, only to be arrested. A large sum in dollars and many documents were found on him, as a result of which a high police official was arrested in Bucharest. He had been prefect in Bessarabia under the Bratianu administration and now is accused of having rendered valuable service to the Soviet spy system.

HINDENBURG GREETS SACKETT AS ENVOY

WORLD PEACE MUTUAL AIM

German President Says Our Lofty Ideal Will Find No Warmer Appreciation Than There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—Former Senator Frederic Mosley Sackett of Kentucky formally assumed the office of American Ambassador to Germany at noon today, succeeding Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, when he presented his letters of credence to President Von Hindenburg. He was warmly welcomed by the President of the Reich, who cordially reciprocated President Hoover's message of greeting to the German people which Ambassador Sackett conveyed to President Hindenburg.

In presenting his credentials, Mr. Sackett said: "My instructions look forward to increasing friendly intercourse between Germany and the United States. I beg your Excellency to believe I shall devote every effort to this agreeable duty. I shall endeavor in every official and personal way to fortify the sincere and mutual understanding which happily unites our two countries. The similarity of aims and ideals of the two republics of Germany and the United States, which already has afforded fruitful hope for cooperation in the field of international conciliation, is a source of great satisfaction to my government and to the American people and will constitute the inspiration of my mission.

Lauds German Achievement.

"I have come to your Excellency with high esteem for your distinguished person, which typifies the high patriotism that is embodied in the German character. I bring with me a profound admiration for the great achievement of the German people in the laborious tasks which have confronted them. At the same time I have a sincere conviction that German fortitude and industry will solve the problems of the present and of the future and constitute a guarantee of full faith and future success.

"May I express the aspiration, your excellency, that I, like my distinguished predecessor, may have the privilege of winning your esteem and confidence."

In his reply President Hindenburg made a feeling reference to Ambassador Schurman's services in the cause of promoting the relations of the two countries and of the numerous friendships he had made in the course of his term of office.

"I warmly welcome your assurances," President Hindenburg told Ambassador Sackett, "that it shall be your constant endeavor to further promote the old and excellent relations obtaining between Germany and the United States and to seek to bring about a still happier understanding between both peoples, a task to which your predecessor devoted himself with such distinguished success. You may rest assured that both I and the government of the Reich shall do all within our powers to facilitate your efforts.

Terms World Peace a Mutual Aim.

"Your Excellency has been pleased to make reference to the concurring endeavors of both countries in behalf of international understanding and reconciliation. The lofty aim of a true world peace which is so clearly evident in the pronouncements of your President will nowhere find more sincere appreciation than among the German people. Your cordial recognition of what German energy and German industriousness have accomplished in the face of the greatest difficulties will find grateful appreciation in Germany. Such recognition, however, must ever recall the generous measure of support and interest accorded Germany by the United States in the times of her most pressing need.

"In the name of the German Reich I greet you most heartily."

President Hindenburg and Ambassador Sackett chatted informally at the conclusion of the ceremonies. As both are keenly interested in horses, it is surmised, although not officially verified, that both soon discovered a point of contact which will contribute a congenial element to their future conversations.

Dr. Julius Curtius, the German Foreign Minister, and Under-Secretary von Schubert were present at today's ceremonies. The entire American Embassy staff accompanied Mr. Sackett.

Krjijanofsky Lays Plots Among Engineers to Man at Ukraine Plant.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—G. M. Krjijanofsky, chief of the entire State Planning Department, writes to the Pravda:

"An Englishman named Glass is the prime instigator of all the treacherous sabotage plots among engineers which are held to have done incalculable harm to the Soviet industry."

Mr. Glass belonged to the New Russia Company, holding the metallurgical concession founded in the Ukraine sixty years ago by John Hughes, a blacksmith's son from Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, and an uncle of the American Secretary of Labor, James J. Davis. On the steppes around his furnaces and mills John Hughes built up a town of 30,000 population under the concession contract which called for the building of hospitals and dwellings.

This foundry town until the revolution bore his name, Usekfa (Hughes-Ekfa). The town's name is now changed, but the railroad station is still "Usevo" (Hughes-Evo).

MOSCOW, Feb. 12 (AP).—To relieve the meat crisis, today's Izvestia, speaking for the government, urged the formation of great State and collective cattle ranches after the manner of the present State collective farms.

Such ranches, the Izvestia said, would at the end of five years produce 2,300,000 tons of meat, which would fulfill the needs of the entire population.

Pointing out that the present lack of fodder is responsible in large measure for the peasants killing their cattle, the Izvestia says the government already has provided 600,000 tons of concentrated fodder as an emergency measure to relieve the situation.

"The Soviet must at the end of the five-year plan produce 750,000,000 cans of preserved meat and 400,000 tons of sausages," added the paper.

Romanones Is Also in Capital—King Alfonso Reinstates Artillery Officers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—By accepting a friend's offer of a sumptuous furnished apartment on the Left Bank, General Primo de Rivera managed all day today to elude the would-be interviewers he is so anxious to avoid during his stay in Paris.

Accompanied only by his secretary, he arrived here yesterday morning from Barcelona, and it was reported last night he had registered at a hotel in the Place Vendôme. In reality, however, the former Dictator of Spain went directly to the Faubourg St. Germain to an apartment which one of his friends happened not to be occupying for the moment.

This morning General Primo de Rivera politely declined the French Sûreté Générale's offer of secret service agents to guard his person during his sojourn here. At Primo de Rivera's urgent request, the police agreed not to disclose his address to newspaper men, after he had explained he had come to Paris for quiet and a much-needed rest.

The General told friends he would remain in the French capital for at least two weeks.

The belief persists that Primo de Rivera is really here on a political mission. This view is strongly supported by the fact that County Romanones, another former Premier of Spain, is also in Paris now.

End of Censorship Pressed.

MADRID, Feb. 12 (AP).—Impatient because the Berenguer Cabinet still retains the censorship on domestic newspapers imposed by General Primo de Rivera, Franços Rodriguez, president of the Spanish Press Association, asked the Premier today when the promise of a free press would be fulfilled. General Berenguer assured him the censorship would be lifted gradually, as he had said when he took office, but he declared the government did not believe the time was yet ripe.

Barcelona Students Clash.

BARCELONA, Feb. 12 (AP).—Free-for-all street fights between university students and partisans of Primo de Rivera caused injuries to several persons before daylight this morning.

Late tonight, as students were returning from a frolic, they were hooted by supporters of Primo de Rivera and fighting with fists, clubs and stones followed. The police restored order.

SOVIET LAWS CURB CHURCH ACTIVITIES

Since 1918 the Kremlin Has Increasingly Restricted the Sphere of Religion.

PROPERTY RIGHTS REVOKED

Then One Privilege After Another Was Withdrawn, Though Rykof Denies Persecution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, Feb. 12.—Soviet Premier Rykof's widely published denial of the existence of religious persecution in Russia is belied by Soviet legislation.

On Jan. 23, 1918, a decree was issued denying to any church or religious institution rights of ownership and rights as a juridical person. Paragraph 65 of the first Constitution deprives ministers of religion of all political rights.

The Commissariat of Justice issued on Aug. 24, 1918, a circular forbidding churches to maintain charitable organizations, and another circular on March 3, 1919, forbade clergymen to occupy any posts in the Soviet schools.

The Council of People's Commissars published in Izvestia on Feb. 2, 1921, a law forbidding priests, rabbis, pastors and mullahs to work in any capacity in Soviet rural establishments. On June 13, 1921, the Soviet Government decreed the general prohibition of the teaching of religion to any person under 18.

More important than these is the decree of April 8, 1929, published in Izvestia on April 26 and the two following days, altering the Constitution of the Russian-Socialist Federal Soviet Republic expressly to combat religion. The decree deletes religion from the Constitution as a subject which may be propagated but states that anti-religious propaganda must be allowed.

Alterations to the Constitution forbid religious bodies or groups to render material help to any of their members or hold classes for the teaching of religion, literature, needlework or any other subjects, and also forbids all religious ceremonies on any private or public premises except to licensed churches which must be considered as leased from the State. Priests' vestments are declared State property.

The decree introduces many restrictions on priests, who are not allowed to officiate outside of the city or village where they are domiciled or in more than one church in that place.

Apart from these laws it may be noted that the Soviet authorities constantly ignore their own laws. Capital punishment, for example, was formally and legally abolished more than two years ago, except for offenses threatening the State's security, but reports of executions for minor offenses are published daily in the Soviet Press.

There is little comment in Russia on the Pope's denunciation, which apparently has not been published by the Russian press.

KING PRAISES CHURCH PLAN

Archbishop of Canterbury Reads Message at Convocation.

LONDON, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—A message from the King, expressing the hope that continued exercise of patience and forbearance would make it possible to find a solution for the grave and perplexing problem associated with revision of the forms of public worship, was read by the Archbishop of Canterbury at the Canterbury Convocation today.

"I fervently join in your prayer for the increase of the influence of religion by renewal of faith and the strengthening of the spiritual consciousness of the members of the Church," his Majesty's message added. "The progress being made in promotion of church unity is very gratifying and I trust the Lambeth conference [of Bishops] will contribute a further advance."

At the York Convocation the Archbishop of York referred also to questions of church discipline and the problem of relations between the Church and State. He declared that the Bishops at no time had the slightest intention of diminishing the doctrinal comprehensiveness of the Church, though the place of discipline in the Church should be very subordinate.

"As Christian men here and now, as Christian Bishops, we cannot keep silent."

Resolution of Protest Adopted.

LONDON, Feb. 12 (AP).—The upper house of the Convocation of Canterbury unanimously adopted a resolution, moved by the Archbishop of Canterbury and seconded by the Bishop of London, reading:

"That the house records its indignant protest against the persecution of all who profess any form of religion in Russia, offers its most deep and heartfelt sympathy to those suffering through this persecution, calls upon all members of the church to unite in prayer to God in their behalf, and expresses its conviction that if the Soviet Government desires satisfactory relations with this country to be maintained it must observe the principles of just and humane civilization."

Cardinal Bourne at Hatfield said that by prayer and action Catholics must do their best to remedy the position of Christians in Russia.

"Catholics must not think," said the Cardinal, "that they are interfering with national affairs of another nation by so doing. It is not so, because they know only too well that those at the foot of things in Russia are determined to do the same in every country of the world."

POLISH SEJM PASSES BUDGET AFTER DEBATE

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Feb. 12.—The Sejm voted the budget tonight by an unexpectedly large margin.

The majority of the government bloc and the Left opposition groups, with the Jewish group and Right Wing opposition bloc responsible for the overthrow of the Switalski Cabinet, bore all the burden of the budget work throughout the whole debate, deciding eventually to give the country a budget although disapproving of the present régime as only half way from the "colonel" government, hostile to Parliament and a real democratic form.

The Sejn's lobbies were full of rumors that the government bloc might even vote against the budget, from which the Opposition had removed several millions of secret funds for the War Minister and dictator, Marshal Pilsudski, and Foreign Minister Zaleski, but leaders of that bloc satisfied themselves by publishing a resolution through a news agency that Deputies and Senators of the non-party bloc, in cooperation with the government, declared they renounced all immunity privileges granted them under the existing constitution.

The declaration, while quite meaningless, was directed against opposition Deputies said to be abusing their parliamentary privileges.

The budget figures follow: Total revenue, 3,058,000,000 zloty ($344,025,000); expenditure, 2,947,000,000 ($336,537,500); surplus, 111,000,000 ($12,487,500).

ORTIZ RUBIO PLANS TO START WORK SOON

Mexican President Likely to Be at Desk Monday—Thanks Us for Interest.

PLOT TRAIL LEADS TO TEXAS

Residents of San Antonio Implicated by New Evidence Found—More Arrests in Mexico.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—President Pascual Ortiz Rubio probably will have recovered sufficiently from the wound he received from the shots of an assassin a week ago, just after his inauguration, for him to take up his duties at the Presidential office Monday.

Further arrests are announced in connection with the police and military efforts to ascertain the reasons why the youth, Daniel Flores, should have wanted to kill Señor Ortiz Rubio. Results of the investigations have not yet been revealed, but an official statement today said that in the near future the details would be made known.

Rumors were afloat last night that an attempt had been made on former President Portes Gil. They were completely unfounded, and suggestions that the Flores plot was anything more than an isolated incident are discounted.

San Antonians Implicated.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12 (AP).—Evidence that persons living in San Antonio, Texas, were involved in or knew about the plot against the life of President Ortiz Rubio was reported today in a dispatch to La Prensa from San Luis Potosi to have been unearthed there.

The dispatch said that detectives had arrested four more persons in San Luis Potosi. Among their possessions, it was stated, were found numerous addresses and telephone numbers of persons living in San Antonio, which, with other evidence, indicated implication.

Five persons also have been arrested in Jalapa, in the State of Vera Cruz, in connection with the investigation.

President Ortiz Rubio was sufficiently recovered this afternoon to leave his bed and attend to several business affairs at his home.

Congratulations on his escape from death continue to reach the President. They have come from the heads of European as well as American nations and also from many other people in all walks of life. The President has been much touched by this widespread interest in his safety, and among other acknowledgments today extended thanks to the entire United States by means of a special message addressed to The Associated Press. It said:

"I am most grateful for the courtesy shown me by The Associated Press in spreading over all the American Union the news transmitted from this capital regarding the attack of which I was recently a victim and in connection with the condition of my health.

"The interest which this news has awakened among all elements of your country call for my sincere gratitude, and I wish to have this feeling expressed through The Associated Press, which I also wish to have express my sincere gratitude and very affectionate regard to the American people."

Flores is liable to the death sentence and may be executed for his crime.

The Secretary of the Interior, Emilio Portes Gil, under whose direction as Provisional President the new penal code abolishing the death sentence for common crimes was drawn up, made this clear in a statement to the press today.

600 Reds Force Workers From Opel Auto Plant; Police Rout Them and Hold Two Legislators

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RUESSELHEIM, Germany, Feb. 12.—Communists at the Opel works today created disturbances that ended only when the police seized the leaders.

The firm had dismissed three members of the employes' council for misusing their office. This the Communists used as a pretext for calling a meeting of all the employes for today. About 600 or 700 men attended, while 5,500 remained at work. Meanwhile strange persons and employes dismissed some time ago had climbed the walls and entered the factory buildings by force. Communist members of the Prussian Diet, Mueller from rankfurt-am-Main and Stumpf of Mayence, were lifted over the main portal by crowds, and from that moment the trouble assumed a dangerous aspect.

Gangs of strikers went through various departments, compelling the men working to down tools, and some machines were stopped or injured. Finally the police were compelled to place strong detachments at each factory door. The firm promised every loyal man his wages for the day if he remained at his post, but owing to some acts of sabotage work could not be resumed.

The demonstrations continued late into the afternoon. Finally the police arrested six persons, among them Mueller and Sumpf.

RUESSELSHEIM, Feb. 12 (AP).—Despite denial by officials of the Opel-General Motors Works here of Communist disorders in their plant, the Hessian Government today announced that 200 Communists from Frankfurt, augmented by 400 Communists among the Opel workers, had forced other workers from their machines in the plant and attempted to stop the machinery and empty the boilers.

The Prussian police closed the frontier between Wiesbaden and Frankfurt, and said the Opel works would be closed to all outsiders, with the workmen inside subjected to strict control.

Five Friends Take Him From Police in Hospital.

ROSARIO, Argentina, Feb. 12 (AP).—José Romano, a militant anarchist, who was severely wounded by the explosion of a bomb which the police say he had dropped in a street car in the last street railway strike, was rescued by five armed men today who invaded the hospital where he was undergoing treatment.

One of the men was armed with a carbine and the others with revolvers. They rushed into the hospital, covered three policemen who were guarding Romano and carried him from his bed to a waiting automobile. There was no trace of the fugitives late tonight.

HOLDS YOUNG PLAN IS A GAIN FOR REICH

Dernburg Tells Reichstag It Will Interest Powers in Preparing Markets for Loans.

WIRTH DEFENDS ACCORD

Lauds Agreement With America—Italians Approve Report on Hague Conference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—At the opening of the second day's debate on the Young plan in the Reichstag, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg of the Democratic party declared the Young plan was a big advance on the Dawes plan and all the preceding agreements.

He stressed the importance of the removal of the obstacles which Article 248 put in Germany's way should she desire to contract foreign loans. With the new arrangement, Dr. Dernburg added, the creditors would be interested in preparing markets for German loans and providing low rates of interest.

After describing the disastrous results a Dawes plan crisis would have had for Germany, he said the Young plan represented a compromise. Germany's opponents also carried heavy burdens for the welfare of the war victims and for international loans. The Young plan contained a number of provisions which included the possibility of revision if difficulties should later develop. With those provisions Germany would be able to sign the Young plan without suffering any loss of honor.

Professor Hoetzsch, Nationalist secessionist, explained why he felt forced to oppose the Young plan, although in 1924 he voted for the Dawes plan. The latter plan, he said, was a provisionary arrangement, but the Young plan was a definite settlement. By linking reparations with allied debts, Germany would become an indirect debtor to the United States, a situation which France had been seeking for years.

Dr. Joseph Wirth, Minister of Occupied Territories, defended The Hague agreement and declared the Young plan definitely abolished sanctions.

Dr. Wirth Trusts Us.

BERLIN, Feb. 12 (AP).—The second day's Reichstag debate on the Young plan brought Dr. Joseph Wirth, Minister of the Occupied Territories, to the rostrum with a plea for acceptance of the plan.

"We finally agreed to the Young plan in the confident hope that in America too there would some time be a race of men who would not merely want to squeeze out of Germany and Europe everything possible, but who would let moral principles count," he said.

Dr. Wirth expressed great satisfaction that the United States in her liquidation agreement accepted Germany's word as a guarantee of her faith.

AMERICAN WINS PRAISE IN DRAMA AT OXFORD

Brewster Morgan, Rhodes Scholar, Is Hailed as Bold Producer in Presentation of "Macbeth."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OXFORD, Feb. 11.—New laurels as a theatrical producer were won last night by Brewster Morgan, the 24-year-old Kansas City Rhodes scholar, when the Oxford University Dramatic Society presented his version of Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Mr. Morgan, who is the first American president in the long history of the dramatic society, is hailed as a bold and original producer, who has produced "Macbeth" without extravagance and with deep understanding.

Among his innovations is bringing into sight the vision seen by Macbeth at the empty banqueting table. The part of Lady Macbeth was played by Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies, whom Mr. Morgan selected.

Mr. Morgan achieved something of a reputation here last year when he produced "Othello." It was the first time in the society's history that the work had not been in professional hands.

London saw his work last month when he produced an early play by the poet laureaute, Dr. Robert Bridges, entitled "The Humors of the Court." He may remain in Europe after finishing his course at Oxford next Summer, as he is writing a biography of Prince Metternich and plans to collect further material in Vienna.

MORGAN LIBRARY SILENT ON 'EROTICA'

ERNST EXPLAINS REMARKS

Attorney Says His Assertion at Albany Aimed to Show Irony of Vice Society's Activities.

Officials of the Morgan Library refused to take notice yesterday of assertions made on Tuesday at Albany by Morris L. Ernst that it possessed "a good collection of erotica." Mr. Ernst appeared as attorney for the Vanguard Press and New York book dealers at a public hearing regarding a new book bill before the Assembly Codes Committee. All comment was refused at the library yesterday.

Mr. Ernst denied last night, when asked the source of his information regarding the contents of the Morgan Library, that he had said, as quoted by the press accounts of yesterday, that the Morgan library possessed "the best library of erotica in America." He had said merely that it was a good collection, he explained here last night, and obtained his information from some one whom he had asked to visit the library and look at the books.

Interest in Erotica Denied.

In the book field here yesterday strong denial was made from an authoritative source that the late J. Pierpont Morgan was interested in erotic literature. He bought many editions of the great works of literature of all times and countries, such as all large libraries possess and which have been attacked at times because of their breadth of treatment, "but it is hardly fair to term the classics erotica," it was declared.

The Rev. Dr. Anson P. Atterbury, president of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, of which the late Mr. Morgan was one of the founders, denied last night that Mr. Morgan collected erotica.

"Mr. Morgan was a great collector in many fields of literature," said Dr. Atterbury. "He liked the rare and curious in old books, but I am certain that he did not collect erotica."

Ernst Sees "Irony."

Mr. Ernst explained last night that he had not intended by his remarks at Albany to infer that Mr. Morgan had bought books primarily because of erotic references.

"I meant merely to point out the irony of the fact that Mr. Morgan bought and the Morgan Library now possesses many copies of various classics which the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, an organization which Mr. Morgan sponsored, has at times attempted to suppress," said Mr. Ernst. "The Morgan Library has eighteen copies of one classic which the vice society has tried to suppress and says is not fit even for adults to possess.

"I do not mean in any way to find fault with the Morgan Library. I think it is a great institution, and I do not consider obscene the classics which it possesses. But the ironical fact cannot be evaded that the vice society attempts to stop the sale of volumes which this library owns. There was no law restricting the publication of obscene matter here until about 1870. It is a question in my mind whether the law has not made the situation worse instead of having improved it."

GUARD HOMES OF RUSSIANS.

Paris Police Act on Threats Against Families of Koutiepoff Followers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—Reports of an attempt to kidnap the 8-year-old child of a former Russian noble family, followers of General Koutiepoff, tonight led the French police to take measures to protect several members of the White Russian colony. Among them is Vladimir, son of the Grand Duke Cyril, who is at St. Briacin in Brittany.

The White Russian leaders here stated they had received a warning from Moscow that the boy had been marked by the Cheka in order to prevent his succeeding his father as leader of the Russian exiles.

Porto Rican Deadlock Continues.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rica, Feb. 12.—The fifth ballot for president of the island Senate was cast late today, but showed no change in the deadlock. Luis Sanchez Morales receiving eight Alianza votes and Santiago Iglesias eight coalition votes, while Antonio R. Barcelo, the resigned president, and two supporters, voting blank, held the balance of power.

20 Fishing Vessels Sink in Aegean.

ATHENS, Feb. 12.—A storm raging since yesterday in the Aegean Sea already has sunk twenty fishing vessels. The Turkish steamer Basri went down near Mytilene. The Greek steamer Agios Nicolai II was rammed by an American vessel and badly damaged. A large number of other ships are missing and all traffic suspended.

GERMANS AWARDED 15% ON INSURANCE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The German pre-war holders of policies in the New York Life Insurance Company today were awarded 15 per cent revaluation based on the old German gold mark on their claims against the American company by the Senate of the German Official Insurance Department. The total amount of their claims is estimated at 100,000,000 marks (about $24,000,000), on which the American company will now pay about $3,500,000.

The settlement reached today, it was learned, has the approval of the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance Company and the Superintendent of Insurance for the State of New York. It is on a par with the settlement made by German companies after the inflation and is said to meet requirements of the revaluations laws applying in such cases.

The German attorneys conducting the case against the New York Life Insurance Company announced today that further litigation in an attempt to obtain 25 to 40 per cent of the German claims would be initiated in New York. Today's award is viewed as a partial victory, in that the 15 per cent verdict is considerably higher than the amount first proposed by the New York Life Insurance Company.

The claims of the pre-war holders of policies in the New York Mutual and the Equitable Life Insurance Companies have not yet figured in the litigation, as it has not been decided whether they come under the German laws. The Guardian Life Insurance Company, formerly the Germania, is reported to have paid 18 per cent on its German claims and probably will increase that percentage, as the company is said to have sufficient assets in Germany to meet its revaluation claims.

Thomas Buckner, vice president of the New York Life Insurance Company, who represented that company in the present litigation, today said he considered the award of the Senate of the German insurance department to represent a fair settlement and one commensurate with that imposed on the German companies under the Reich's revaluation laws.

Ex-Senator Johnson Gravely Ill.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—The condition of Judge Charles F. Mrs. Henry Abbott of Waterville, Me., a daughter, has arrived here. Mr. Johnson will be 71 on Friday.

DEFERS SEVIER INQUEST.

Court Action by Shainwald Holds Up Honolulu Autopsy.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONOLULU, Feb. 12.—Court action taken by Ralph Shainwald, brother of the late Mrs. Grenville Sevier, postponed until Tuesday the inquest and autopsy scheduled for this morning as part of the investigation the brother is making here into the causes of the death of his sister at the Tripler General Hospital on Aug. 27, 1928.

Mr. Shainwald, in a petition for an injunction restraining the county officials from conducting an inquiry, demanded that he be permitted to attend the autopsy as an expert chemist.

Counsel for Colonel Sevier, in a letter to Judge A. E. Steadman, before whom the injunction plea was placed, protested the presence of Mr. Shainwald at the autopsy, saying the findings at the first post-mortem negatived the possibility of death from anything but natural causes and that Colonel Sevier's consent to the second autopsy was granted upon the express understanding that the coroner and police surgeon would conduct the proceedings, with no representative of Colonel Sevier or Mr. Shainwald present.

BANDITS FIRE ON SHIPS.

Our Consul General at Hankow Protests to Chinese Officials.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The State Department was advised today by Frank P. Lockhart, American Consul General at Hankow, that last week three American vessels—the Standard Oil Company lighter No. 2, the Meiming and the Yangtze Rapid Company lighter No. 2—were fired on by Chinese bandits near Temple Hill, 253 miles above Hankow. There were no casualties.

Mr. Lockhart has protested to the military authorities and requested that steps be taken to afford American vessels adequate protection.

STABS WIFE TO DEATH, THEN LEAPS 5 STORIES

Man Leaves Note Asking Father to Care for Child—Couple Had Quarreled.

After killing his wife by stabbing her nine times with a bread knife, Victor Mahina, 28 years old, a Porto Rican, jumped out the window of his flat at 62 East 115th Street, about 8:30 o'clock last night, plunging five stories to the ground and suffering injuries from which he died three hours later in Harlem Hospital.

Mrs. Steven Brown, a neighbor, told the police that the couple, who had a 2-year-old child, had had a violent quarrel shortly after the husband returned from his work. The quarrel lasted for about fifteen minutes, she said.

After the man's body was found on the street and taken to the hospital, Patrolman Bernard Rogers entered the apartment by breaking down the door. In a bedroom he found the body of the woman, who was 20 years old. On the kitchen table was a note that the husband had written to his father, Manny Mahina of 1,116 Madison Avenue, requesting him to take care of their child.

ALUMNI WORLD OVER JOIN COLUMBIA FETE

CITES UNIVERSITIES' POWER

5,000 REVISIT THE CAMPUS

Ex-Dean Keppel Discusses Adult Education as Post-War Concept —Dinner Caps Festivities.

Thousands of Columbia University graduates scattered over the face of the world, from New York to Shanghai and even on shipboard far off in the Arabian Sea, were united by radio, cable, telegraph and talking picture last night in one gigantic alumni meeting.

The nucleus of this meeting, the culmination of the twenty-third annual Alumni Day, was on Morningside Heights, where President Nicholas Murray Butler and Professor John Erskine spoke at a dinner attended by 600 of the alumni in John Jay Hall.

In forty-nine other cities in all parts of the United States, in Paris, London, Manila, Havana, Shanghai and Mexico City, and on the liner Franconia nearing Bombay, other groups of Columbia men held simultaneous meetings. Where possible they listened in to the radio broadcast of President Butler's words. Where this could not be done, the outlying Columbia clubs were linked to the New York dinner by telegraph and cable through a special Western Union telegraph and cable office installed near the dining room. Alumni officials estimated last night that 20,000 of Columbia's 30,000 listed alumni thus participated.

Talks on University and Nation.

President Butler spoke on "The University and the Nation" and was followed by Professor Erskine, author, who spoke in light vein on "Inconveniences of an Education."

The broadcast of this "Round-the-world Columbia night," the first of its sort, went out over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Company. It was carried locally by station WJZ and rebroadcast by stations KDKA, Pittsburgh; WHAM, Rochester; KWK, St. Louis; WCKY, Covington, Ky., and WREN, Kansas City.

Through the agency of the talking motion picture President Butler appeared visually as well as audibly before the Columbia Club of Los Angeles. The club met in a specially constructed set on a motion picture lot in Hollywood and watched and heard a talking movie of an address made recently by Dr. Butler in New York.

Throughout the evening cable and telegraph messages were received from distant Columbia alumni meetings and thrown on a screen for the diners here to read.

The dinner also gave occasion for the first appearance of the new football coach, Lou Little, before the alumni, and he was enthusiastically cheered.

Cites Power of Intelligence.

"The great universities of the world," said Dr. Butler, "have more power than any government—more power than armies and forts and ships. The great power in the world is the power of organized intelligence and that power rests in the universities."

Dr. Butler referred to the part played in history by the other great universities of the world and said of Columbia, "Our university on Morningside Heights goes on its way with increasing confidence that is demonstrating its place in American life."

"Do we realize," he said, "what it means to a great modern democracy to have a power house of character and knowledge comparable to this and yet a power house where the individual is cared for as he is in our university?

"We Americans are much too apt to confine ourselves to dwelling too much on the political, economic and financial aspects of our modern life. Mind and character are more extraordinary still."

Professor Erskine, who preceded Dr. Butler, said: "Education is a conquest of nature involving great effort and some distress." He stressed that the active life is not at all the intellectual life and said there was a great tendency to substitute activity for thinking.

"It is easier to act, even to act heroically, than it is to sit down and have an idea," he declared.

5,000 Return to Campus.

Last night's dinner crowned a day's program in which more than 5,000 alumni, according to university officials, revisited the old halls, met in luncheons and other social gatherings, listened to addresses and sat again at the feet of professors in classrooms and heard new college courses outlined to them. Scores of them brought their wives and many of the older alumni were accompanied also by sons and daughters.

Classes were being held as usual and former students and future students brushed elbows in the halls and elevators with the undergraduates of the present.

The principal meeting in the afternoon was in the McMillin Academic Theatre, where 1,000 alumni listened to addresses from leaders in their own ranks.

Dr. Frederick Paul Keppel, former dean of Columbia College and now president of the Carnegie Corporation, told his fellow alumni of the post-war growth of adult education and of the part which Columbia graduates were taking in the movement.

"Adult education," said Dr. Keppel, "is a new concept. A dozen years ago education was regarded as something you got in youth, like the measles, and from which afterward you were immune. For a community to concern itself, as many are doing now, with providing opportunity for the individual to go on is very new, and so is the realization that education is a life-long process."

Says System Arose After War.

Adult education arose in this country after the war, said Dr. Keppel, partly as a result of the "A. E. F. University" conducted by the American army in Europe, and partly as a result of the Americanization program which arose from the post-war bolshevism alarm. The Americanization program was none too successful, said Dr. Keppel, because "nothing can last very long in which you try to fuse propaganda and education."

The most interesting development, said Dr. Keppel, was in adult education for purely cultural purposes, "the education a man takes on his own initiative, in his own leisure time, not for profit or for academic credit, but for the fun of it."

Gano Dunn, an internationally known electrical engineer and a trustee as well as an alumnus of Columbia, described the relationship and the distinction between science and engineering.

Dr. J. H. McGregor, Professor of Zoology at Columbia, described the expedition in equatorial Africa from which he recently returned in company with Dr. Henry C. Raven of the American Museum of Natural History and other scientists. Dr. McGregor told of the hunt for gorillas, which were brought to this country last month for a study of comparative anatomy, and described the habits of these animals. The research of recent years, said Dr. McGregor, has indicated that the gorilla and chimpanzee have much more resemblance structurally to man than they have to monkeys.

DENIES INDUSTRY WARS WITH LABOR

CITES ACTUAL POLICIES

The widely held idea that the difficulties between the managements of industries and their employes are the result of a conflict between capital and labor was attacked by Sam A. Lewisohn, banker, officer in many great corporations and an authority on labor conditions, in an address yesterday afternoon to alumni and students of the School of Business at Columbia University.

"The generally prevailing idea that labor policies of corporations are controlled by boards of directors, by absentee stockholders or by Wall Street bankers is in large part erroneous," said Mr. Lewisohn.

"Many instances can be given of corporations controlled by the same interests which have entirely different and sometimes diametrically opposite labor policies.

Problems of Local Executives.

"As a matter of fact, as it works out, the handling of labor relations is left largely in the hands of operating executives in the local plants. For that matter, as you all know, in our largest corporations there is a general tendency for decentralization. The operating problems generally are left to local production executives. Of course this is the only sound method if big business is to be a success.

"It has often happened that efforts of more forward looking directors or banking interests to promote effective, sound and harmonious labor relations have been delayed and nullified by lack of understanding and cooperation of the operating or local manager. Local managers with a lack of background, who have no grasp of the fundamental politics of the situation, in the best sense of that term, make a lot of trouble for a company where the directors and major executives at home are trying to persuade them to take a broad point of view.

"A director is almost helpless to institute a forward-looking labor policy unless those in active charge are anxious to do so and understand how to do so.

Scouts a Popular Idea.

"There is another popular prevailing idea that is also erroneous, and that is that all the differences and difficulties arising between employer and employe are due to the conflict between two great symbols—capital and labor.

"If the whole problem were the problem of capital and labor, we would not find managerial problems in a situation where no ordinary capital-labor relations could possibly exist. For example, in Red Cross societies, in consumers' cooperative organizations, such as in England, and in government business offices, such as the postoffice, in all of which organizations we find that very often just as much dissatisfaction exists among the employes as in so-called capitalistic organizations.

"The point is, of course, that labor problems are not wholly economic. They are also administrative. I have always felt that the economists have been allowed too long to pre-empt the field of labor relations and make it their own. The whole tendency has been to treat the labor problem as if it were only a problem of bargaining as to wages—as if it were entirely a problem of how the national income was to be divided."

BRITISH PICK FIFTEEN FOR ECONOMIC COUNCIL

With Five Ministers and Expert Staff, They Will Form Board MacDonald Promised.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Fifteen leading economists and business men of all parties will be recruited by the MacDonald Government for the new Economic Advisory Council, the formation of which the Premier announced in the House of Commons last month.

Together with five Cabinet Ministers and a small staff of permanent experts they will form the "economic general staff" which Mr. MacDonald promised in his election speeches and which will inquire into pressing problems of British industry.

The list is headed by Sir Arthur Balfour, vice president of the International Chamber of Commerce, and includes Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union; W. R. Blair, director of the Cooperative Wholesale Society; Sir John Cadman, chairman of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company; W. M. Citrine, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress; G. D. M. Cole, university reader of economics at Oxford; Ernest Debenham, a director of Lloyd's Bank and the Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation and Sir Andrew Duncan, chairman of the Central Electricity Board and a director of the Bank of England.

Other members are Sir Josiah Stamp, chairman of the London Midland and Scottish Railway and a director of the Bank of England; Sir William Hardy, formerly secretary of the Royal Society; J. M. Keynes, noted writer on economics and secretary of the Royal Economic Society; Sir Alfred Lewis, general manager of the National Provincial Bank; Sir William McClintock, distinguished chartered accountant; Sir William Hall, director of the Innes Horticultural Foundation, and R. H. Tawney, reader in economic history at the University of London.

NEW PHONE RATE CUT SOUGHT BY THE CITY

Hilly to Demand a Further Reduction of $8,712,672 in the Company's Valuation Figures.

PLANS $609,887 SAVING

Hearing in Albany Tomorrow—Members of Utility Law Revision Commission Meet Today.

The city will attempt to obtain a further reduction of $8,712,672 in the New York Telephone Company's valuation figures when hearings are resumed before the Public Service Commission in Albany tomorrow, Corporation Counsel Hilly declared yesterday. This cut, which would be in addition to the 6 per cent slash already demanded by the city below the rates announced by the commission, would mean a cut of another $609,887 from the gross revenue to be collected from subscribers, according to A. S. Little, the city's rate expert.

Mr. Hilly said that he believed, after conferences with Mr. Little, that the additional cut could be made, within the 7 per cent return limitation set by the United States District Court, by taking out only 15 per cent of some of the overhead that the company put into its valuation figures. This, he intimated, might be done despite the argument that the court's decision had settled that aspect of the rate controversy.

Cites Alleged Inflated Items.

Inflated overhead items were embodied in the company's valuation figures, Mr. Hilly declared. Among them he listed such "undistributed structural costs" as "cost of acquisition" on land values, 1.9 per cent; "architects' fees," 6 per cent; "contractors' services," 6 per cent; "inspection and expediting," ½ per cent; "temporary construction," 1 per cent, and "use of construction equipment," ½ per cent. Under "outside plant" costs, Mr. Hilly declared, were found such overhead charges as "engineering," 5 per cent, and "contractor's office at works," 2 per cent.

Asked if these matters had been settled by the Federal court's decree, Mr. Hilly said:

"That remains to be seen; but I have discussed the matter with my expert from another angle and that is, how to get some of these intangibles out on account of retirements made to physical property. In the tables submitted to the commission the company shows retirements from plant 'at cost,' July 1, 1928, to Dec. 31, 1929, amount to $58,808,448. Now that sum refers only to the physical property. If we take out only 15 per cent for some of the overheads that the company put into its appraisal, we are entitled to another cut of $8,712,672 in the valuation. At 7 per cent rate of return, that should mean a cut of another $609,887 from the gross revenue to be collected from the subscribers."

Attack on Retirements.

Mr. Hilly indicated that he would attack the company's figure of $58,808,448 for retirements to plant on the ground that it should be increased in the same ratio as company valuation on reproduction cost basis exceeded valuation at original cost figures. It was explained by Mr. Little that this was because property put in long enough ago to be now fit for retirement, was worked into the rate base on the reproduction theory, but retired "at cost."

Senator John Knight and Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies, Republican legislative leaders who are also members of the special committee on revision of the Public Service Commission Law, are scheduled to confer with other members of the committee here today in an effort to expedite a report embodying the results of the committee's many hearings. Colonel William J. Donovan, counsel for the Commission, will return to his office on Monday, it was said, and will at once confer with members of the committee.

Methods of establishing rate bases for public utilities, and regulations regarding valuation factors are expected to figure prominently in the report. It is expected to deal at some length, also, with the question of limiting Federal court jurisdiction over rate cases. Several members of the committee are already engaged in drafting their conclusions. It was intimated yesterday that a minority report could be expected.

MAINE BOY'S DOGS WIN 90-MILE SLED RACE

Roland Lombard Is First in New England Handicap—Quebec Driver Second.

LACONIA, N. H., Feb. 12 (AP).—Three mongrel pups, aided by a pair of cast-off Siberian huskies, today enabled Roland Lombard, an 18-year-old schoolboy from Raymond, Me., to win the $500 first prize in the New England Sled-Dog Club's ninety-mile handicap derby.

This youth, competing against some of the best Canadian and American mushers, drove his five-hitch team with such skill that he finished his third and last thirty-mile grind over the rugged and snowy countryside a good fifteen minutes ahead of Georges Chevrette, veteran Quebec driver, who captured the $300 award for second place. Chevrette also made the second best time for the ninety miles and he received $200 more for this feat.

Emile St. Goddard, of The Pas, Man., one of the most successful drivers in competition, drove his seven wolf-hound huskies over the course in the fastest time, taking but seven hours and seven minutes on his three trips over the course. St. Goddard, thrice winner of the famous Quebec derby and last week's Ottawa race, was the scratch man in this event.

Special to The New York Times.

SKYTOP, Pa., Feb. 12.—Leo St. Goddard led today in the first lap of the Pocono Mountain Dog Derby, held at Skytop, although pressed by Jack McIlhennie's huskies, driven by Bill Harter for Skytop. St. Goddard piloted his quintet fast enough to beat the home entry to the post by four minutes.

The local team received a severe setback before the race when two of the six dogs had to be withdrawn, making Harter drive a four-dog team against squads of five and six for the other entries.

Lose Fight for $250,000 of Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 12.—Vice Chancellor Buchanan of Trenton dismissed this afternoon an action brought by Miss Eleanor Smith and Mrs. Carolyn Rice, both of New York City, nieces of the late Mrs. Julia Pratt Babcock of Elizabeth, in which they claimed half of Mrs. Babcock's $500,000 estate. Mrs. Babcock promised them half of her estate, the nieces asserted, after Mr. Babcock had failed to provide for them in his will, which left his estate to his wife. Vice Chancellor Buchanan declared no evidence had been produced to show that such a contract had existed.

Bill to Protect Eagle Is Approved.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Norbeck Bill to protect the American Eagle was approved today by the Senate Agriculture Committee with an amendment to make it unlawful to possess, sell or transport the birds or their plumage for other than scientific or educational purposes. The legislation would prohibit capturing or killing the birds, or harming their nests or eggs except when the Eagles attack useful animals.

DRESS PEACE SIGNED AFTER 8-DAY STRIKE

machinery for the impartial adjustment of disputes in the dress industry, were regarded by Mr. Schlesinger as ushering in a new era in the industry as a whole.

The new contracts, for a two-year period ending Jan. 1, 1932, were signed in the presence of Lieut. Gov. Lehman and Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee. For the union the signatories were President Schlesinger and Vice Presidents I. Nagler and Julius Hochman. The other signers were President S. R. Parnes of the Wholesale Dress Manufacturers' Association (jobbers), President Jed Sylbert, Association of Dress Manufacturers (contractors), and Louis L. Schwartz, president Affiliated Dress Manufacturers, Inc. (inside manufacturers).

Lieut. Gov. Lehman told the group of fifty union and employers' officials in the Mayor's reception room at the City Hall that he considered the occasion a really historic one because it meant the ending of a strike in one of the largest industries of the State. Despite the heated conferences, the strike, he said, has the distinction of being the shortest in the history of the industry. The walkout lasted eight days, as compared with the cloak strike of last August, which lasted thirteen days and which was settled through the intervention of Governor Roosevelt and the mediation of the Lieutenant Governor.

Praises the Union.

"I want to compliment the union particularly for its attitude and its highly conciliatory spirit," said Colonel Lehman. "The union's cooperation and the cooperation of the associations mean that we are, I hope, to begin an era of peace and constructive effort."

Colonel Lehman thanked Morris Hillquit, attorney for the union, and Raymond V. Ingersoll, impartial chairman of the cloak industry, for their assistance in writing the new contracts. He pointed out that the effectiveness of the contracts would depend on the cooperation and sympathetic attitude of all parties. He appealed to all factors to eliminate distrust and suspicion and substitute good-will, understanding and sympathy in an effort to solve the problems of the dress industry.

The thanks of the four parties were then conveyed to Colonel Lehman, Governor Roosevelt and to Acting Mayor McKee for his hospitality.

Mr. Sylbert, for the contractors, said that an active step had just been taken toward stabilizing the industry. Mr. Schwartz promised faithful performance of the terms of agreement by the inside shop employers and Mr. Parnes, for the jobbers, made a similar promise.

Board to Study Reforms.

Not only do the new agreements introduce for the first time machinery to guarantee the peaceful adjustment of disputes but they also provide for the appointment of a commission to study the industry and to make recommendations for stabilizing conditions. Such a commission was formed at the close of last Summer's cloak strike. It is through the impartial machinery and the work of the commission that efforts will be concentrated to eliminate the substandard shops.

The union's demand for unemployment insurance was deferred for consideration for one year, as was the demand for wage increases. However, if the employers abide strictly by the terms of the contracts, the union operatives will earn higher wages than they have hitherto received, because wage standards and working conditions in the agreement which expired on Jan. 1 were considered a dead letter because of the chaos and disorganization in the industry.

The union also successfully resisted a demand by the manufacturers for "the right to hire and fire" under more elastic provisions than prevailed up to Jan. 1.

The employers stand to gain because the new contracts were designed to strengthen the organized factors and thus to help stabilize the industry through the encouragement of larger units. Considerable membership gains have been made by the three employer associations in the last few weeks and further progress along this line is expected.

1,000 at Rothenberg Funeral.

Nearly 1,000 friends and relatives attended the funeral services yesterday of Jacob Rothenberg, open shop dress manufacturer, of 1,412 Broadway, who was fatally injured last Monday in a riot near his shop. The services were held at Riverside Memorial Chapel, 180 West Seventy-sixth Street, and interment was at Cypress Hills Cemetery.

The Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers, Inc., filed a protest yesterday with District Attorney Crain and Acting Mayor McKee over the death of Mr. Rothenberg and expressed confidence that Mr. Crain would effectively meet "this challenge to the peace and repute of our city."

Two dress strike pickets were arrested on disorderly conduct charges yesterday in Manhattan and three previously arrested were held for further hearing on Feb. 20 in Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, on charges of felonious assault.

Bennett Expedition in Yucatan Also Discovers Many Ruins 2,000 Years Old.

An occupied Indian village surrounded by high stone walls, which apparently never before had been seen by white men, as well as extensive ruins which date back more than 2,000 years, are among the discoveries made in Yucatan by the expedition headed by Captain Robert R. Bennett of Washington. The Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, under whose auspices the expedition was sent out, has just received a communication Captain Bennett sent on Feb. 2.

The party left Valladolid on Jan. 13, Captain Bennett says, and by Feb. 2 had traveled forty miles on the stone road which it was exploring. This road, which is so overgrown with brush that the path must be hewn, is really an elevated causeway, with huge stone masonry which in some places raises it to a considerable height above the surrounding country, he says. Ruins were found over a wide area, consisting of very high mounds with small temples on top, with ranges of buildings in between the mounds.

BARS PLOT CHARGE IN AUBURN KILLING

Judge Rules Out One Count, but State Insists Convicts Were Guilty of Sullivan's Murder.

JENNINGS AGAIN TESTIFIES

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Six Auburn convicts on trial for their lives as a result of the prison riot of Dec. 11, in which nine men were killed, listened this afternoon as Supreme Court Justice Cunningham dismissed one of the three counts in the indictment against them, after both sides rested.

The charge which was dismissed alleged that the six defendants, Leo Lewis, Claude Udwin, Albert Cassidy, William Force, Jesse Thomas and Frank Leagan, planned "with deliberation and premeditation" to murder General Edgar S. Jennings, the former warden, and killed Henry Sullivan, the convict leader, instead.

For a moment the six defendants, all of them under 30 and three of them already condemned to life imprisonment, thought the court's ruling had saved them from the electric chair. Their expressions were jubilant, but the exultant smiles died on their pallid faces as their attorneys explained to them, a minute later, that they still could be found guilty of first-degree murder.

Ruling Applies to All.

The jury still must decide whether it was a bullet fired by a convict which killed Sullivan and whether the prisoners on trial were committing a felony at the time by participating in the attempt to escape from jail. If they decide in the affirmative, District Attorney James J. Hosmer asserts, they must return a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, regardless of whether or not the State has shown premeditation.

The motion to dismiss the first count in the indictment was made by Amasa J. Parker, attorney for Lewis, on behalf of all the defendants except Cassidy and Thomas. Mr. Parker argued that the State had failed to prove the convicts premeditated the warden's death. In granting the motion Justice Cunningham said it would apply to all six of the accused men, and the attorneys for the two men who did not join in the request asked that exceptions be noted on the record.

Nine other motions, including one by Perry E. Leary, attorney for Force, asking that all three counts against all the defendants be dismissed, were denied by the court.

Summations Set for Today.

When court adjourned everything was ready to begin the closing statements tomorrow. Mr. Leary will open the arguments for the defense and each of the other five defense attorneys will be given an opportunity for a final plea to the jury to be merciful.

Mr. Hosmer then will have an opportunity to sum up the State's case and it was regarded as doubtful tonight whether the jury would begin its deliberations before Friday. The trial now is in the middle of its third week.

Much of today's court session was devoted to an attack by the State on the insanity defense of Lewis, who took the stand Monday to tell the jury of tantrums and fainting spells in an effort to convince them that he was of unsound mind. For this purpose four doctors were called, two of them specialists in mental diseases.

In an effort to offset the testimony of Erwin Sheldon, a deputy sheriff, who said he saw Sullivan stagger out of the guardroom and fall dead before any tear gas bombs were thrown, Mr. Hosmer recalled former Warden Jennings, four prison guards and two State troopers, who reiterated that no shots were fired, and asserted again that no civilians were in range of the escaping convicts when the gas attack was made and Sullivan was killed.

PRISON ILLS ARE LAID TO TOO MUCH POLITICS

Understaffing and Changes in Staffs Found in Survey From Medical Standpoint.

Understaffing and frequent changes of staff through operation of the "political spoils system" are the principal causes of unsatisfactory conditions in the prisons throughout the United States so far as health work is concerned, according to findings of a survey undertaken by the National Society of Penal Information, Inc., made public yesterday by William B. Cox, secretary of the society. The report was prepared by Dr. Frank L. Rector, executive secretary of the Chicago Medical Society.

Dr. Rector insists that the hygiene of prison life should be the subject of far more comprehensive plans for the welfare of the prisoner than at present. Such measures, he says, are no longer considered "coddling" the prisoner, but are calculated to be a vital factor in returning him to society in such condition as to facilitate his rehabilitation. As a result of his prison experience, the report maintains, the prisoner should leave the institution with a minimum of physical defects to handicap him, and with sufficient health education and general soundness of mind as well as of body to give him the best chance of succeeding.

ART EXHIBIT EXTENDED.

"Painting In Paris" to Continue Here Until March 2.

The present exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art, 730 Fifth Avenue, which is called "Painting in Paris," will be extended until March 2 because of the unexpectedly large attendance, according to announcement yesterday.

During the first three weeks of the exhibition nearly 35,000 people have attended. On Saturdays, when the attendance has averaged more than 3,000, it has been difficult to see the paintings.

EDISON GETS PATENT FOR RUBBER PROCESS

Describes Machine in Which Fiber of Goldenrod and Other Plants Is Separated.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (Science Service).—Thomas Edison has taken steps to protect his scheme for getting rubber out of goldenrod and other small plants by taking out a patent on the process.

The difficulty about obtaining rubber from such plants as goldenrod lies in the fact that most of it is in the pith and the bark-like outer portion of the stem, while the woody inner parts contain little or no rubber yet clog up the extracting machinery and involve a lot of expensive handling of worthless material. Mr. Edison's process aims to get rid of this rubberless part of the stem.

In the process as described in the patent, the dried plants are first crushed between rollers to open up the pith seams and break the bark. The crushed plants are then cut into pieces half an inch long and soaked in water.

They are then put into a water-filled ball mill, which is a device like a concrete mixer, and tumbles its contents over and over with a number of hard steel balls. This rapid pounding breaks the bark into small fragments, but shreds the woody part into fibers.

After about an hour in the ball mill the contents are screened, separating the bark fragments from the fibrous inner portions of the stem. This mass can be used in paper making or similar manufactures.

The second stage of the process consists in grinding the separated bark and pith pulp in water and permitting the solid matter to settle in a tank. The rubber particles, being lighter than water, rise to the surface and are floated off.

Mr. Edison states that this process is commercially practicable for producing rubber from goldenrod and other small shrubs. It is not known whether he actually intends to begin commercial operations using the process.

AVIATION SHOW DRAWS MANY SCHOOL PUPILS

The birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln saw the largest crowd since the doors were opened last Friday at the New York Aviation Show under auspices of Aviators Post 743, American Legion, in the Grand Central Palace. The school holiday gave the children their opportunity to visit the exposition and judging by the crowds they took full advantage of the day.

One historically-minded observer recalled that it was fitting that Lincoln's birthday should be observed by visiting an aviation show. Lincoln was among the first commanders of an air service in the history of human flight. In the last battles of the war between the States Mr. Lincoln as Commander-in-Chief of the Northern Armies approved an order for the use of captive balloons over the lines about Richmond.

Today a photograph of Secretary of State Stimson will be sent by radio direct from London to the booth of the Radio Corporation of America at the Aviation Show. Last night and yesterday the intricate apparatus necessary for the transmission of pictures was successfully tested.

Among visitors at the show yesterday were Walter Hinton, pilot of the NC4, the navy flying boat that first completed a transatlantic crossing from Newfoundland to Portugal by the Azores in 1919.

Peter J. Brady, chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Aviation, will be the host this evening at a testimonial dinner for Lieutenant James H. Doolittle in the Ritz Towers. Lieutenant Doolittle has resigned from the Army Air Corps to enter commercial aviation.

What the Long Island Railroad has done and plans to do to improve its service

*Question: What consideration has been given to other terminal facilities? It is our understanding that certain plans were developed (i.e., Diagonal Street Terminal and other studies).

Answer: It is true that the Company developed plans for a new terminal near the Bridge Plaza, Long Island City. The study was made and plans developed at the request of the Transit Commission. It is commonly referred to as the Diagonal Street Terminal. Its purpose is to establish a convenient transfer point to both of the rapid transit systems of the City, the B. M. T., and the I. R. T., and also a convenient transfer point to the independent City subway system now being constructed.

The relief which will be afforded if connections are made with the three subway systems was discussed in some detail before the Webb Legislative Commission and also in the Commutation Rate Case hearings (Transit Commission Case No. 2730; Public Service Commission Case No. 2042).

Briefly the idea is that large numbers of passengers can be conveniently and quickly taken to their destinations in Manhattan over all of the subway routes which connect Queens with Manhattan and thus the Pennsylvania Terminal will be relieved by eliminating certain trains used for intra-city business.

The estimated cost of establishing this terminal is $6,500,000. This includes $1,800,000 expenditure to be made by the City for bringing the tracks of the City-owned lines up to the terminal. The remainder, $4,700,000, to be borne almost entirely by the Railroad Company, includes the terminal, a car storage yard at Long Island City and elimination of grade crossings at Borden Avenue and Third Street.

*Question: What steps have been taken to further the construction of such a terminal, with particular reference to inter-city service and relief by the Rapid Transit lines?

Answer: While the Railroad Company has gone along with the Transit Commission's suggestion that such a plan be considered, and thus far the City has not been willing to sanction the plan to the extent of committing itself to its share of the necessary expenditures, it should be pointed out that if the City takes proper care of the intra-city rapid transit business this relief would be unnecessary.

C. P. BLISS NEW DEAN OF N. Y. U. COLLEGE

ALUMNI WORKING FOR FUND

Five Committees Have Raised $110,000 Toward $875,000 Needed for a Gymnasium—Officers Installed.

The appointment of Associate Dean Collins P. Bliss of the College of Engineering of New York University as dean of that college was announced last night at the annual dinner of the University College of Arts and Engineering Alumni Association at the New York Athletic Club.

Dean Charles H. Snow, who at the close of the present school year will retire after thirty-nine years with the university and thirty-four as dean, received the honor of announcing his successor from Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown and the university's council.

The newly named head of the College of Engineering, which also includes the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, has been connected with New York University since 1896, when he was appointed an instructor in mechanical engineering. Four years later he was named a professor of engineering and the associate deanship was given to him in 1927. He will become dean on July 1.

He had a major part in initiating the aeronautical courses at the university, which were established in 1925 by the $500,000 gift of Daniel Guggenheim.

A graduate of Princeton in 1888, he also studied at the Columbia School of Mines and Columbia School of Architecture, receiving a master's degree from Princeton in 1891.

At the business meeting of the engineering alumni, officers were installed, and Henry B. Fernald, '01, chairman of the executive committee of the New York University Heights gymnasium fund, reported that five committees had been formed and were working for the fund.

"These committees aim to raise $875,000 with which to erect a gymnasium on the campus at University Heights," Mr. Fernald said. "From subscriptions received to date a total of $110,000 has been realized."

Many of the alumni attended the annual Darwin lecture held each year on the birthday of Charles Darwin, born on the same day and in the same year as Abraham Lincoln. The lecture was by Dr. Roy W. Minor of the American Museum of Natural History.

VETERAN POLICEMAN KILLED BY CAR IN PARK

G. A. Miller, on Force 25 Years, Struck Down on Duty at Post He Had Held Since 1922.

Patrolman George A. Miller, 50 years old, a member of the department for a quarter of a century, was killed on his post in Central Park yesterday afternoon, where he had served for eight years and had made uncounted friends escorting children and grown-ups safely across the West Drive, one of the busiest thoroughfares in the city.

Patrolman Miller was standing in the roadway near Ninety-third Street, a point where the Bridle Path and the West Drive run close, when a sedan operated by Philip Reines, 36 years old, of 636 Faile Street, the Bronx, swerved, knocking him down and pinning him beneath the machine.

Mounted Patrolman O'Brien, attracted by the screams of women and children who saw the accident, spurred his horse to the side of the injured man. With the aid of Philip Rose, a pedestrian, he managed to extricate Miller and place him in Reines's car and started for Reconstruction Hospital with Motorcycle Policeman Meyers leading the way.

When they arrived there Dr. Huonl, a member of the house staff, pronounced Miller dead. Reines was taken to the police station in the park, where he was questioned by detectives, who later held him on a technical charge of homicide. A test of the brakes, the police say, showed the car to be in good working condition. Reines, they say, was unable to account for the car swerving.

Miller was married and lived at 3,225 Country Club Road, the Bronx. He was the father of four children and has been in the Police Department since Oct. 11, 1905.

HOBSON QUITS DRY WORK.

Says Laws Are Useless Until People Are Ripe for Reform.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BALBOA, Feb. 11.—Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, long a worker for prohibition, is no longer affiliated with the dry movement, according to a statement attributed to him in an interview published in The Panama American yesterday. Captain Hobson sailed yesterday on the steamship Pennsylvania for New York, from where he will go to Geneva to open an office for work in connection with the world conference on narcotic education, of which organization he is the secretary general.

When asked his opinion of legislation controlling human behavior, Captain Hobson said:

"Let the reformer stick to his proper work of molding public opinion. When people are ripe for reform, the laws will take care of themselves. Until then, they are useless. As I originally proposed it, the Eighteenth Amendment was simply an educational measure."

Mr. Hobson has conferred with President Arosemena and the Governor of the Canal, Colonel Harry Burgess, regarding his work for narcotic control.

HUNTER TO OFFER BUSINESS COURSE

NEW BRANCH READY IN 1931

700 Alumnae Attend Breakfast to Celebrate 60th Anniversary of Its First Class.

Nearly 700 Hunter College graduates attended the sixtieth anniversary breakfast of the Associate Alumnae held yesterday in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

Dr. James M. Kieran, third president of the college, known formerly as Normal College, announced the addition of a new business course to the curriculum.

"The years which followed the World War," Dr. Kieran said, "have taken an enormous number of our young women into business. Therefore we have decided to establish business courses of the highest standard in order to produce leaders for the best places in business, just as we have heretofore produced leaders for the best places in educational work."

"What is the matter with Manhattan?" Dr. Kieran inquired, announcing his intention to investigate the reason for a decline of more than 100 in the annual enrolment of that borough since 1927, as compared with increases of 100 for the Bronx and 261 for Brooklyn.

Dr. Kieran said the college has conferred 18,595 degrees since 1870, and the last graduation class numbered 980.

The new branch of Hunter College, now under construction in the Bronx, may open its doors to 1,500 students in the Fall of 1931, Dr. Kieran said.

Mrs. Marion Rhoads Elliott, president of the Associate Alumnae, gave a short review of the college's history. Mrs. Alice Draper Carter, chairman of the international section of the New York League of Women Voters, said that great strides toward universal peace had been made during the past ten years through face-to-face conferences, injecting the human element into the solution of international problems.

A short sketch entitled "The Revolving Years" was presented by the class of 1930. Anniversary gifts in the form of checks for $400 were presented by Mrs. Rosalie Meyer Conen of the class of '80 and Mrs. Evelyn Feil Picker of the class of '05. The undergraduates, through Miss Julia Mark, presented a huge birthday cake with sixty candles.

Among the guests of honor were the Misses Anna and Jenny Hunter, daughters of the founder and first president of Hunter College.

DENY CLEMENCY TO WOMAN

Arizona Authorities Refuse to Prevent Mrs. Dugan's Execution.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 12 (AP).—Death on the gallows seemed inevitable today for Mrs. Eva Dugan, 52-year-old housekeeper, whose last hope for life was extinguished by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles in a denial of her petition for clemency.

Nine days hence, Feb. 21, she is to die on the scaffold at the Arizona State prison in Florence for the murder three years ago of her employer, A. J. Mathis, an aged recluse of Tucson, Ariz., the first woman in Arizona criminal annals to be executed.

To Consider Colleges for Firemen.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 12.—Colleges for firemen will be a subject discussed at the annual convention of the International Association of Fire Chiefs to be held here in September. Colleges will be placed throughout Canada and the United States if the plan passes the convention.

LAVARRE WINS APPEAL WRIT

South Carolina Publisher Will Carry Up Contempt Case.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 12 (AP).—A writ of supersedeas was granted to William Lavarre, newspaper publisher, by Federal Judge J. Lyles Glenn here this afternoon. It displaced an order issued this morning by Judge Glenn for the removal of Mr. Lavarre to Augusta to answer contempt charges before Federal Judge Bascom S. Deaver.

Bail was fixed at $7,500 and Mr. Lavarre paroled in the custody of his attorneys until Saturday noon, when the bond is to be posted. The supersedeas gives the publisher the right to appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Killed by Airplane Propeller.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 12.—Albert Carlson, 25 years old, a mechanic employed by the new Standard Airplane Corporation at its field in Teterboro, was struck on the head this afternoon by the propeller of the plane he was trying to crank, while Lieutenant "Slim" Smith was at the controls. Carlson was removed to the Hackensack Hospital where he died a few hours later. He lived in Kearney.

Moderation! THE FRIEND that prolongs your youth

"Coming events cast their shadows before"

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence

Men who would keep that trim, proper form, women who prize the modern figure with its subtle, seductive curves—eat healthfully but not immoderately. Banish excessiveness—eliminate abuses. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. When tempted to excess, when your eyes are bigger than your stomach, reach for a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence if you would maintain that lithe, youthful figure.

*Be Moderate! . . . Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. # ADMITS 'LOBBYING' ON MUSCLE SHOALS

Tennessee Association Officer Denies Any Reprehensibility in That, However.

SOUGHT BEST BID ON PLANT

Caraway, for Senate Investigators, Says Claudius Huston Will Probably Be Called.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12. — The Tennessee River Improvement Association as directed by Colonel J. W. Worthington is a lobby, but not a reprehensible lobby, according to W. G. Waldo, secretary and consulting engineer of the association, who testified today before the Senate Lobby Committee.

"You might call it that," Mr. Waldo said, replying to Senator Caraway, chairman of the committee, who had demanded to know if the association was not in fact a lobbying institution in connection with legislation on Muscle Shoals.

"But the term 'lobbying' carries with it something reprehensible, and we were doing nothing wrong, nothing for which we need to apologize to any one. If we had been working under cover for some one who was trying to get Muscle Shoals for himself, that would have been what I mean by reprehensible lobbying. We were not."

The association, he said, was supporting the American Cyanamid Company's offer for Muscle Shoals, as represented by the Wright bill because, in his judgment, it was the best at the present time, but the organization would support a better offer is one were drafted.

"And," he added, "there is room for one."

Mr. Waldo said that there was no hope for the Norris bill, in support of which conclusion he quoted a message of President Hoover stating that he did not favor operation by the government.

"The farmers in the Tennessee Valley," Mr. Waldo said, "don't believe in government ownership."

He admitted having campaigned through the Southern States in support of the Wright bill, but denied that he was "stirring up sentiment," as asserted by Senator Caraway. The sentiment was already there, Mr. Waldo said.

Concerning the resources, methods of operation and expenditures of the association Mr. Waldo stated that he did not know, or had forgotten, or that the matter in question was not his business, but that of Colonel Worthington, leading to another charge by Senator Caraway that the latter was "dodging" the committee. Colonel Worthington, who has a home here, but who is now at Tate Springs, Tenn., received nothing for his services to the association, the witness said.

He agreed to go to the Worthington house with John G. Holland, investigator for the committee, and try to find for Mr. Holland the last statement of receipts and disbursements.

Claudius H. Huston, president of the association up to the time of his appointment as chairman of the Republican National Committee, will probably be called to testify as to the affairs of the organization, Mr. Caraway said. The examination of Mr. Waldo will continue tomorrow.

Markham Will Recite Poems.

Edwin Markham, the poet, will be heard this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock over WABC's coast-to-coast network as he recites to the young student body of the nation some of the "Poetry Best Loved by Children." The presentation will be one of "The American School of the Air" series broadcast twice each week. Mr. Markham will assume the leading rôle in a radio playlet dramatized by William Ford Manley, especially for the school series. The poet will recite "The Throstle," by Tennyson; "Captain, My Captain," by Walt Whitman, and two of his own poems: "The Man With the Hoe," and "Lincoln, the Man of the People."

CHICAGO POLICE NAB BAND OF RACKETEERS

Group of Eight Gunmen, All Said to Have Long Records, Arrested in Drive.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—The suspicious persons caught in Police Commissioner Russell's dragnet tonight produced the first of the alleegd leaders associated with the ring of slayers, gang leaders and terrorists responsible for Chicago's latest crime wave.

Today was the fourth of the police offensive against gangland and it netted 425 arrests at midnight, bringing the total since Saturday to 2,616, many of whom were found to be gun-carriers.

Conspicuous among those who passed in review at the Detective Bureau tonight and each of whom carried a revolver when arrested were five notorious gangland gang leaders. They were:

George Barker, ex-convict and business agent of the Coal Teamsters' Union, who has terrified the coal industry of Chicago; William ("Three-Fingered") White, out of the penitentiary three months and now claiming to be business agent of the City Ash Wagon Drivers' Union, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the killing of a policeman but was released through a technicality; Myles O'Donnell, who with his brother "Klondike" rules the beer and liquor business of the west side and who won an acquittal for the killing of Eddie Tanel, saloonkeeper and then one of the bosses of Cicero; Mike Quirk, former saloonkeeper, accused of the murder of Roy Flynn in 1927; Bernard O'Donnell, brother of Myles, who was involved in the murder of Walter Quinlan in 1926, and John O'Connor, Frank Lacey and Edward Sirnek, said to be aides of the five leaders.

Colonel Robert Isham Randolph president of the Chicago Asosciation of Commerce and head of the secret committee of seven, asserted today that there was not a business in Chicago that was not infested by racketeers.

"It is amazing the extent to which racketeers have penetrated the business life of our city," he said.

"Two well-known contractors came to me to tell their troubles with racketeers. Salesmen, instead of soliciting business for this steam shovel or that brand of paint or a certain hauling company, now march in.

"'You're going to give the business to such and such a company,' they tell the contractors. The contractors protest and say they're satisfied. The salesmen threaten.

"If the contractors remain adamant, their troubles begin. City inspectors from this department and that swarm on the scene. The electric work is wrong. The plumbing violates the code. The health laws and fire laws and a half dozen other laws are being violated.

"There's a political tie-up, obviously.

CALLS DRUG TRAFFIC A WORLD PROBLEM

GOES BEFORE GRAND JURY

Asserts Daylight Crimes, Committed at Great Risk, Are the Work of Narcotic Addicts.

Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pittsburgh, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs and of the Foreign Service Building Commission and author of two bills for the control of narcotic drugs, testified yesterday as an expert before the Federal grand jury investigating the activities of three alleged New York drug rings. Although he said the inquiry here was exhaustive and would be very valuable to the government in suppressing the drug traffic, he declared later that "no nation, standing alone, can suppress this traffic," as it was an international problem.

Outside the grand jury room, Mr. Porter said the police records of New York, Pittsburgh and other cities indicated that at least one-third of all crimes of violence on record had been committed by persons under the influence of narcotic drugs.

"Your hold-up of a store in broad daylight in a business neighborhood with great risk to the hold-up man is the work of addicts," the Representative said. "Society has been neglectful of these persons; hospitals do not want them, as a rule, and the rehabilitation farm is the place for them.

"China has been the greatest victim of narcotics. When once these drugs are produced they ultimately reach the consumer. The bulk is so small, rendering detection very difficult, and the profit is so enormous that the traffic, once started, works efficiently. Drugs must be controlled at their source."

Reminded that the League of Nations had adopted resolutions with respect to the narcotic trade, Mr. Porter said:

"Yes, one of their weasel agenda."

Mr. Porter, who has regularly voted against prohibition, said he did not believe that drug addiction had increased because of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act. He declared, however, that any one who had progressed very far in the use of alcohol as a beverage was a "white user."

Mr. Porter's attention was called to the case of Ruth St. Clair, who received a life sentence under the Baumes law for her fourth conviction as a shoplifter. Of this he said:

"I am a firm believer in the rule laid down by Blackstone, that it is the certainty rather than the severity of punishment that deters offenders. A person who is addicted to drugs is sick. He or she is the victim of a disease and should be placed where treatment can be given. You can't cure a sick person by sending that person to jail. If this woman committed the crime of shoplifting because of an ungovernable craving for durgs, she should be treated by physicians."

Mr. Porter, who came to New York with Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, returned to Washington last night alone. He said he did not know where Mr. Mellon had planned to spend his time in New York.

Honor New Yorker Builder Tonight.

The contractors and subcontractors associated with the construction of the Hotel New Yorker will give a testimonial dinner dance in honor of the hotel's president and builder, Mack Kanner, tonight at the hotel. Five hundred will attend. Those at the speakers' table will include Frederick Brown, real estate man; Nathan Jonas, chairman of the board of directors of the Manufacturers' Trust Company, and J. S. Becker, capitalist and associate of Mr. Kanner; Samuel Raisler of the Raisler Heating Company, William Basset of the Otis Elevator Company, M. H. Sugarman of Sugarman and Berger, architects of the hotel, and Ralph Hitz.

HARVARD GETS BEQUEST.

Will of G. S. Bryan of Bridgeport Gives Residue of $977,882 Estate.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 12 (AP).—Harvard University is named residuary legatee in the will of Gregory S. Bryan, retired manufacturer, who left an estate valued at $977,882. An inventory of the estate was filed in the Probate Court at Washington, Conn., today by the Bridgeport Trust Company, trustee.

The will provides a $300,000 bequest to the town of Washington for a memorial and eight bequests of $10,000 each. The residue is left to Harvard University.

Mr. Bryan died here in October.

LAW BOARD ADDS EXPERTS.

One Is Dr. Brown, Defeated Gubernatorial Candidate in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—Appointment of three additional experts to assist the Law Enforcement Commission in its study of the causes of crime was announced today.

They are Dr. Emma A. Winslow of New York City, Dr. William M. Brown of Lexington, Va., and Dr. Stewart Paton of Princeton, formerly a professor and lecturer at Yale and Johns Hopkins universities.

Dr. Brown was the defeated Virginia Gubernatorial candidate of the anti-Smith Democrats last year.

DRYS DEFY WETS AS INQUIRY OPENS

ASSAIL NEW 'PROPAGANDA'

Law Modification Is Called "Nullification by Indirection" and Not to Be Tolerated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Concurrently with the opening of the inquiry into prohibition by the House Judiciary Committee today, the legislative committee of the National Conference, representing thirty organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, which is meeting here now, issued a statement challenging both the authority and the motive of the anti-prohibitionists.

Terming prohibition a "success," the committee referred to the "diminishing minority" of wet advocates, called State referenda "a mockery of elections and of constitutional procedure," and adopted John Paul Jones's slogan, "We have just begun to fight."

"No one should be deceived by the present flood of publicity and propaganda put forth by the wets and carried by the press.

"Since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment those who favor liquor and oppose orderly government have each year seized upon the meeting of Congress as an occasion giving them good opportunity for propaganda. Many bills are introduced, for which their authors and friends entertain no hope or expectation of passage, but which are only intended to secure agitation.

"Nullification by Indirection."

"The assembling of the present Congress offered the wets an unusual opportunity for agitation and propaganda, because the present administration came into office openly committed to whatever changes in the law might be thought necessary to secure better and more general enforcement and observance, which naturally brought the whole subject of prohibition to the fore, and which aroused the wets to a fight of desperation.

"For the most part the present methods of the wets are disloyal and un-American.

"We cheerfully concur in the sentiment expressed by the President and others that every citizen has a perfect right to agitate and move for the repeal of any part of the Constitution in a frank and open manner.

"But to seek the repeal of laws enacted to make the Constitution operative, or to seek so to modify such laws that they would allow what the Constitution itself forbids, is nullification by indirection, which no loyal American will tolerate.

Referenda Called Fruitless.

"To seek to withdraw States from support of the Federal Government in the enforcement of any law and the preservation of orderly processes is only a revival of the old doctrine of nullification, which has never been tolerated by the American people.

"Extra legal and irresponsible State referenda are fruitless and abortive. They make a mockery of elections and of constitutional procedure.

"We warn those who seek the nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment against the false assumption that friends of national prohibition will receive supinely their onslaughts upon the Constitution. The friends of prohibition have in no sense lost their fighting spirit, nor will they yield to the clamor of a lawless minority.

"In the words of John Paul Jones, 'We have just began to fight.'

"We respectfully and earnestly appeal to the American people to give united and whole-hearted support to the President's program for better law enforcement and for better law observance."

ARREST MAN AS GIN BUYER.

Detectives Make First Charge of Kind in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—What was described as the first arrest ever made in Washington on a charge of violating the prohibition laws by buying liquor was made today with the detention of Joseph Patrick Carley, whom, detectives said, they found leaving a speakeasy with a half pint of gin.

Carley was charged with "buying a half pint of gin" and released under $500 bond.

David A. Hart, Assistant United States Attorney in charge of prohibition enforcement in police court, said he did not order the charge booked against Carley, but that he was prepared to try him under the national prohibition laws.

"Purchasing liquor is just as much an offense against the national prohibition act as bootlegging, if the purchase is made from an illegal seller," Mr. Hart said.

"When the police advised me that they had arrested a man for buying whiskey I told them to hold him and that I thought I could convict him under Section 6 of the national prohibition act."

RENT LAW REVIVAL SOUGHT

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—After being attacked by the Democrats, a bill sponsored by the Baumes Crime Commission, providing that an application for a writ of habeas corpus must state whether previous applications had been denied, was defeated today in the Assembly. The vote was 58 to 13, seventy-six votes being necessary for passage.

Many Republicans were absent, and Assemblyman Esmond, vice chairman of the crime commission, who fathered the measure, moved to reconsider the vote. It will be called up again Monday night with every indication that, with a full attendance of Republicans, it will be passed.

A crime commission bill which was passed would permit judges to hold hearings in prisons on applications for writs made by convicts. Another measure approved by the Assembly provides that the Parole Board instead of a magistrate shall determine whether a convict has violated his parole.

The attack on the habeas corpus bill was led by Assemblyman O'Reilly of Brooklyn and Assemblyman Cuvillier of Manhattan, on the ground that it was an encroachment on the rights guaranteed citizens in the Constitution. They maintained the measure would be declared invalid by the courts.

"I am not surprised to find Mr. Cuvillier defending the convicted criminal," said Mr. Esmond. "The purpose of this bill is to put a stop to the practice of convicts, some of whom make applications as many as twenty times for writs of habeas corpus. They are making a joke out of the law."

"Well, this bill looks as if it had been drawn by a country lawyer such as you are," interrupted Assemblyman Cuvillier. "Perhaps you are one of the country lawyers who have not heard yet that there is a Constitution which guarantees certain rights to every citizen."

Actors' Plea Heeded.

Without a dissenting vote, the Assembly passed the bill sponsored by Assemblyman Post of Manhattan, which prohibits the immediate arrest of actors when alleged immoral plays are raided by the police. The measure amends the theatre padlock law.

The Assembly also passed and sent to Governor Roosevelt a bill by Senator George R. Fearon, Syracuse Republican, which provides that if a person is twice convicted for driving an automobile while intoxicated, and if, on each occasion, persons have been injured, his license never can be restored by the commissioner of motor vehicles.

The New York City emergency rent law, which expired last year, would be re-enacted and continued until June 1, 1931, under a bill introduced by Assemblyman Lefkowitz of Manhattan.

"I believe there is a very urgent need for the re-enactment of the emergency rent laws," he said. "Ever since the rent laws expired, landlords have commenced innumerable proceedings to dispossess tenants who are unable to pay increased rentals. The tenants are helpless and must move unless they agree to the increased rentals.

Unemployment Situation Cited.

"The present unemployment situation existing throughout New York City makes it impossible for thousands of tenants in the poorer sections, especially on the lower east side, to pay their present rent, let alone increases which the landlords are demanding."

Assemblyman Rivers of Manhattan offered a bill which would permit the court to stay summary proceedings to dispossess a tenant in New York City when proof is presented to show that the landlord has failed to comply with any orders issued by tenement house officials.

Under a bill offered by Assemblyman Smith of Syracuse the city home rule law would be amended so as to permit cities to adopt laws fixing the salaries of judges, clerks and employes of local courts.

The salary of the chief justice of the Court of Special Sessions and of the chief city magistrate could be changed by the Board of Aldermen, if recommended by the Board of Estimate, under a bill introduced by Assemblyman Breitenbach of Kings.

For Milk Inquiry.

Creation of a joint committee, consisting of three Senators and three Assemblymen, to investigate the cost of milk distribution in New York City and to determine whether a monopoly exists is provided in a resolution offered by Senator Hofstadter and Assemblyman Rivers, Manhattan Republicans.

The committee would submit its report to the 1931 Legislature not later than Feb. 15.

suading that body favorably to report any modification bill to the House. The anti-prohibitionists welcomed the opportunity, however, of putting in their protests in what they termed an "educational campaign for the public."

Graham Explains Purpose.

Chairman Graham said the proposals for amendments would be heard and equal opportunity given to the opponents of the suggestions made. He said that he wished to make the hearings "educative," and to confine them to resolutions for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"When prohibition was adopted," he continued, "the slogan of battle was 'Down With te Saloon!' That end was accomplished, but today we are witnessing the transgression of individual rights of conscience and belief.

"These meetings may not result in anything, but they will give an opportunity to the conscientious opponents of prohibition for a hearing. What opportunity has there been for them to be heard? The hearings will open the doors to let them present their side of the question."

The chairman was interrupted by applause when he asserted that the Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead law had been tried for a decade "without satisfactory result." His statement follows:

"Seven resolutions, each containing a proposition to amend the Constitution, were introduced in the House of Representatives by seven different members, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary by the House for the purpose of having them considered, and, if deemed meritorious, reported back to the House, in which they must be approved by two-thirds vote in each branch of the Congress. The proposed amendment when ratified by three-fourths of the States would become a part of the Constitution of the United States.

Points to Convention Method.

"An amendment can be approved by the State Legislature or by a convention convened in each State if so directed by Congress. The convention method, which would require delegates to be elected on the issue of amendment, would furnish the opportunity of a referendum so much desired and asked for. That method of ratification would furnish the only way a referendum can ever be had under the law.

"There was widespread request for hearings from proponents and the friends of the resolutions; hence a hearing has been ordered. In the existing state of the public mind a hearing upon the matters could not be denied without infringing the rights of American citizens to petition and be heard by the Congress upon redressing a wrong or bettering a condition.

"This hearing will not interfere with President Hoover's crime commission, but rather be in aid thereof.

"The Eighteenth Amendment and the enforcement law have been tested for ten years without satisfactory results. Enforcement has left a train of consequences most deplorable and depressing to every patriot.

Lays 1,360 Killings to Dry Law.

"Killings amounting to over 1,360 have resulted in the last ten years from enforcement. One hundred and thirty-one citizens were killed by prohibition officers and sixty-four agents killed by citizens. In one year there were 77,351 arrests for violations, alleged or real.

"During the first year under prohibition there were 29,000 cases instituted and during the last fiscal year there were close to 70,000. Demand for more prisons has been made and new ones ordered, which, it is said will not give relief from overcrowding except for a period of five years or possibly ten. Prison population has jumped 4 per cent per 100,000 in the last five years.

"When we add corruption, bribery, demoralization of the citizenry, disrespect for law, bootlegging and kindred offenses, does not such a picture call for the fair, dispassionate judgment of men and women to come together and reason over what remedy can be devised to abate this sad condition?

"No one wants the restoration of the old conditions or the saloon. We may well ask, Cannot control and regulation of the liquor traffic supply the place of prohibition?

"What use of more laws, drastic and partaking of the spirit of vengeance rather than justice? Natural liberty of the individual has never been totally surrendered to society, but only so much as is needed to preserve the organized entity. Freedom of decision as to what one may drink, eat or wear is as fundamental as freedom of belief in religion. Like in the delegation of powers to the Federal Government by the sovereign States, all not delegated were reserved.

"Individual man has a large reservoir of powers. Only when one's choice by overt acts breaks the peace or injures society can the individual decision be assailed and then only to punish the overt acts.

Canadian Experiments Recalled.

"Behold the action of the Canada Provinces which, after many experiments, have finally adopted the so called 'Canadian system,' all except Prince Edward's Island. Only Finland and the United States stand out as dry nations.

"Cannot some system be devised to control and not prohibit, that will lessen the evils portrayed? The use of wine has been countenanced throughout the ages. Cana of Gallilee is not exceptional. Had God wished automatons, he could have changed the nature of the grape or destroyed the human appetite. He wanted character. He wanted the man who met temptations and conquered.

"Let us reason together. Not with the fanatic, for he is the foe of religious as well as individual liberty. Not with him, no; but with broad-minded men and women of every faith and belief, and try to relieve our country through reason and by conceiving a new system—one not founded on the bludgeon and a violation of men's conscientious convictions regarding drink.

"No law can ever be enforced that is destructive of right and individual liberty. You may create a guerilla warfare and conditions reeking with murder, bribery, corruption, violations or evasions and disrespect for all law. Every law to be capable of being enforced without such a train of consequences must not be inconsistent with the mind of the people of the country as being right and must not be destructive of individual liberty."

Dyer Would Limit Hearing.

Representative L. C. Dyer of Missouri, a Republican wet, opened the discussion by urging that the hearing be confined to constitutional questions. He has a bill proposing an amendment to the Volstead law whereby States would be empowered to determine the alcoholic content of liquor, but does not want this question discussed until the national committee on law observance and enforcement hears him on his proposal, March 5.

The committee members began a discussion of his request and of how much time should be allowed witnesses, but the audience could not hear what they were saying.

"Louder, please," called former Senator Bruce of Maryland, a wet, who was sitting in the front row.

Representative La Guardia, Republican, of New York, moved to proceed with the witnesses and settle details later, but Representative Michener, dry, a Republican, asked that the motion be deferred.

"It won't carry," he said, firmly. "I want the question of how much time will be given settled. Will we hear every one as an individual or will those favoring the proposals get together with a head to control the time?"

Blocks the Dyer Proposal.

"I ask unanimous consent that the hearings be confined exclusively to the question of constitutional amendment and not comprise the enforcement question," Representative Dyer interjected.

"I decline to consent," returned Represetnative Summers, Democrat, of Texas.

Representative Sabath, Republican, of Illinois, a wet, next referred to his proposal to amend the Eighteenth Amendment so that Congress could pass laws similar to those of Sweden and the Canadian Provinces.

"The people of the United States are ready for some relief, and I feel that they will vote favorably on a change," he said.

Several persons in the audience applauded.

"If the question was left to any unbiased jury they would vote to convict the prohibition law," Mr. Sabath added.

There was more applause when he asserted that there was doubt whether the Eighteenth Amendment was constitutional.

"Well, the Supreme Court and Congress have passed upon it; what are you going to do about it?" Mr. Michener asked.

"Repeal it," Mr. Sabath replied to an accompaniment of handclapping.

"Side issues and applause do not appeal to the committee; let's get down to brass tacks," Mr. Michener suggested.

Mr. Sabath said he did not believe that repeal of the amendment was possible now.

"It will require a few more years of education," he said. "But I am proceeding under a constitutional method. The people realize that something should be done and here is a way to do it."

Liggett Says He Was Once Dry.

Representative Sabath ended his argument and introduced Mr. Liggett as a "gentleman and a scholar." The magazine writer bowed to the committee and referred to himself as a former dry, explaining that in 1914 he voted dry in Washington State because he believed in the principle of local option.

"I had thought," he said, "that, although under prohibition there was corruption, drinking had decreased. But my studies convince me otherwise. I have been a newspaper man in the principal cities of Minnesota, and, with due deference to Mr. Volstead, who is in charge of that State, I think I know conditions there better than he does."

Mr. Liggett launched into a recapitulation of alleged conditions in the District of Columbia, where he contrasted the 300 saloons of pre-prohibition days with the 700 speakeasies and 4,000 bootleggers, which, he alleged, were now to be found. He charged that not less than 1,600,000 gallons of "hard" liquor were consumed in the district annually.

In Boston, he charged, policemen and politicians were largely corrupted by prohibition, and even an ex-Governor and a Police Commissioner had been illegally selling confiscated liquor. A white slave ring was operating there, he said, and there was an organized dope traffic.

"The general breakdown, if not directly traceable to prohibition, came at the same time," he declared.

Describes Trip to Kansas.

The witness described a trip to Kansas, "now celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of State-wide prohibition and boasting of a savage dry law."

"There is not a town in Kansas where I cannot go as a stranger and get a very good drink in fifteen minutes," he testified, adding details of a bellboy's offer of liquor in Topeka. He asserted that Wichita was "wide open," and possessed "one of the classiest roadhouses in the United States."

"No less than 6,000,000 gallons of hard liquor are consumed in Kansas annually," he said. "Six hundred gallons of malt entering Topeka, with a population of 60,000, shows that every one of the population has an annual consumption of ten gallons of home brew."

Switching to Detroit, the witness said that "mass production in crime is coming to its fullest flower." Two years ago, he added, there were 20,000 speakeasies in Detroit, and arrests for drunkenness had trebled in ten years.

"Detroit is in the grip of racketeers, gangsters, crooked politicians and grafting cops," he said. "I know of drunken revelry, a wild party, given by Dennis Murphy, a gambler, at a Grand Avenue roadhouse, at which a Governor of Michigan, a Chief of Police and four judges were present with gamblers, criminals, bootleggers and politicians, all fraternizing together. There were hootchie-kootchie dances. Next day they all said they would enforce the law."

The party was on the night of Nov. 5, the witness said.

Audience Applauds Witness.

Representative Stobbs, Republican, of Massachusetts, inquired if the witness had given the Boston evidence to the proper authorities, and the witness replied that it was in the hands of the Federal grand jury.

"I am not a snooper, nor a spy," he added, and the audience broke into applause.

Representative Sumners asked the wet enthusiasts to restrain themselves.

"We are not going to cast our votes on the quantity of applause," he good-naturedly explained.

"I am not paid to give evidence to the government, but I have not the slightest hesitancy in giving it to any constituted authority," Mr. Liggett resumed.

Drinking in Minneapolis was chiefly in "low dives" and 3,000 "beer flats," the witness testified, and "beer farms" were numerous in Minnesota.

"That's one reason you have not heard so much lately about farm relief," he continued. "Farmers sell beer at their farms. Boys and girls go there and drink. All this is under the nose of Andrew J. Volstead."

Representative Michener brought out from Mr. Liggett that he had acquired much of his Detroit evidence from John Smith, the former Mayor, who was defeated for reelection.

Mr. Liggett said he had been told that Mr. Smith organized a "sledgehammer" squad to drive gamblers out of that city.

"They moved to Wayne County, where I was in a gambling room as large as this hall, with twelve tables, 1,500 people and virtually no limit," he stated. "There are twelve of these in Wayne County. I am told that before the election the gamblers went to Mr. Smith, and asked him if he would be hands off. When he said 'No promises,' they dumped in a slush fund of $250,000 at the eleventh hour of the election."

Says Farmers Go In for Stills.

Representative Celler, Democrat of New York, a wet, asked Mr. Liggett the significance of the large increase in corn sugar production in the United States.

"The farmers are going into bootlegging or renting their farms to city men to run stills," was the reply. "A still costs $10,000, and with 800 gallons a day the still is paid for in five days. There is no doubt that manufacturing is being driven to the farms."

Enforcement officers had told him that there was liquor in 80 per cent of the North Dakota farm homes, he added.

Reverting to conditions in Kansas, Mr. Liggett said that a Governor of that State had "snoopers" hired at $260 monthly and "all the liquor they could drink," and that the "snoopers" were either ex-bootleggers or ex-convicts.

"Do you conclude that all you describe comes from prohibition, or from deeper causes?" Mr. Sumners inquired.

"Other causes contribute," Mr. Liggett conceded.

"Do you think the enactment of prohibition enforcement had a tendency to relieve local authorities of responsibility for law enforcement?"

"I certainly do."

Says Border Traffic Is Simple.

Mr. Liggett assured Representative La Guardia that "by greasing the proper authorities," it was easy to bring carloads of liquor across the international border in some of the middlewestern States. He did not think, however, there was any "leakage" worth while from diplomatic liquor brought to this country under immunity.

"What do you think about giving President Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell a fair chance to try to enforce this law?" Representative Hammer inquired.

"I think the law is essentially unenforceable," the witness replied, "even if Mr. Hoover is the superman he is said to be in some quarters."

"I don't think he is," Mr. Hammer interjected, and again asked:

"Well, do you think the law is worth enforcing?"

"My honest opinion as an American who is proud of his country, is, that if there is ten more years of this law, you will have the country ruled by a gang of underworld rats," Mr. Liggett said, while the room rang with thunderous applause.

Gov. Green May Be a Witness.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 12 (AP).—Governor Fred W. Green today declared he had "nothing to say" regarding the statements of Walter W. Liggett before the House Judiciary Committee at Washington to the effect that the Governor and high city officials of Detroit attended a roadhouse party there last November.

"I don't know much about the matter and therefore have nothing to say," the Governor said.

Governor Green left Lansing for Boston today. He will address a meeting of Spanish War veterans there tomorrow night.

Later it was said at Governor Green's office that he would go to Washington from Boston and that he might have something to say before the House Judiciary Committee respecting the statements made by Mr. Liggett.

Kansas Officials Deny Testimony.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 12 (AP).—Declaring that statements of Walter W. Liggett concerning prohibition enforcement in Kansas were false, William A. Smith, Attorney General, announced today he would seek permission to cross-examine the magazine writer before the committee in Washington.

WICHITA, Kan., Feb. 12 (AP).—The roadhouse near here which was described before a Congressional committee by Walter W. Liggett as "one of the classiest you could find anywhere," was closed recently, County Attorney William J. Wertz said today.

HURLEY SAYS PARTY STANDS BY DRY LAW

Republicans Never for Evasion and Lincoln's Creed Was Enforcement, He Holds.

SEES STATE POWER WANING

SCHURMAN ASSAILS INERTIA

Declares People in Democracy Must Serve—Dr. Hung Asserts China Feels Emancipator's Influence.

Declaring that the Republican party has never evaded its responsibilities, Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley served notice last night that the prohibition law would be enforced in full. He made his statement at the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the National Republican Club at the Hotel Astor. The Secretary defended President Hoover's policy of dealing with problems through fact-finding commissions or committees.

Richard W. Lawrence, president of the club, presided at the forty-fourth dinner. Other speakers were Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, lately retired as Ambassador to Germany, and Dr. William Hung, Chinese scholar and exchange professor of history at Harvard. They estimated Lincoln's influence upon the nation and paid tribute to the emancipator on the 121st anniversary of his birth.

"Never a Party of Evasion."

"The Republican party has never been a party of evasion," said Secretary Hurley. "From its very inception it has courageously faced its responsibilities. Its spirit and its traditions were forged in the seething furnace of war. A determination to uphold the Constitution of the United States and to enforce its laws was the dominant creed of Abraham Lincoln. That is the creed of the Republican party. In many instances the party has faced issues involving this principle.

"It is facing one today. The party is pledged by its most recent platform, as well as by its most sacred tradition, to uphold the Constitution of the United States. The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution. We hear much talk of nullification of that amendment by violation of it. The air is full of superficial arguments about prohibition and personal quarrels and conflicts involving it.

"Above all this discussion and clamor, there is just one clear note, and that is that the Republican party and the Republican President, faithful to their traditions, are standing resolutely by the Constitution. The President has no choice as to what laws he will enforce and what ones he will not. He has no right to change any law. His first official act was to take a solemn oath to uphold the Constitution and enforce the laws of the nation. The President will discharge his duty under this oath with fidelity.

Sees Laws Disregarded.

"The Constitution or any law enacted by Congress may be repealed or modified by the orderly processes provided in the Constitution. The Republican party is not a party of nullification.

"Not only the President but every other citizen chosen to a position of responsibility under the government, is required to take an oath to uphold the Constitution and enforce the law. Today we find ourselves in a period of widespread disregard for law. Law cannot be maintained by the use of force alone.

"I am not referring particularly to prohibition now, but to the widespread indifference on the part of individual citizens toward the observance of every fundamental law. As early as 1837 Lincoln said: 'I hope I am not overwary, but if I am not, there is even now something of ill omen amongst us. I mean the increasing disregard for law which pervades the country.'

"No finer appeal has ever been made for the observance of laws than that made by Lincoln in the speech from which I have quoted, when he continued: 'Let reverence for the law be breathed by every mother to the lisping babe that prattles in her lap.' The great appeals that we heard in the days of our youth for temperance law observance, right thinking and right living, seem all to be lost in the demand for the use of force.

"In addition to this the States are constantly abdicating portions of their police power to the Federal Government. In some instances the State Governments are literally shoving their police responsibilities over to the Federal Government. Federal jurisdiction over crime and misdemeanors committed by citizens of the various States is constantly increasing. This is a dangerous tendency. The power of local government should be increased rather than diminished."

Refers to Farm Relief.

The Secretary touched briefly upon the present legislative program at Washington. Important as the program is, he said, the public should not lose sight of an equally vital duty of the administration, "to give effect to the Constitution and every law that has been passed under it." He spoke on what the party has accomplished toward solution of the problems that awaited it after the last election.

He pointed out that a farm relief measure had been enacted and that President Hoover had appointed a Federal Farm Board to put the law into operation. The tariff legislation is progressing satisfactorily, he said, and promises to be settled "eight months faster than the last tariff bill."

Development of inland waterways, pledged by the President, is moving rapidly to fulfillment, said Secretary Hurley, with the development program regarded by the public more as a national affair than a sectional one.

The speaker lauded his party for its economy and tax reduction program which, he said, had cut taxes $160,000,000 a year. He cited President Hoover's South American trip as evidence of the efforts of the administration to foster good-will and, in the field of foreign commerce, recalled the program for the development of the merchant marine. Another accomplishment Secretary Hurley discussed was the prompt action of the President in the recent stock decline.

"Much has been said about the number of fact-finding commissions and committees the President has appointed," he said. "His action in this matter is in thorough keeping with the spirit and the traditions of the Republican party from Abraham Lincoln to Herbert Hoover. Its purpose has been to find the facts and to distill from them the truth before taking any action which affects the welfare of 120,000,000 Americans. With the growth and complexity of our national life no single man, no committee of Congress can take the time or acquire that specialized knowledge necessary to collect and evaluate the various angles of the many pressing problems. Your administration at Washington does not act before it knows the truth. When it finds the truth it acts quickly and decisively."

Lincoln's Influence in China.

Dr. Schurman and Dr. Hung, in addition to discussing Lincoln's contribution to his native land, spoke of his influence on other nations. Dr. Hung said that many leaders of China today were disciples of Lincoln and the creed of the Kuomintang was based on Lincoln's utterance on government by the people in his Gettysburg speech.

Lincoln and Bismarck were contrasted by Dr. Schurman as unifiers of their countries.

Dr. Schurman called for a greater interest in self-government by the public.

"As I have gone about the world the greatest danger I have seen for democracy," he said, "is the indifference of the people to their own government. No government can run itself. If a dictatorship is to last, even temporarily, the dictator must be day and night on the job. The fact that a democratic government is conducted by the people themselves is no guarantee that it will be republic, honest and efficient unless the people are deeply interested in it, take it home to their hearts and bosoms, exercise due watchfulness and vigilance, and render it faithful and energetic service."

The former Ambassador, who previously had served as envoy to China, also stressed Lincoln's effect upon modern China.

Mr. Lawrence in his introductory remarks singled out several of the members of the club who had attended the first Lincoln Day dinner of the club, given in Delmonico's. They were at a "veteran's table" and were former Judge Mortimer C. Adams, former Representative J. Van Vechten Olcott, William Leary and Andrew B. Humphrey. Robert W. Bonynge, also at the original dinner, sat on the dais.

NEGRO LAUDS LINCOLN IN ALBANY ASSEMBLY

Lamar Perkins, Legislator From Harlem, Urges Ending of Forces of Misunderstanding.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 12.—Assemblyman Lamar Perkins, a negro, the new Republican legislator from Harlem, made the Lincoln Day address in the House today. Assemblymen of both parties paid him the compliment of close attention and applauded him vigorously. He was congratulated by Speaker McGinnies. Mr. Perkins lauded the influence of Lincoln in the promotion of kindliness, tolerance and freedom. Lincoln, he said, was not a dim figure but "a vital living force today."

"The prejudices and hatred that have filled the world from the beginning of time," he said, "have been caused by a lack of understanding between men. When men consult together, misunderstandings and prejudices vanish. When men really know each other they begin to see and appreciate those finer qualities that they see in their friends. The hope of the world is that men will ultimately gather at the council table with their enemies.

"As this lonely figure of the past dedicated himself to a task of freedom and salvation, let us dedicate ourselves to a furtherance of that task and pledge ourselves that all men shall be free, not only of the physical bonds of slavery, but also free of those sinister mental forces of misunderstanding and misconception."

CALLS REDS "EXTRANEOUS."

Lawrence In Lincoln Speech Says Republicans Guard Liberty.

Standing before the Lincoln monument in Union Square and facing the Communist headquarters there, Richard W. Lawrence, president of the National Republican Club, declared yesterday that the Communist party represented an extraneous and unnecessary agency in the United States, as the Republican party had been founded to champion human over property rights. Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican President, was the outstanding seeker of human rights, but there must also be some protection of property rights if the individual is to be fully guarded, he declared.

Mr. Lawrence spoke at a Lincoln's birthday ceremony in which a wreath was placed on the monument by the club. Wreaths were also placed there during the day by the Daughters of the Civil War Veterans, the G. A. R. and other organizations.

Count Bailen Tells of Europe's Recognition of His Ability.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Feb. 12.—Speaking at the American business men's luncheon club, Count Bailen, chief of Premier Berenguer's diplomatic cabinet and his contact man, said: "When Abraham Lincoln, an almost unknown figure to Europe, came from the West, Europe had a picture of a wild man stepping forth from the land of painted Indians and savage beasts, so little did we know of the development of America's West. When Lincoln showed his tremendous keenness and wonderful ability for the first time Europe realized what a force lay in that West which was to become the backbone of a tremendous nation."

Jersey City Club in Lincoln Dinner.

The sixty-fifth dinner of the Lincoln Association of Jersey City, the oldest organization dedicated to the memory of the Civil War President in this country, was held last night at the Cartaret Club in Jersey City. The principal address was made by the Rev. John Wesley Hill, chancellor of the Lincoln Memorial University of Cumberland Gap, Tenn. About 250 attended.

LINCOLN UNIVERSITY SELECTS TRUSTEES

Proposed International School in Westchester Announces List at Dinner Here.

PEACE WORK EMPHASIZED

Prof. Dewey Says 250 Students Will Be Chosen Annually in America and Foreign Countries.

Professor John Dewey of Columbia University outlined the ideals and aims of the Abraham Lincoln University, an international school to be established in Westchester County, at the birthday dinner of the Abraham Lincoln Foundation at the Hotel Commodore last night. Professor Dewey stressed the peace aims of Lincoln. World peace in the final analysis rests on the mental state of the world and must be a result of mental disarmament rather than physical disarmament, he said.

Roy Curtiss, president of the foundation, told briefly of the purpose of the university and announced:

"Tonight we have passed another milestone in our progress. We come before you and the world to announce the selection of the first board of trustees, to report that the work of the foundation has been extended through this State and through the country, that Governors' committees have been organized in many States and that valuable contacts have been made in others, and that, organization now well under way, world understanding through education in the name of the Great Emancipator of People is rapidly becoming a reality."

Dr. JOHN DEWEY of Columbia University.
Dr. MICHAEL I. PUPIN of Columbia University.
Dr. DAVID STARR JORDAN, president emeritus of Leland Stanford Jr. University.
CHARLES H. TUTTLE, United States Attorney for the Southern New York District.
Dr. WILLIAM B. MILLAR, executive secretary of the Greater New York Federation of Churches.
FLEM D. SAMPSON, Governor of Kentucky.
GEORGE M. VERITY, president of the American Rolling Mills of Middletown, Ohio.
Dean WILLIAM H. METZLER of the New York State College for Teachers.
Dr. ARNOLD BENNETT HALL, president of the University of Oregon.
Dr. MARY E. WOOLLEY, president of Mount Holyoke College.
Dr. EUGENE RANDOLPH SMITH, president of Beaver Hill Country Day School, Brookline, Mass.
ROY CURTISS, president of the Abraham Lincoln Foundation.

"At least fifteen additional names of prominent men and women from all sections of the country will be added to this board from time to time," Mr. Curtiss said.

Lauds Lincoln's Peace Aims.

Professor Dewey said that although Lincoln "was the guide of a distracted nation through a great war, it is his devotion to the cause of peace that has enshrined him in our hearts." He said that it was characteristic of Lincoln that his broad and sympathetic view extended beyond the Civil War and asked his people "to do all which may achieve a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

The Lincoln University, Professor Dewey said, will carry forward Lincoln's ideal of universal peace among all nations. He declared that physical disarmament is no guarantee of peace.

Professor Dewey said that Lincoln University will take 250 students a year selected for their qualities of character and leadership in their own communities—their "Lincoln-mindedness," he phrased it. There will be two from each State in the United States and the balance from foreign countries. These pupils will be trained in a six-year course, comprising a senior high school and college by a faculty of twenty-five members carefully selected and who will have free time to study and plan the courses before starting to teach.

Other speakers were Joe Mitchell Chapple and S. K. Ratcliffe, a British journalist and former Member of Parliament. Dr. Millar presided. The program was broadcast over Station WOR.

LONDON GETS LINCOLN BUST

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Andrew O'Connor's bust of Abraham Lincoln, a gift to the City of London from the Irish-American sculptor, was unveiled in the Royal Exchange today by the Lord Mayor, Sir William Waterlow, in the presence of Ambassador Dawes, American Consul General Halstead and other prominent Americans and Englishmen.

The presentation of the bust was made by the Marquess of Crewe, speaking for the Marquess of Reading, chairman of the Lincoln committee. Lord Crewe said the bust was a "lasting memorial of our homage to a most notable life and our friendship with a land that Lincoln loved."

The Lord Mayor, after drawing aside the British-American flags draped in front of the bust, said Lincoln was one to whom all nations pay tribute, adding that the unity he brought to the United States now is extended throughout the world.

The bust was carved in Paris in 1928 from a block of limestone quarried near Springfield, Ill. Of heroic size, it portrays Lincoln in middle age before the Civil War, bringing out the statesman's great simplicity as well as his strength.

The sculptor, who was present, was congratulated by Ambassador Dawes and others on his work.

Deaths in State Outside This City Total 80 for Week Ended Feb. 1.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 12 (AP).—The death toll of pneumonia in New York State increased 33 per cent during the week ended Feb. 1, with eighty deaths reported from all parts of the State exclusive of New York City, compared with sixty deaths in the previous week. In the same period 350 cases of the disease were reported to the State Health Department, compared with 302 in the preceding week.

Measles headed the list of communicable diseases as regards prevalence, with 453 cases reported, but only one death. Whooping cough ranked a close second, with 452 cases reported, but no deaths.

TUTTLE AVOIDS TALK OF WAR ON DRINKERS

Asked About Policy Should Any Be Arrested, He Waves Away 'Academic' Questions.

NEW HOTEL RAIDS POSSIBLE

Campbell Indicates He Has Further Data on Violations—Cost of Two Drives Put in Thousands.

Prohibition Administrator Maurice Campbell's announcement that he intended, henceforth, to cause the arrest and prosecution of individuals found with liquor in their possession in public places was received by other Federal officials yesterday in absolute silence.

United States Attorney Tuttle, whose office would have charge of the prosecution of such prohibition law offenders, parried more than a score of questions about the Administrator's dictum without disclosing either his official or personal reaction to this latest and most daring enforcement pronouncement.

When reporters asked him, as a matter of law, what he would do should such a defendant appear before him, he talked smilingly of "academic" questions and could "see no reason" why he should be asked to "deliver a lecture" on the subject. When asked if he would seek a padlock against a place where nothing stronger than cracked ice or ginger ale had been sold, he replied that he could not discuss such a matter until he had something definite before him.

After answers like these, which told his questioners nothing of his attitude or intention beyond that he did not think it timely to talk on the subject, Mr. Tuttle directed attention to Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pennsylvania, who was in his office.

Porter Tells of Padlocking.

Mr. Porter, who has voted wet consistently, volunteered the information that the Parody Club, in Washington, actually had been padlocked for a considerable period on the charge of selling "accessories," such as ginger ale and mineral waters, to persons known to want them merely for mixing them with alcoholic beverages.

Major Campbell said yesterday he had raided several malt and hop stores on charges of selling materials for the manufacture of illegal beverages, but admitted he had never been able to obtain a conviction against any defendant held on such charges.

He refused to say whether he had agents living in other New York hotels and eating at restaurants near by, as he had in the case against the Cornish Arms and Cavanagh's restaurant, which were raided on Tuesday night. He would not say whether other hotels were to be raided, but his attitude seemed to indicate he had by no means exhausted his information of prohibition law violations in public places.

"The great majority of the hotels," Major Campbell said, "are living up to a pledge given me two years ago that they would make every effort to see that the prohibition law was enforced in their establishments. We have not been taking it for granted that they would live up to their agreement. We have been checking up and we have found only a small minority of hotels owners permitting violations.

"In some cases we have been notified by hotel managers who had discovered that bootleggers had corrupted their help and were sending liquor through waiters and bellboys to their guests."

Will Confer on Hotel Cases.

Major Campbell said that he and Mr. Tuttle would confer soon on whether to seek padlocks for closing the Cornish Arms and the Hotel Manger in their entirety, or to proceed against only those rooms and other places in which liquor was sold to Federal agents.

The recent hotel raids have recalled the series of night club raids here some time ago which were brought about by Federal agents who had lived in luxury at the best hotels and spent large sums in resorts in their search for evidence.

Major Campbell said nothing about the cost of keeping Federal agents at the Cornish Arms and the Hotel Manger where, according to reports, they purchased fine wines as well as whiskey and other drinks, but their bills were estimated unofficially in the thousands of dollars, the spending of which by the government has thus far netted the arrest of about thirty waiters and bellboys and several alleged bootleggers.

The reaction among anti-prohibitionists to Major Campbell's decision to arrest the individual drinker in public places was one of approval in several instances yesterday. It was held that, if the administrator carried out his threat seriously, it would do more to bring about modification of the dry laws than anything else yet attempted and would so clutter the courts that their already retarded progress would result in hopeless congestion.

Mortimer Hays, attorney for John F. Murray, receiver in equity for the Cornish Arms, said yesterday Mr. Murray had been notified that a warrant was issued for him charging prohibition law violation and was on his way here.

"I cannot but believe," Mr. Hays continued, "that the charge is merely technical, as Mr. Murray was in Florida all the time the Federal agents were in the hotel and knew nothing of any violation of law. Before Mr. Murray's departure for Florida he obtained from each bellboy his signature to a statement that he would consider himself discharged if he ever sold liquor in the hotel.

"I do not think it would be justifiable to padlock rooms occupied by transients who might have purchased liquor without the knowledge of the hotel management."

None of the persons arrested in the raids on the Cornish Arms or Cavanagh's restaurant was arraigned yesterday.

Visit Lincoln's Ancestral Home.

READING, Pa., Feb. 12 (AP).—Abraham Lincoln's ancestors having lived in Berks County, his birth anniversary was observed today with special exercises in city and county schools and there was an increased number of pilgrims to the Lincoln homestead. Mordecai Lincoln Jr. built the homestead in Exeter Township more than 200 years ago. A suitable marker has been erected there by the Historical Society of Berks County.

RIGHTS OF LABOR SEEN BY LINCOLN, SAYS GREEN

His Realization of Working Man's Need for Freedom Asserted by Federation Head Here.

Abraham Lincoln's conception of the relationship which should exist between capital and labor, as reflected in his public addresses, published articles and State papers, was described last night by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at the annual Lincoln's birthday dinner given by the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. Mr. Green's address was broadcast over Station WEAF and the nation-wide hook-up of the National Broadcasting Company.

Declaring that Lincoln evidently grasped the economic fallacy upon which the institution of human slavery was based, Mr. Green said that Lincoln also realized, perhaps far in advance of other men, that free labor was essential to national greatness and national prosperity.

"The conclusion must be reached," Mr. Green said, "that according to Lincoln's philosophy working people should be permitted to exercise the right to organize for mutual protection, cooperation and collective bargaining."

He quoted from a speech at Hartford, Conn., on March 5, 1860, in which Lincoln said that he "thanked God that we have a system of labor where there can be a strike. Whatever the pressure, there is a point where the working man may stop."

531 Scholarships Awarded in One Southern College.

The Lincoln Scholarship Fund, during the first year of its operation paid the tuition of the entire student body of a Southern college, thus enabling the institution to continue functioning, J. B. Vandever, president of the Lincoln Scholarship Fund, 1 East Forty-second Street, revealed yesterday. There were 531 students financed in this college in addition to grants to 286 students in other schools.

"Business and bank failures in the home State of this college brought about conditions several months ago that made it impossible for the students there to pay their tuition and fees," Mr. Vandever explained. "This fine old institution was about to close its doors when the matter was brought to our attention. If our fund never does anything else, this opportunity to take care of a serious situation justifies our existence."

LOUIS E. KIRSTEIN, Boston, vice president.
Mrs. MAUDE B. CLARKE, New York, secretary.
HERMAN A. METZ, New York, treasurer.
WILLIAM R. BULL, New York, assistant treasurer.
JAMES E. SCHAFER, executive secretary.

ORDERS 46 CHANGES IN WAVE LENGTHS

18 EFFECTIVE ON MARCH 2

Date of 28 Others, Including 17 on Cleared Channels, Hinges on Early Mutual Consent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Important changes in the channels of 1,460, 1,470, 1,480 and 1,490 kilocycles, affecting eighteen broadcasting stations, and changes in frequencies for twenty-eight other stations, of which seventeen are on cleared channels, were ordered today by the Federal Radio Commission in the most drastic broadcasting change since Nov. 11, 1928, when the present general reallocation plan went into effect.

The two plans are separate and have no connection with each other. In the case of the eighteen stations the changes of frequency take effect on March 2, and in the case of the cleared channels, the commission asked the twenty-eight stations concerned to cooperate in the plan, without setting any definite time when the changes shall become effective.

"In order to lessen cross-talk interference on the channels 1,460, 1,470, 1,480 and 1,490 kilocycles," says the order, "the commission has decided it was in the public interest, convenience and necessity to change the frequency assignment of several stations."

WHBO, Auburn, N. Y., 1,310.
WLEX, Lexington, Mass., 1,410.
WSSH, Boston, 1,410.
WMAF, Dartmouth, Mass., 1,410.
WTNT, Nashville, 1,470.
WLAC, Nashville, 1,470.
KPWF, Westminster, Cal., 1,490.
WCKY, Crescent Springs, Ky., 1,490.
WORD, Batavia, Ill., 1,490.
WSOA, Deerfield, Ill., 1,490.
WJAZ, Mount Prospect, Ill., 1,490.
KFJF, Oklahoma City, 1,480.
KGA, Spokane, 1,470.
WJSV, Mount Vernon Hills, Va., 1,460.
KSTP, St. Paul, 1,460.
WLEY, Lexington, Mass., 1,470.

Buffalo and Rochester Affected.

It was only after several months of investigation that the commission decided to order changes in the twenty-eight other broadcasting station frequencies in various parts of the country, in order to eliminate interference which has arisen as a result of insufficient geographical separation between stations on adjacent channels.

The only stations in the first zone affected would be WKEN, Buffalo, a limited time station which would be changed from its present assignment of 1,040 kilocycles to 1,060 kilocycles, and WHAM, at Rochester, which is now operating on 1,150 and would be changed to 1,160 kilocycles.

The stations on cleared channels affected by the proposed change, in addition to the two already mentioned, with the suggested new assignments, are:

WHAS, Louisville, Ky., 1,020.
KTHS, Hot Springs, Ark., 1,070.
KRLD, Dallas, 1,070.
WTAM, Cleveland, 1,080.
WBT, Charlotte, N. C., 1,040.
KMOX, St. Louis, 1,110.
WRVA, Richmond, Va., 1,150.
KSL, Salt Lake City, 1,090.
WAPI, Tulsa, Okla., 1,130.
KVOO, Birmingham, Ala., 1,130.
WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind., 1,160.
WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., 1,160.

KEX, Portland, Ore., 1,170.

GREEFF DENIES ENDING CITY AMBULANCE PLAN

Says Decision Hinges on Whether Money Will Be Furnished for Project.

Expressing surprise at published reports that the city had dropped its plan to inaugurate a municipal ambulance service for Brooklyn to replace the service now given under contract by sixteen private hospitals, Dr. J. G. William Greeff, Commissioner of Hospitals, said last night that the matter was still undecided and depended largely on whether the city would appropriate money to buy ambulances.

According to Commissioner Greeff, the Hospital Department is still considering two possible plans: one, to raise the yearly allotment for an ambulance furnished by a private hospital from $3,500 to $4,500, and the second to establish its own ambulance service. Members of the Brooklyn ambulance conference said on Tuesday that Thomas J. Cox, Deputy Hospital Commissioner, had offered them the increase, with the understanding that private hospitals were to retain control of the ambulance service. Dr. James E. Holmes, superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Brooklyn, was quoted as saying the department had abandoned its plan for municipal service.

The Hospital Department must go to the Board of Estimate to obtain funds for the purchase of at least thirty city ambulances or to provide for the increase in the yearly payments received by private hospitals. Mayor Walker, William Schroeder Jr., former Hospital Commissioner, and Dr. Greeff have said that the city ambulance service is preferable to private service because the city should have direct supervision over ambulances. Commissioner Greeff said he would make his own announcement when the matter was finally settled.

600 OHIO MINERS STRIKE.

Workers at Bellaire Quit in Protest at Proposed Wage Cut.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Feb. 12 (AP).—Protesting a proposed wage reduction of 10 per cent, between 600 and 700 miners at the Powhattan Mining Company mine here today went on a strike.

The strike was decided upon last night at a mass meeting at which David Martin, Cleveland, organizer for the National Miners Union, and Miss Lil Andrews, Cleveland, organizer of the youths' section of the union, were speakers.

There were no disorders. The strike followed a similar protest strike at the Glendale (W. Va.) Coal Company mines in Glendale several days ago.

PROGRAMS FROM EUROPE.

Talks and Music to Be Broadcast From Holland and Germany.

Two radio presentations from abroad, one from Holland and the other from Germany, have been arranged for rebroadcast this week-end over the nation-wide networks of the National Broadcasting Company.

The first is to be received from the Berlin studios of the Reichs Rundfunk Gesellschaft, the German broadcasting organization, and will be heard in this country over WOR and WJZ chain tomorrow night from 5:30 to 6:15 Eastern Standard Time. William Hard, representative of the American radio organization, who is touring Europe and now is in Germany, will be a speaker on the program. He is to discuss the German attitude toward the Young plan, and "Contemporary Germany." A musical program will follow.

On Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, New York time, the Holland program will be rebroadcast by WOR, WJZ, WEAF and associated stations. Part of the presentation will be an address by Bernard C. J. Loder, former Chief Judge of the World Court for International Justice. A special musical presentation will be picked up from the studio of Station PHI, at Eindhoven, Holland.

Today two rebroadcasts from Europe will be heard over WOR, WJZ and chain, and WABC'S network, respectively. Vernon Bartlett, commentator of the British Broadcasting Company at the London Naval Arms Conference, will be heard at 4:20 P. M. over WOR, WJZ and chain as he gives a "Résumé of of the Naval Parity." At 8:15 o'clock tonight over WABC's system Frederick William Wile, representative of the Columbia chain at London, will be heard on "The Five-Power Naval Conference."

Bride of Two Days Vanishes.

While Joseph Pinter of Malden, Mass., was visiting his mother, Mrs. Mary Pinter, 17 years old, his bride of two days, disappeared last Monday from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lengyel of 382 Warburton Avenue, Hastings-on-Hudson. The bride, who is blond, weighs about 150 pounds, and is 6 feet 6 inches tall, took no luggage save a purse, a wedding gift, containing $60. No motive for the disappearance was given by the parents yesterday.

CHURCHMAN GETS THREAT OF HAYS SUIT

JOURNAL DEFIES HIM TO ACT

Maintains Its Charges Are True and Announces It Will Continue to Publish Them.

Legal action to halt allegedly defamatory articles appearing in The Churchman, a Protestant Episcopal journal, is threatened by Will Hays and his associates in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, Inc., the paper revealed through its columns yesterday. It also asserted that it intends to continue printing the articles in question.

In its Feb. 15 issue the magazine prints a letter received from Cook, Nathan & Lehman of 20 Pine Street, the attorneys for Mr. Hays, as well as a short statement of what it has been doing and what it will continue to do. The letter says:

"No one engaged in work in which the public may be said to have an interest and which is of general concern has a right to object to comment or criticism, provided it be fair and be made with an honest purpose, and had your publications been so limited there could have been no ground for objection by the corporation or the individuals I represent.

"When comment or criticism, however, exceeds the bounds of fair and honest criticism and becomes an intemperate, aspersive attack on motive and character, an evil and malicious motive for the publication is inferable.

"While it has been brought to my attention that the writer of the articles has boasted his object was to attack the chief officers of Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, Inc., I am hopeful that he will awake to the recognition that such an animus reflects only on himself, even as I am hopeful that you will conclude that such an attack on individuals, imputing dishonorable motives, unqualifiedly condemned in the law, should not be tolerated by a journal which is claimed to be dedicated to high religious purposes.

"Even though you may think that these are furthered by your constant references to Mr. Hays as a Presbyterian, to Mr. Milliken as a Baptist, to Colonel Joy as a Methodist, and to the movie producers as shrewd Hebrews who make big money selling crime and shame, thus emphasizing your own Episcopalian creed as someting above and apart, I am convinced that your readers cannot accept your attitude, if for no other reason than that it is un-American.

"Unless a retraction is forthcoming in your paper and I can have the prompt assurance of such a change in the character of your articles that they will hereafter substitute for defamation that fair comment and criticism which is every one's right and which Motion Picture Producers and Distributers and the individuals at all times freely invite, I have been instructed to institute against The Churchman Company and you and your associates the proceedings which the law provides." The letter was signed by Alfred A. Cook.

The Churchman's reply to it was:

"In reply to the above communication The Churchman can say only that its sole motive in dealing with the motion picture problem and the men who are responsible for creating it has been to promote the interest of public morality, the welfare of the young, the protection of the American home; to prevent the spreading of ill-fame abroad and to aid the churches in resisting the demoralizing influences arrayed against them in the interest of a sordid money-making combination which stands convicted in the United States courts of conspiracy and coercion.

"It has done this and proposes to continue under the right of a newspaper as laid down by Alexander Hamilton in the case of Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States, against Henry Croswell, to wit: 'It consists in the right to publish with impunity, truth, with good motives, for justifiable ends, though reflecting on government, magistracy or individuals.'"

De Martino's Address Misquoted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A typographical error in today's NEW YORK TIMES gave a wrong twist to a statement made last night by Nobile Giacomo de Martino, Ambassador of Italy, in a radio address broadcast from Washington. Through the omission of a letter the Ambassador was made to appear to say that the Italians in America "have in their hearts the devotion to our glorious flag and the pride of belonging to their ancient race." What he did say was "devotion to your glorious flag," meaning the American flag.

BOOK 200 AT HARVARD AFTER 'EL' TRAIN RIOT

Police Keep Students in Cars They Had Wrecked Till All Are Down on Blotter.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12.—More than 200 Harvard undergraduates, who had wrecked two cars of a four-car train bringing them back to the college after their team had won a hockey victory over University Club, were booked here tonight on charges of damaging a public conveyance.

The game was held in Boston. When it ended the undergraduates crowded into the first two cars of the train, a unit of the Boston elevated line, and began their celebration. They ripped the advertising posters out of place, broke the car windows, smashed the lights and sang their songs of victory.

The non-student passengers kept to the two last cars, but some one at a station along the way telephoned to the police. At Central Station, the last stop before Harvard Square, the train was met by Cambridge police and railroad police.

Letting all other passengers out, the policemen locked the students into the first two cars and ordered the motorman to drive to the Boston elevated yards in Elliot Square. Here the students were released, one by one, but not until they gave up their burser's cards to establish their identification.

A patrol wagon that had been rushed to the yards served as an office for the police clerical force and in it the names of the prisoners were written in the blotter. The police said the Boston Elevated Line would act as complainant, and if the students did not pay for the damage the charges would be pressed.

Henry P. Conway of Lowell, Mass., first year student in Harvard Engineering School, was the only one actually taken into custody. He was removed at Central Station and was booked on a charge of destroying the peace on a public conveyance.

WOMAN A VICE-CONSUL.

Mrs. Daisy de H. Morse of Brazil Gets Appointment Here.

Mrs. Daisy de Holstein Morse, youthful Brazilian, attached to the Brazilian Embassy in New York, by an appointment yesterday has achieved the distinction of being the first Vice Consul of her sex to serve her country in New York. The appointment, made by Sebastino Sampaio, Brazilian Consul General here, was approved by the Brazilian Government and a certificate of recognition was signed by Joseph P. Cotton, Acting Secretary of State.

Mrs. Morse was until her appointment yesterday one of the career secretaries of the Consulate General of Brazil here, occupying the position vacated four years ago by her husband, Jayme de Holstein Morse.

EMILIE BOYD WEDS STEPHEN H. PLUM JR.

BROTHER ESCORTS BRIDE

Her Sister Is Maid of Honor—Reception Is Held at Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Miss Emilie Jaclin Boyd, daughter of Mrs. John Jaclin Boyd of South Orange, N. J., and the late Mr. Boyd, was married to Stephen Haines Plum Jr., son of Mrs. Stephen Haines Plum of Newark and the late Mr. Plum, yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Holy Communion in South Orange. The Rev. George A. Hanna, rector, performed the ceremony, which was a full choral service. The bride was escorted by her brother John Jaclin Boyd, who gave her in marriage. ## FIRE ROUTS 100 DINERS.

$30,000 Yonkers Blaze Halts Holy Name Tribute to Father Rossi.

For the second time in six months, the two-story building at 5 and 7 North Broadway, Yonkers, was swept by fire on Tuesday night. About 100 diners who were honoring the Rev. Ercole J. Rossi, rector of Mount Carmel Catholic Church, were routed. Damage was estimated at $30,000.

The fire, the cause of which was not determined, started in the basement of the building. In the Vesuvio Restaurant on the second floor, the Holy Name Society was giving a dinner to Father Rossi, at which the Rev. Joseph Pernicone was toastmaster. Police notified the diners to leave and they passed out, in orderly fashion, through the smoke-filled hallway to the street. No one was injured. Three stores on the ground floor of the building were badly damaged.

NANETTE GUILFORD TO SEEK A DIVORCE

Opera Singer to Ask Freedom From Max Rosen on Ground of Incompatibility.

Miss Nanette Guilford, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will file suit for divorce from her husband, Max Rosen, concert violinist, on grounds of incompatibility of temperament, she announced yesterday from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius L. Guilford, at 260 West End Avenue, where she is now living. She is convinced, Miss Guilford said, that it is "very difficult for two musical artists to make a success of married life."

Their marriage interrupted an afternoon stroll on Nov. 23, 1928, when both decided that the day and the weather were propitious for the ceremony and that the time to get married was at once. They engaged a taxicab, drove at once to the Municipal Building and were married. Their separation was announced a week later.

Two years earlier Miss Guilford, who was known as the "baby star" of the Metropolitan because she sang leading roles when only 18 years old, confided to a women interviewer that marriage, in her opinion, essential to a gifted singer. "Without them," she said of the experience of love and marriage, "a woman would be hard and unfeeling. She would have no understanding of the lovely emotions an unselfish love arouses, and her singing would not show any genuine emotion unless she had experienced something greater than herself in her life."

Discounts on Hangings
SOMEWHERE and sometime ago, a baron of the realm hung his baronial halls with 'broidered and 'blazoned tapestries! Perhaps he did it to mark his victories... his probable reason was to keep out drafts. But anyway he originated a decorative idea of superb merit, one that Ovington's fosters and encourages in February with discounts of 10% to 50%. All our lovely hangings are so reduced!

A REPUBLICAN UPSET.

The Second Massachusetts Congress District is thirty-eight years old. For the first time in its history it has elected a Democratic Representative. Like the First District, it originally belonged to the old Twelfth District, strong Republican territory represented by such men as HENRY L. DAWES and Governor ROBINSON. "Rock-ribbed" as it was, that great Republican enclave was not insensible to popular dissatisfaction. Its choice of a Democratic Representative in 1890 was a premonition of Republican defeat in 1892. In 1910, likewise a year of unsavory omen to the Republicans, Mr. GILLETT, member for the Second District for thirty-two years, squeezed through by a plurality of less than 500.

Sons of the prophets will roll these prognostications and this new augury as a sweet morsel under their tongues. Everybody to his pleasure; and hope and exaggeration are pleasurable to most of us. The district is Wet. It showed that in its vote on the prohibition referendum in 1928. The deceased Republican member, to fill whose unexpired term the special election was held, was a Wet. Governor SMITH carried the district by a small plurality. Mr. GRIGGS, the Republican nominee, is a man of admitted ability. He was a little too clever. A good Dry in the Legislature, he knew the district was Wet. He wanted to be elected. So he plumped for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. This seemed a rather violent somersault. He mitigated and wabbled.

If a candidate for the full term in the Fall, he might reverse his position of this Winter. Naturally, this prudence was not well seen by a good many voters. It was a queer canvass. "Please vote for GRIGGS, "who is against the Eighteenth "Amendment," the voters were told in effect, "to support Mr. HOOVER, who is for it." The Democratic candidate, a Springfield lawyer, is an old Notre Dame athlete, seventy-six inches high, popular, "dripping Wet." A Wet district is entitled to a genuine, unequivocal Wet. Such seems to have been the disposition of the majority of the voters. In 1928 the Republican candidate had a majority of nearly 8,500 in a total vote of 96,000. The total vote cast Tuesday was 57,000, decidedly heavy for a by-election. Mr. GRANFIELD won by a majority of 5,252. Two Dry candidates between them got a little more than 1,100 votes.

It was a black day for prohibition and prohibition Republicans. The Second District consists of three small cities, Chicopee, Mr. COOLIDGE's Northampton and Springfield, and thirteen towns. Even small cities are wicked. The Republicans looked for help to the virtue of the towns. Every precinct of Chicopee was carried by the Democrats. Northampton, where a Republican Mayor was chosen in December, gave a Democratic majority of 1,100. Springfield's 8,000 majority for the Republican candidate for Representative in 1928 melted into a 3,000 majority for GRANFIELD. Six towns, including Agawam of the Simple Cobbler, joined the urban nullifiers. In some of the rest GRIGGS was "badly cut." In neither city nor country was there any consolation for the Republicans.

It is almost indelicate to remind the suffering Bay State brethren of that saying of their much-abused National Committeeman LIGGETT: "It would be easy to nominate Dry "candidates, but exceedingly diffi- "cult to elect them." Prohibition was the cardinal issue in the Second District. It is vain to estimate the part which subsidiary causes may have had: soreness since the stock market crash, normal reaction in the second year of an Administration, depression in certain industries. Senator WALSH was strong on "discontent and unrest"; but he is the imaginative gentleman who sees the result in the Second District as a popular rebuke of "the failure of the "Administration to recognize and "express understanding and sym- "pathy with unemployment and gen- "eral business curtailment."

The Boston Herald perceives in it "an undercurrent of anger at the "treatment which Massachusetts, "New England and the industrial "East have received." That is, too many Massachusetts Republicans are turning to the Democrats to express their dissatisfaction with the Coalitionists. That is a singular method of political punishment. At least one domestic policy of the Administration has been kicked in the head in Massachusetts. Will "Republican prosperity" have a higher visibility by next Fall?

RESTRICTING SUBMARINES.

England and the United States were predestined losers in the effort to abolish the submarine. No one knew it better than they. In their announced joint purpose to ask the Naval Conference to do away with the submarine entirely they virtually admitted defeat in advance, since they spoke of the alternative policy of limiting and regulating undersea warships. This was very like an open invitation to France and Japan to insist upon retaining the submarine, which the representatives of those two countries promptly proceeded to do at London on Tuesday. Thereupon nothing was left but to make the best of it.

This Secretary STIMSON did when he announced to the correspondents that he regarded the agreement to subject the submarines to the ordinary rules of war governing surface vessels as a very great positive achievement, and alone "worth the "visit of the American delegation "here in London." What he had in mind was the fact that France, while refusing to abandon the submarine, had expressed her willingness to make its operations conform to "the principle of humanity which "is the foundation of international "law." Next followed, as Mr. STIMSON remarked, the passage of a resolution directing a committee to prepare an agreement for signature by all naval powers "forbidding sub- "marines to act toward merchant "ships otherwise than in strict con- "formity with rules either present "or future to be observed by surface "warships."

It was, as the American Secretary of State said in his address to the Conference on Tuesday, not the use of the submarine but its abuse which "finally determined the entry of my own country into the conflict." This is what justified him in his subsequent statement to the correspondents, that the first positive action taken by the Naval Conference had vindicated and established for the future a principle in defense of which "our country once went to war." Another observation of his regarding the inhuman employment of the submarine in the World War was to the effect that he was speaking not of a theory but "of historical fact, and a "fact which human experience "shows is likely to be repeated." This has been taken to imply that he doubted whether any nation, once at war for its very life, would hesitate to use the submarine unlawfully, even if it had agreed by treaty not to do so. But that was said before the later action was taken so gratifying to Mr. STIMSON. It also has to be interpreted by his reference to the Briand-Kellogg pact and its "solemn covenants." If they morally bind the nations to move against the country guilty of an aggressive war, much more would they compel action against a belligerent waging war without regard to humane restrictions. Thus it would appear that it is as important to strengthen and make more explicit the multilateral treaty renouncing war as it is to enact regulations governing the use of submarines.

PROCEEDING AGAINST CRIME.

The opening of the year finds peace authorities expecting a recurrence of "the crime wave." Chicago is very busy at the moment, dealing on a wholesale basis with criminals. Judge ROSALSKY said the other day from the bench that he fears an upcurve of the anti-social line here. A police inspector had told his Honor that seventy-two serious offenses against the law were committed in New York City one night last week. This is enough to arouse the Police Department and its Commissioner when he returns from his holiday in Florida. But it is questionable whether the Chicago "round-up" method now in progress is effective. Mr. WHALEN tried that plan at least once in this city. There is no sign that its value is more than temporary. Chicago's chief bases the "round-up" on the idea that it harasses criminals to a point which impels them to leave so uncomfortable a town. Up to yesterday morning, however, he had held very few of the 2,181 who were brought to headquarters. Will one night in jail persuade the vast majority that they must leave Chicago? One result of the raid was finding thirty-three prisoners in possession of revolvers, which puts them in the shadow of prison. The Chicago chief thinks that if he can get the gunmen, he can stop the robberies and the gang murders. So far as his own function is concerned, that may be sound. But the law and the courts have the final decision.

New York City often sees juries acquit persons charged with and even closely identified with crime. In the Bravate case the alibi could not be broken down. Juries cannot be expected to resist the pleas of clever defense lawyers if the State does not make out a case. Judge ROSALSKY did his part on the day he spoke of the crime wave by sentencing a man for whom many appealing arguments for clemency were made. But judges cannot compel verdicts from juries except in statutory instances, and if District Attorneys bring weak cases into court, verdicts cannot be expected. Judge CRAIN complained this week that business men do not "cooperate" sufficiently with the authorities to help put down and punish crime. Business men might answer that about all they can do is to pay the taxes which maintain the punitive agencies. When these fall down, business men can't do anything about it until next election day.

Necessarily, the fight against crime is continuous. Round-ups and bringing suspects to trial solely "because the public demands it" are not so effective as a steady and common purpose by police, courts and public. The public makes up juries, but these have not been the chief trouble in New York City or anywhere else in the country. The alliance between the underworld and politicians, and the incompetence of some of the authorities, are chiefly responsible.

THE CLOTHING INDUSTRY.

With the settlement of the dressmakers' strike the clothing industry in New York City will have won back, in the main, to a stable basis. The conflicts of recent years have been concerned chiefly with that part of the industry engaged in the production of women's clothing, and have been waged, from the labor side, by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Last Summer this organization conducted a strike in the cloak and suit branches involving perhaps 30,000 workers. The dressmakers' strike involved a somewhat larger number.

In sharp contrast with the International has been the experience of the other great organization in the needle trades, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, comprising the operatives on men's clothing. The recent annals of the Amalgamated have been happy in being comparatively blank. When the name has come before the public it has not been in connection with conflict, but with constructive experiment and progress. The Amalgamated is mentioned in the development of the new labor-union philosophy of guaranteed output in return for fair wages and good working conditions, or in connection with labor banking, or with cooperative home ownership as exemplified in the model apartment house development in the Van Cortlandt Park section.

The chief reason why the story of the Amalgamated has been so cheerful and the path of the International Ladies' Garment Workers has been so hard lies outside of strictly industrial matters. The answer is the Communist movement. The Amalgamated Workers did not escape the attention of the Communist zealots, whose policy with regard to the labor union movement everywhere is either to capture or to destroy. Whether through good luck or the skill of its leadership or both, the Amalgamated met the Communist attack and beat it off without excessive strain. Possibly the Amalgamated venture in Moscow, where the organization established clothing factories that have long since disappeared, was a form of ransom. Less fortunate was the experience of the International. It fell later under the Communist attack, but showed no such powers of resistance. In 1926 the Left element took control and conducted the disastrous six months' cloakmaker strike, from the economic effects of which the union has not yet recovered. The losses of that strike and of the strikes in the fur trade, where conditions were similar, by their very severity effected a cure. The radical leadership was ousted and the work of reconstruction was begun.

In this work an essential procedure has been the strikes which were such chiefly in name. They have been rather stoppages to which the entire industry resorted for a common purpose. In the cloak trade as in the dress trade the better manufacturers have been with the union in the main. The entire industry suffered from degenerative processes which had crept in with the years and had been enormously favored by internal strife in the unions. The results of twenty years of effort on the part of enlightened labor leaders and employers and of representative citizens were being undone by the return of the sweatshop. Against it the high-standard manufacturers found it increasingly difficult to compete. In the main, the same condition held for other factors in the industry, the jobbers and the subcontractors: the issue between industry on a civilized level or a relapse into the barbarous conditions of twenty-five years ago. It is a matter for all-round gratification that the outcome bids fair to be in favor of progress and not decay.

HOW TO HARNESS THE RIVER.

Mr. CARLISLE's promise to cooperate with the State in the development of the latent power resources of the St. Lawrence advances that undertaking another step. The banking interests behind the Niagara-Hudson corporation had already, through Mr. LAMONT, made a similar pledge. It is now confirmed by the chairman of the company's executive board, long a leader in the up-State public utility field. Albany has been accustomed to consider water power chiefly in its political phases; Mr. CARLISLE dealt with the economics of the problem. Not even falling water can be turned into electricity free. It costs money to generate it and more money to distribute it. In industry it comes into direct competition with steam. Yet industry must always serve as the backlog of water-power development, no matter how much current is put at the elbow of the farmer and the housewife. It behooves the State to seek out the most economical means of exploiting the river.

Mr. HART, too, speaking for the State-wide Economic Conference, accepted the compromise bill "in principle." But he would amend it in such a way as to leave the commissioners free to choose between public and private development. As it stands, the bill gives public development a preferred standing; the alternative of private development under public ownership and control is to be considered only in the event that the Governor's power authority plan turns out to be "not feasible or practicable." But feasibility is hardly a sufficient criterion of the merits of the plan. In these days almost anything is "feasible." The army engineers, for example, found that it would be entirely feasible to route the proposed Great Lakes ship canal across New York State, but they reported against it on account of the expense. Similarly the water-power commission might find that the Governor's scheme was feasible but inferior to some other.

If the bill passes in its present form the Governor's appointees will have to judge for themselves just how far it commits them in advance to his plan. He has promised to appoint men of the calibre of Mr. HUGHES and ex-Governor SMITH. It should be noted that Mr. CARLISLE himself is full of confidence on this score. "I cannot conceive of any "man in this State who would ac- "cept appointment to a commission "as prominent as this who could not "and would not look honestly at the "whole problem," he declared. Let us hope he is right.

TWO THEATRE ENDOWMENTS.

Yesterday's theatrical news contained two items concerning subsidized playhouses. One is English, the other American. The former has for twenty years been struggling to find a spot where it can strike root. The other has just celebrated a birthday anniversary after fifteen years of ups and downs, sometimes amazingly successful, sometimes almost sunk under debt and discouragement, but always seething with activity even when its fine fury did not rise to the surface.

Plans for the establishment of the National Theatre and Shakespeare Memorial in England are moving slowly. The committee met this week at the House of Commons and put its seal of approval on one scheme which had been outlined. The details have not been revealed. The only fact announced is somewhat discouraging, one would think, to that part of the profession which has been urging the formation of a company before the selection of a building. In this announcement—that no site has been chosen for the theatre—is the quiet implication that nothing will be done until a plot of ground and the plans for the new theatre have been decided on.

When the backers of a theatre are governed, not by Parliament and the Prime Minister, but by their own wishes, a more flexible program may be managed. Yesterday the Misses LEWISOHN celebrated the organization of the Neighborhood Playhouse by announcing that it will expand in many directions next season. When their original house in Grand Street ended its career nearly three years ago, Miss ALICE made a prophetic little speech to the tearful assemblage of regular patrons, visitors from uptown, actors, porters, stagehands and ushers. She said that the enterprise was not dead; that, in fact, it had never been quite so lively, and that much was still to come from the project. What she foretold has come true. The organization has given some fine and interesting productions at the Manhattan Opera House in the last two years, and it has established a Neighborhood Playhouse school on Fifty-sixth Street. Next year it will cooperate with orchestras in other cities as it has done with the Cleveland Orchestra, taking certain productions on tour. Like the British National Theatre, it is looking for a site for a new theatre building. There must be room for the school and for studios and living quarters for students. This seems the more logical procedure. The family already exists. Now a home must be found for it.

PORTO RICO'S NEEDS.

The message which Governor THEODORE ROOSEVELT delivered to the Legislature of Porto Rico on Monday may point the way to a better era for a people who, even before they were stricken by the great hurricane, had been in a miserable economic state for many years. The story of their increase from 900,000 to 1,500,000 since the American flag went up on the island in 1898, of much unemployment and low wages, of malnutrition and widespread disease, is well known. Large scale production of sugar and tobacco has not benefited the small farmers and the agricultural laborers, who together form 90 per cent of the population. Recently there has been a strike of sugar-cane workers demanding more than 75 cents for a ten-hour day. The sugar industry produces half the wealth of Porto Rico, but, says LUIS MARIN, a local economist, "it is a bitter thing and we don't want any more of it." Tobacco as a crop is doing badly. One large company lately gave up planting and left the field to the small farmer.

Ever since he reached Porto Rico Governor ROOOSEVELT has been in conference with the local authorities to see what could be done to lift the people from despair. He has also traveled about the island to see conditions for himself. What, then, does he propose? Economy of administration and constructive measures of rehabilitation. He had found the municipalities in a "desperate" condition, taxes in arrears pledged against loans. He urged consideration of all sorts of services, public works, schools, health, a scientific budget everywhere. For the small farmers there must be bureaus to help them, like those in the United States; also improvement of market facilities and of transportation. Instruction of children in growing vegetables and fruits was one of his ideas. For the large sugar plantations he thought there should be a higher protective tariff.

New industries are vital. There is ample untouched water power. If more manufacturing plants are not established "the spectre of starva- "tion and unemployment will con- "tinue to haunt our poor people." Porto Rico, he said, should be "a "distributing point for Latin Amer- "ica." Publicity would bring tourists to the island every Winter. It was an illuminating address. Unless new industries can be made to prosper, Porto Rico will not be able to support her people in comfort.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

To Commemorate Audubon.

"I come," said a Southern orator to a Northern audience, "from the land of monuments and memories." This was a poetic way of saying that in the South there is a fixation of history by means of public memorials. Congress is steadily besieged to appropriate money for the erection of statues or buildings to local worthies. Seldom has a more appealing project been presented than in the joint bill which would set aside $100,000 for a memorial on the site of AUDUBON's mill at Henderson, Ky. The great naturalist roamed everywhere on this continent, leaving a priceless record of art and nature. But Kentucky was a favored observation ground. They say at Henderson:

> Here he passed his days of storm and strife, here he touched the heights of joy and the depths of despair. Here three of his four children were born. * * * Here he conducted his general merchandise store. * * * He is to Henderson what PENN is to Philadelphia. * * His birthday is kept by the children.

It is a powerful plea for the situs of a memorial which is certainly due AUDUBON.

What a Customs Official Should Know.

To the traveling public a customs officer is simply one of the inconveniences of passing from one country to another. There is no general sympathy with his unpleasant task of making people pay duties when they would rather not.

It might be supposed that it would be difficult to persuade applicants to line up for a job with so many disagreeable features. The civil service examinations in England for this work appear to present extraordinary difficulty—enough to warn off any but the most astute and erudite. The questions apparently take all knowledge to be a customs official's province.

One English test required a description of the duties of an umpire, the translation of a talking film and notes on BERNARD SHAW, WINSTON CHURCHILL and J. H. THOMAS. One question required an account of an egg and spoon race and of a Punch and Judy show. Another was, "What are 'safeguarding' duties on imports? What is to be said either for them or against them?" The entire paper was to be completed in an hour's time.

It is hard to see what bearing some of these questions have on a customs officer's duties. Perhaps there is some abstruse relation, apparent only to the psychologists or the composers of intelligence tests. Or it may be that the authorities believe that any man who can face so varied and comprehensive a test will be able to handle with tact and discretion the most difficult situation that could arise in the business of collecting duties and imposing fines.

Dog Haters at Work.

Mrs. IRENE CASTLE MCLAUGHLIN has been so good a friend of animals and so stout a champion in the cause of their humane treatment that she will have the sympathy of many people in the burning of her dog refuge at Lake Forest, Ill. It seems to have been of incendiary origin, because the telephone wires running into the keeper's lodge were found to be cut when the flames which destroyed the kennels first attracted the notice of the keeper's dog. His barking raised an alarm.

A hobby like that of Mrs. MCLAUGHLIN's—the salvage of homeless dogs—was sure to provoke the hostility of neighbors who regarded dogs as a nuisance. If a nuisance really existed it could have been abated by court proceedings. To burn down the shelter was an act of savagery. Like the spirited woman she is, Mrs. MCLAUGHLIN has decided to rebuild the kennels and continue her humane work.

In a suburb of Elizabeth, N. J., many licensed dogs, some of considerable value, were recently poisoned by an unknown. He made his rounds at night, throwing poisoned food into yards—so it was believed. The police could do nothing. At Lake Forest Mrs. MCLAUGHLIN is determined to prosecute if she can get evidence enough.

AN APPEAL FOR MALE HELP.

Why, Woman Asks, Should Her Sex Alone Be Urged to Aid Business?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We women sympathize deeply with the merchants who have lost through our recent fashions. We would like to help them. But why should the entire burden be laid upon us? We recommend that our brethren assist also. Why should they not adopt longer coats, with lovely uneven hems and a lot of trimming? They could surely, without inconvenience, wear them of shoe-top length, and with twenty or thirty millions of coats thus lengthened think how the woolen trade would profit!

Dear boys, you have pleaded for years for a cooler Summer costume. We will love you just the same if you take up cotton and linen exclusively in that season, with coats long and graceful, and with large, baggy trousers for both Winter and Summer. Trailing coats would be worn, of course, for evening, with many frills, ruffles and flounces. With these perfectly feasible reforms, the woolen, cotton and linen trades would spring forward like hounds from the leash.

We like the style of dress which we women have been privileged to wear for the past few years. Some have carried it to an extreme, but we could easily adapt it to our needs. It is light, loose, becoming and convenient. Why should we change it and our brethren be spared? We protest against this injustice. Rise up, our dear fathers, husbands, brothers and sons, and help your abused daughters, wives, sisters and mothers—threatened with a heavy inundation of long, over-decorated, hampering gowns, hard to make and hard to wear.

As for the return of the old corset, the ghosts of the countless unborn infants and fair young mothers murdered by it in the past, and of the millions of young girls and women whose health was ruined by it, rise up in a pathetic army and plead against it. The corset-makers will have to suffer and be still. We haven't the heart to make even our men wear corsets. But we like our present costume. The Orientals never change their costume. Why should we?

Don't make us change. Do your part in helping out "business."

KATE UPSON CLARK.

A Word for the Elevated.

THE TIMES editorial on the Sixth Avenue elevated was right to the point. There has been a great deal of agitation for the removal of the elevated, inspired mostly by property owners fronting on the structure. There is quite a large district, however, that has no transportation except the Sixth Avenue elevated. I refer to the district west of Broadway in the neighborhood of Greene and Wooster Streets and West Broadway.

The elevated is the only line that is close at hand. The Seventh Avenue subway is more than a mile away; the Lexington Avenue subway is almost as far and the B. M. T. stations are so far apart that it is not of very much use.

The service on the elevated is frequent and makes good time. A large number of people use it to reach the Hudson tube either at Cortlandt or at Ninth Street.

E. A. STORMS.

Foreign Mail Delayed.

I have noticed frequently in the recent past an apparent delay in transit of mail from New York to France. I have three letters received at Grand Central Station sub-postoffice on Jan. 11, 13 and 14. After those dates the Aquitania left New York on Jan. 17 and the Ile de France on Jan. 18, but these letters came to France on the President Harding, which left New York Jan. 22.

Is this the effect of competition or cooperation? Something is wrong.

A. NICHOLSON.

Mentone, France, Jan. 29, 1930.

NIGHTFALL.

Drowsing, dimly colored,
Against the evening skies,
Across the quiet water
The tired city lies.

The shouting sun, who's ending
The story of today,
Has singled out one building
For a last, emphatic ray.

It gives him bright attention,
And its eyes to westward keep,
An intellectual edifice;
The rest have gone to sleep.

GEORGE PAINE.

A FUTILE MOVEMENT.

Injustice and Folly Seen in Attempt to Force Prohibition.

Since the recent publication of the staggering statistics giving the governmental cost of prohibition enforcement during the last decade, not only in money but in arrests and imprisonments of American citizens and sacrifice of human life due to killings by enforcement officers and death from alcohol, the entire country has been stirred to its depths.

Especially disturbing is the report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company that the death rate of the industrial insured has increased by almost 600 per cent over 1920 and is now double the war-time death rate of 1918, and "during the past eight years in the wage-earning population, at least, the rate has been six times as high in the United States as in Canada."

The ceaseless bombardment of prohibition by the liberal press has had a far-spreading effect in shaping convictions; the great protesting organizations composed of the practical common-sense elements of the population have a tremendous influence in the modification of ideas.

But statistics like the above are what awaken the conscience of the American nation to the folly and utter futility of a movement that, founded on injustice, seeks to succeed through the usurpation of human rights.

Prohibition is not the only encroachment on our personal liberties, for other menacing injustices are contemplated as, for instance, the abolition of tobacco, the interdiction of Sunday amusements and pleasures, bringing in this modern day a blue-law régime about as rigid as any known in Puritan times.

The militant proponents of total abstinence who are directly responsible for writing the Eighteenth Amendment into the Constitution have in defiance of centuries of effort to keep Church and State separate used the Church as a political machine for imposing their austere doctrines. Encouraged by their triumph they will, if not curbed, go to further lengths. The activities are direct blows at the spirit of democracy as exemplified in progressive governments.

We have to face fearlessly the fact that conditions now obtaining, with the entire country divided into two great antagonistic camps, with the intensity of feeling rising higher day by day, cannot continue another ten years. With hypocrisy tainting every branch of society, with crime increasing, our police force in confusion, our courts congested, our Federal prisons crowded and disorder prevailing everywhere, do we need to be told that things are inevitably headed to a climax?

For ten years, while the struggle has been going on between the forces of fanaticism and common sense, our Congress, on which rests the highest official responsibility of this nation, has failed to mark out a definite constructive path and allowed the opportunity for the exercise of statesmanship to be passed up again and again, and on this most important of all issues we have remained at a standstill.

We need in this crisis to call on the wisdom of the superior reasoning minds of our generation to extricate us from our folly as a nation in permitting this amendment so subversive to American ideals to ever have been written into our Constitution. For in the last analysis we are more than drys and wets; and as Americans, with an abiding love for our country, we view with alarm the deplorable state in which it has fallen through an attempt to enforce what is fundamentally impossible.

Preposterous laws as measures to terrify and restrain, compulsion by our government through the instrumentality of the gun and the prison, experience has incontestably shown are not the remedies for the liquor problem. Prohibition, odious and unnatural, can never solve it, though temperance through modification of the laws both can and will.

The great anti-prohibition organizations using the Empire State as the pivotal centre for drawing all liberals of the country to their standard can institute a new political party. By this means they will wield a tremendous power. I suggest that the anti-prohibition States assert their sovereignty in order to direct their own internal affairs and exercise their authority in the settlement of questions within their own jurisdiction and institute their liquor control boards.

Argument and governmental coercion having proved futile, then must the best minds come together with some practicable plan to get us out of the muddle.

Filipinos Not Citizens.

It is very seldom that one can find a misstatement in the editorials of THE TIMES, but one such, I am sure, came to my notice in the editorial "Attacks on Filipinos" in the issue of Feb. 2.

It was stated therein that as Filipinos are American citizens they are not subject to immigration restrictions. This premise is incorrect, as American citizenship has not been accorded to the Filipinos except that those who have served a certain term in one of the military forces of the nation may secure naturalization.

Filipinos are citizens of an insular possession of the United States, but are not considered as aliens within the meaning of the immigration laws unless they happen to be persons of Chinese descent, in which case they become subject to the Chinese exclusion laws if and when applying for admission to this country.

HOLDS 'LIMITATION' OF CREEDS IS VITAL

SOCIAL IDEALS EMPHASIZED

Dr. De Sola Pool, at Conference at Union Seminary, Would Reinterpret Religion in Terms of Service.

Professor David S. Muzzey of Columbia University told 200 social workers at a Lincoln's Birthday conference at Union Theological Seminary yesterday that creeds and dogmas, as well as cruisers, must be "limited" if the world is to have a religion capable of filling modern social needs.

"We may draw an analogy from the Naval Limitation Conference now sitting in London," he said. "National security conflicts with international good-will. Patriotism must be safeguarded first. It takes precedence over the common welfare of the world.

"So many religious people feel that their creed, their sect, their Church are the guarantee of religion. They oppose an inclusive ethical religion as a sacrifice of faith.

"But we must come to accept a limitation of creeds as well as of cruisers to a moratorium in system-building as well as in battleship-building, to a denominational parity as well as to a naval parity, to the elimination of subtleties as well as submarines, if we are to have a religion worthy of the twentieth century."

"Has religion any practical value in stimulating and promoting social ideals?" was the topic of the morning session, at which Professor Muzzey spoke. He defined religion as "the attempt to realize the highest ethical ideals" and answered the question affirmatively. But institutional religion, he said, "is rather a liability than an asset in social work, because there are so many different creeds and nationalities represented in this field that any exclusive doctrinal religion tends rather to offend them than to inspire them."

Would Reinterpret Religion.

"Religion conceived of as a personal emotional outlet for the salvation of the individual soul might produce saints in retreat from the world, but has very little social value," said the Rev. Dr. David De Sola Pool, rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. "Therefore what is required is a reinterpretation of religion as a social force along the lines foreshadowed in the Old Testament.

"The Old Testament attitude was to make religion and the organization of life all one. Charity was not left to haphazard individual promptings but was a compulsory taxation. The laws prescribing hours of labor, conditions of labor, limitations of land tenure and similar things were religious and State laws at the same time.

"Today our personal attempts to be charitable are almost useless in view of the immensity of the problems. The way to attack the subject is through organizations. Other organizations should continue their work, but the largest organization is the State. We should work for a religious attitude in the laws of the State as exemplified by old-age pensions and similar legislation."

One Definition Challenged.

Another interpretation of religion was presented by the Rev. Edmund B. Chaffee of the Labor Temple, 242 East Fourteenth Street, who defined it as "Man's consciousness of having personal relations with a power that is thought to control the course of nature and human life."

He asserted that the overwhelming majority of forward social movements have proceeded from religious groups or persons trained in religious groups. Both his definition and his assertion were challenged by some members of the audience. Walter Ludwig, executive director of Pioneer Youth, a children's organization sponsored by progressive labor and liberal groups, said that the struggle against war and the fight for industrial justice had been led mostly by others than "religious" persons. The churches, he said, have lined up with wars and usually with industrial oppression.

Niebuhr Discusses Realities.

Answering in the afternoon session the question, "Has religion any validity in the world of modern thought?" Professor Reinhold Niebuhr, Professor of Christian Ethics at the seminary and associate editor of The Christian Century and The World Tomorrow, admitted that its basic assumptions could not be rationally proved, but said that the world would not be rational without it.

"Our choice is to be rational at every given moment and deliver ourselves into some kind of unreason or to make a gloriously irrational theistic assumption in order to create a rational world," he declared.

He referred to users of "the scientific method" as "sifting out certain facts by 'pointer readings,' leaving out other facts equally a part of the rich stream of reality and living under the illusion that what they have sifted out is the whole of reality."

HONORS SIR ESME HOWARD.

Georgetown University Confers Degree on Retiring Ambassador.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Sir Esme Howard, retiring Ambassador of Great Britain and dean of the diplomatic corps, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws for conspicuous services in promoting "peace and concord" during exercises at Georgetown University this evening.

The presentation, in the presence of Ambassadors and Ministers from twenty-three countries and other prominent guests, was made during a double celebration at the university. Combined with observance of Lincoln's birthday, the institution also marked the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Philodemic Society, said to be the oldest university debating society in America.

The presentation of the decree was made by the Rev. Dr. W. Coleman Nevels, president of the university, who read a citation describing Sir Esme's long service in the diplomatic branch of his government and proclaiming that "ever the man has honored his office."

STRICTER SABBATH URGED BY RABBIS

Orthodox Assembly Calls on American Jewry for Campaign of Religious Education.

ASKS AID OF PARENTS

Harry Adams Suggests Five-Day Week Be Supported—Saturday Closing of Stores Advocated.

The need for stricter observance of the Sabbath and for the inculcation of a religious spirit in the Jewish youth was emphasized yesterday at the concluding sessions of the seventh annual convention of the Assembly of Hebrew Orthodox Rabbis of America and Canada, held in the synagogue of the Congregation Chevrah Torah Anshe Chesed, 1,863 Douglass Street, Brooklyn.

After a lengthy discussion a resolution was adopted calling on American Jewry to engage in an intensive campaign of religious education, especially among the young.

"The strengthening of the Jewish faith will not be brought about by insistence on the observance of holy days," Rabbi Joseph Glushack of New York insisted, "but by general education in the tenets and traditions of Judaism. Observance of the laws of the religion will follow as a natural result. It is particularly important that parents cooperate with the rabbinate in educating the young," he said.

In order to make observance of the Sabbath easier, Rabbi Harry Adams of Brooklyn suggested that the five-day week be supported and that Jews be encouraged not to shop on Saturday, thereby enabling Jewish storekeepers to remain closed. Amendment of ordinances so that stores closed on Saturday be allowed to stay open Sunday also was urged. Close supervision of Hebrew teachers as a means of insuring the desired religious training was suggested by Rabbi Aaron Kronenberg of Brooklyn. In some Hebrew schools, teachers spread communism and socialism under the pretext of teaching Judaism, Rabbi Kronenberg said.

Grand Rabbi G. Wolf Margolis, who was elected president of the Assembly yesterday for the sixteenth consecutive year, was present at the afternoon session. Rabbi Margolis is 83 years old and was unable to attend the previous sessions of the convention because of illness.

Other officers elected yesterday are: Rabbi B. G. Mendelsohn of Newark, first vice president; Rabbi J. Margolin of Brooklyn, second vice president; Rabbi Menashe Margolis of New York, treasurer, and Rabbis I. T. Levy and Bernard Birstein, secretaries. An executive board of twenty-nine also was elected. The convention was concluded last night with a dinner in the synagogue.

TAFT 'MUCH BETTER,' PHYSICIANS REPORT

Helpless a Week Ago, He Is Able to Move About Without Any Assistance.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—Apparently progressing steadily toward recovery, William Howard Taft was reported in favorable condition today by his attending physicians.

Just a week ago grave fears were entertained that the former Chief Justice might not survive the several maladies which had attacked him, but ever since that time he has surprised physicians and attendants by the vigorous way in which he has rallied.

Virtually helpless at the time of his return from Asheville, N. C., Mr. Taft now can move about without assistance. His physicians still encourage him to remain in bed as much as possible, however, fearing that too much exertion would overtax his heart and bring a recurrence of the serious attack which so nearly conquered him.

Two bulletins issued today by his physicians, Dr. Thomas A. Claytor and Dr. Francis R. Hagner, described Mr. Taft's condition as "very satisfactory" and apparently "much better." He has overcome his restlessness at night and sleep is proving beneficial. The physicians warned again that their patient was a long way from complete recovery.

MRS. C. VANDERBILT JR. ILL.

Will Start Today for Davenport, Iowa, to Enter Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., who has been ill for several months, will start tomorrow for Davenport, Iowa, to enter St. Luke's Hospital. She was brought from Atlantic City to the Vanderbilt apartment at the Barclay ten days ago. Mr. Vanderbilt said tonight that, although his wife's condition had been regarded as serious, she appeared to be improved today.

VESTA TILLEY GRAVELY ILL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Sir Walter de Frece is resigning his conservative seat in Parliament so that he can be with his wife, the former vaudeville star, Vesta Tilley, who is dangerously ill on the Riviera.

His resignation will cause an interesting by-election at Blackpool, where he polled 32,912 votes, against the Liberals' 25,374 and the Socialists' 12,049.

GIVE A JOINT RECITAL.

Paul Althouse and Rudolph Gruen Heard at the Barbizon.

Paul Althouse, American tenor, formerly of the Metropolitan, and Rudolph Gruen, composer and pianist, appeared in a joint recital last night at the Barbizon. Mr. Althouse, newly returned from Europe, where he appeared at leading opera houses, sang representative songs by Strauss, Massenet, Hugo Wolf, Rachmaninoff and others. Mr. Gruen, four times Juilliard Fellowship winner, played Chopin's A flat Polonaise and pieces by Griffes and Rosenthal. The interpretations of the recitalists were received with enthusiasm by the intimate gathering.

Mayor Sees Audience's Antics And Closes Bay State Theatre

CHELSEA, Mass., Feb. 12 (AP).—When a theatre's license is revoked the entertainment is usually the cause, but when Mayor John J. Whalen today closed the Chelsea Theatre it was the "iniquitous" conduct of the audience which prompted him to act, he said.

The Mayor said he had visited the place after receiving an adverse report from Charles M. Finn, Police Chief, and had satisfied himself that the actions of many juvenile spectators were such as to endanger their morals.

The theatre is a moving picture house.

LAFAYETTE YOUNG JR., EX-PUBLISHER, DIES

Son of Former Iowa Senator Was in Charge of Des Moines Capital for 26 Years.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 12 (AP).—Lafayette Young Jr., son of former United States Senator Lafayette Young of Iowa, died here today of heart disease. Mr. Young was formerly publisher and business manager of The Des Moines Capital. He was 52 years old.

When his father died in November, 1926, Mr. Young inherited control of The Des Moines Capital, of which he was general manager from 1901 to 1927, when it was consolidated with The Evening Tribune. He was president of the Young Realty Company, former head of the Greater Des Moines Commission, vice president of the Advertising Clubs of the World in 1916, and for the first three years of its existence, a director of the Audit Bureau of Circulation. In 1918 he was one of twelve American newspaper men who visited the war zone as guests of the British Government.

Mr. Young was a graduate of the University of Michigan and received his LL. B. degree from Iowa State University. He married Virginia McArthur of Des Moines in 1910.

EX-JUDGE FRANK DALE.

Born in De Kalb County, Ill., Justice Dale was educated in the public schools of Leland, Ill., and settled in Wichita, Kan., in 1872. He was admitted to the bar there four years later, and from 1880 to 1885 served as prosecuting attorney of Wichita and Sedgwick Counties. After four years as register of the United States Land Office in Wichita, he moved to Guthrie, where he made his home thereafter.

After five months on the bench of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma Territory, Justice Dale, in September, 1893, became Presiding Justice, and so continued for five years. Since 1898 he had been practicing law in Guthrie as senior member of Dale & Bierer.

RITES FOR HEBRON VICTIMS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JERUSALEM, Feb. 12.—A large party of Jews from Jerusalem visited Hebron today to bury the blood of sixty victims of the Hebron massacre. They collected all traces of blood by washing the floors and walls and breaking off pieces of stained plaster from walls and ceilings, and proceeded to bury the collection at the graves of the victims, with blood-stained implements of the massacre, knives, bludgeons and stones.

The committee for re-establishing Hebron's Jewish population reports it discovered Arabs already asserting squatter rights to land belonging to fugitive Jews, building houses and boundary walls and cultivating the soil.

Courts have ruled that Jewish fugitives are not liable for the rent of houses they were forced to abandon in consequence of the massacre.

POLICE HONOR YEAR'S DEAD

Requiem Mass Is Celebrated at St. Vincent Ferrer's Church.

Requiem mass in memory of the policemen who died during the past year was celebrated in St. Vincent Ferrer's Roman Catholic Church, Sixty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue. Members of the department assembled at the East Sixty-seventh Street station and, led by the band and glee club, marched to the church.

Responses to the mass were sung by the glee club, and at the end of the service "Taps" was sounded. The Rev. Joseph A. McCaffrey, Police Chaplain, was celebrant of the mass, the Rev. John F. White of St. Agnes's Church, deacon, and the Rev. Matthew F. Deahy of All Saints' Church, subdeacon. The Very Rev. James A. Mackin preached the sermon.

ROBERT W. BUNTEN.

Member of Bank's Staff Dies Suddenly in New York Athletic Club.

Robert W. Bunten, who was connected with the American Exchange-Irving Trust Company, collapsed yesterday afternoon from heart disease while at the New York Athletic Club, of which he was a member, and died within a few minutes. His age was 54.

Mr. Bunten was a bachelor and lived at the Explorers Club, 544 Cathedral Parkway. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Charles A. Austin of 411 West 114th Street.

Robert Ritchie Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—Robert Ritchie, textile manufacturer and former City Councilman, died at his home here late today in his seventy-seventh year. He founded the R. J. & R. Ritchie Company and served as its secretary-treasurer until his retirement. He was a member of the Penn Club, the Manufacturers Club and the St. Andrews Society. His widow, two sons and two daughters survive.

The Rev. Elam J. Snyder.

Special to The New York Times.

SIR W. W. HOY DIES IN SOUTH AFRICA

Leading Railroad Man in That Country Was 61 Years Old—A Native of Scotland.

KNIGHTED FOR WAR WORK

Director of Military Railways in Southwest African Campaign—Visited America in 1905.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Sir William Wilson Hoy, one of the leading railway men in South Africa, died today at the age of 61 years.

A native of Scotland, he gained much experience before coming to the Union, where he became general manager of the Consolidated South African Railways and Harbors. He was director of military railways during the war, being knighted for his services in the Southwest African campaign.

For the past two years Sir William had been chairman of the Rhodesian Railroad Commission. His career in railroading covered almost exactly half a century, having included nine years in England before he went to South Africa in 1889, where he remained hereafter.

After serving as assistant traffic manager in various places he was made traffic manager at Bloemfontein in 1900 with control of the Imperial Military Railways. With the transfer of the system to the Civil Administration in 1902 he was made chief traffic manager of the Central South African Railways with headquarters at Johannesburg. He represented these roads at the International Railway Congress in Washington in 1905.

After five years as assistant general manager of the C. S. A. R. he became Director of Military Railways with the rank of Colonel when the World War began. From 1910 to 1927, in addition to the positions mentioned, Sir William was also General Manager of Railways and Harbors in South Africa.

He was knighted in 1916; two years later he was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath, and a Knight Commander in 1922. In 1901 he married Gertrude Price, daughter of Sir Thomas R. Price.

RIGHT REV. A. STEHLE DIES IN PITTSBURGH

Only Arch-Abbot in Country—Chancellor of a University in China.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Right Rev. Aurelius Stehle, O. S. B., the only arch-abbot in the United States, died at St. Francis Hospital here tonight, after a short illness, at the age of 52. He was head of St. Vincent Arch-Abbey at Latrobe, Pa., and chancellor of the Roman Catholic University at Pei-ping, China.

The arch-abbot was taken to the hospital on Jan. 24 after having suffered a nervous breakdown a day earlier at a propagation of the faith meeting in Cleveland. His health started to fail during the Christmas holidays, when he contracted a severe cold. A complication of diseases brought death.

The special blessing of Pope Pius XI was imparted to the Arch-Abbott on Tuesday by the Rev. Felix Fellner, O. S. B., of St. Vincent, upon its receipt by cablegram from Rome.

Arch-Abbot Stehle headed the largest Benedictine community in the United States. Last year he was called to Rome by the Pope to discuss plans for developing the Catholic University of Pei-ping, which the Arch-Abbot founded in 1924.

He is survived by two brothers, the Rev. P. Callistus Stahle, O. S. B., at St. Vincent Arch-Abbey, and Harry Staley of Pittsburgh.

The Right Rev. Aurelius Stehle entered the Order of Benedictine Fathers when he was 16 years old and he became a priest at 22, under the canonical age, by virtue of a special papal dispensation. He taught Latin and Greek at St. Vincent College, later becoming prefect of the seminary, coadjutor abbot and arch-abbot of St. Vincent Arch-Abbey. Since 1920 he had been president of St. Vincent College and Seminary. He was also president of the Benedictine Society of Westmoreland County, Pa., and a member of the National Benedictine Educational Association. He was the author of a "Manual of Episcopal Ceremonies." He was born in Pittsburgh, the son of Richard and Rose Nigel Stehle.

DRAPER DAUGHERTY DEAD IN FLORIDA

Ex-Attorney General's Only Son Victim of Appendicitis—Gassed in War.

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Draper Daugherty, only son of Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney General in the Harding Administration, died here last night, at the age of 41.

Two weeks ago he underwent an operation for appendicitis. Although peritonitis had set in soon after the operation, he for a while appeared to be recovering. Last night complications caused his physicians to decide on a second operation. He died on the operating table as it was about to be performed.

Mr. Daugherty's body will be taken by his widow to New Canaan, Conn., their former home, for burial. Harry M. Daugherty, his father, is now ill at West Palm Beach.

Draper Daugherty served in the regular army under General John J. Pershing in the Mexican campaign, and was a captain and a major in the third division in the World War. He was wounded during the Meuse-Argonne campaign.

Mr. Daugherty was gassed, as well as wounded, in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Before America entered the war he had served with the British Army in France. He was born at Washington Court House, Ohio.

The last seven years of his life were crowded with sensational experiences. In 1923 he was questioned by the New York District Attorney's office in connection with the "Dot King" murder mystery, testifying that he had been a close friend of the dead girl but could give no explanation of her death. Later he spent some time in the Stanford Hall Sanitarium in Connecticut on petition of his wife and uncle, but escaped from the sanitarium, and fled to Chicago. There he worked as a coal salesman. In 1925 he was committed to the State Hospital at Lima, Ohio, but was released in 1926.

Mr. Daugherty married twice. He and his first wife, the former Jean Bowers, daughter of a West Virginia Representative in Congress, were divorced in 1927. In the Summer of 1928 he married Mrs. Estelle Sturges, former wife of Preston Sturges, a New York manufacturer of perfumes.

CHARLES A. TRIPP DIES.

J. J. M'GRANE DIES; A PAPAL KNIGHT

DECORATED BY 3 POPES

Began Career on New York Central—A Leader in Development of Long Island City.

John J. McGrane, Papal Knight of St. Gregory, one of the first Catholic laymen to organize Catholic pilgrimages to Rome and the Holy Land, died on Tuesday night at his home, 320 West Eighty-third Street, of heart disease, in his eightieth year. He was a widower and is survived by three daughters and a son, all of whom were at the bedside: Mrs. E. T. Cox of Pelham, Mrs. John F. Buckley of City Island and Miss Irene McGrane and Joseph S. McGrane, who lived with their father.

A mass of requiem will be sung tomorrow morning in the Church of the Holy Trinity, 213 West Eighty-second Street. Burial will take place in Troy, N. Y.

Mr. McGrane acted as adviser on American Catholic affairs to three successive Papal Secretaries of State, Cardinals Merry Del Val, de Sleti and Gasparri, the last of whom retired only a few days ago. It was for his work in organizing Catholic pilgrimages to Rome that he was created a Papal Knight. He was also decorated by Popes Leo XIII, Pius X and Benedict XV.

He was born in Cambridge, N. Y., in 1850, and his first position was with the New York Central Railroad. As a young man he drove the first train through the Park Avenue tunnel. Before his retirement from railroading in 1890, he organized the Railroad Building Loan and Savings Association. In 1891 he entered the jewelry business, from which he retired seven years ago.

Mr. McGrane was one of the founders of St. Joseph's Hospital, Long Island City.

He had a part in the development of Long Island City real estate and was a member of the Committee of Forty, which brought about the building of the Queensboro Bridge. He was also credited with inducing the Pennsylvania Railroad authorities to select Sunnyside, Queens, for the road's yards.

Frank Senior Lockwood.

Frank Senior Lockwood of Paterson, N. J., for many years treasurer of the building firm of Lockwood Brothers of Paterson, died Tuesday, aged 78, of a stroke of apoplexy that occurred Sunday afternoon. His brother, the late William J. # SCORE O'SHEA BOARD AS SCHOOL 'MENACE'

Teachers' Union Heads Demand Inquiry Into Superintendents' "Third-Degree Methods."

INTIMIDATION IS CHARGED

Questioning of Dr. Lefkowitz in Pension Dispute Assailed—O'Shea Defends System

While Superintendent William J. O'Shea defended the school system against recent charges of politics and inefficiency, a demand was made yesterday by the Teachers' Union for an immediate official investigation of the Board of Superintendents on the ground that it had become a "menace" to the system in developing a "technique dangerously near third-degree methods" in dealing with teachers at secret hearings.

The union charged that "a practice has grown up through many years of unchecked license of attacking and slurring teachers and principals whose activities are disliked by members of the board," and that its "secret hearings are sometimes used as 'fishing expeditions' to trap unwary and inexperienced teachers into admissions which may later be used as the basis of formal charges."

Dr. Henry R. Linville, president of the union, wrote a letter to George J. Ryan, president of the Board of Education, asking him to order an inquiry of the Board of Superintendents.

"If the Board of Superintendents does not possess the character and the intelligence necessary to humanize its own procedure, it should be abolished as a menace to the school system itself, and its place taken by a form of organization that will function intelligently and humanely," Dr. Linville wrote.

Dr. O'Shea, who as Superintendent of Schools is chairman of the Board of Superintendents, speaking at a luncheon of the Jewish Teachers' Association at the Hotel Pennsylvania, praised that board and the Board of Education and called on all teachers to show fidelity to "constituted authority" as a means of instilling the same virtue in the school children. The association's luncheon was given in honor of Samuel Levy, who two months ago was appointed a member of the Board of Education by Mayor Walker.

Lefkowitz Hearing Criticized.

The union's protest against the superintendents grew out of the controversy in school circles over pension bills presented in Albany. The teachers' pension committee is supporting the bills, which provide for a thirty-year retirement on a more liberal basis than at present and for granting pension credit for various services. However, the bills were disapproved recently by the Board of Education at the suggestion of the superintendents. The boards' decision was criticized in statements by Dr. Abraham Lefkowitz, chairman of the subcommittee on publication of the teachers' pension committee. The statements were prepared and authorized by the committee, Dr. Linville said. On Jan. 30 Dr. Lefkowitz was called before the Board of Superintendents in executive session and questioned at length on his criticisms. It was understood that the main questioning was done by Edward Mandel, who as associate superintendent in charge of legal matters was said to have drafted the board's opinion on the bills.

It was "a hostile and rigorous cross-examination to intimidate Dr. Lefkowitz," the union's letter said.

"Mr. Mandel launched into an attack on Dr. Lefkowitz's knowledge of pension statistics, apparently for the purpose of discrediting the teacher's leadership," Dr. Linville wrote. "Dr. Lefkowitz protested against the character and animus of the questions. That infuriated Mr. Mandel, for he then said that charges should be brought against Dr. Lefkowitz and his temporary license as head of the department of history and civics of Commerce High School should be revoked.

Ordered to Answer Questions.

"When it became apparent that the purpose of the questioning was to secure material for charges, Dr. Lefkowitz declined to answer questions which he considered offensive and otherwise objectionable. Thereupon Dr. O'Shea ordered him to answer or stand suspended. Dr. Lefkowitz complied. The ordeal which Dr. Lefkowitz was compelled to go through continued for the greater part of four and one-half hours, a period which was broken only by a recess for lunch."

Mr. Ryan was asked in the letter to have his board give "earnest consideration" to two matters: the "implied denial of the rights of citizenship to teachers who are striking to present their point of view in proposing revision of the pension law and the failure of the Board of Superintendents to comprehend the first principles of professional behavior."

O'Shea Demands Fidelity.

Dr. O'Shea, who spoke at the luncheon on "Moral Education," said he was "pained" at the disrespect for authority shown by some teachers. Referring, apparently, to Dr. Lefkowitz's activities, he said that "recently a letter was sent to the teachers characterizing an opinion of the board as foolish and absurd." He thought that an "awful thing for a man who is earning his living in the Board of Education." He added:

"The first thing I would advise all teachers to follow is obedience to authority. There is always an appeal in the school system. There is no reason for any one except a constituted grumbler to find fault with the government of the schools. We are not perfect, but provisions are made for our imperfections. There is full protection for your safety."

Dr. Abraham Smith, president of the association; Rabbi Nathan Krass and Mr. Levy also spoke at the luncheon.

TEACHERS NEARING 40 WARNED TO KEEP JOBS

Bureau of Educational Service Says Many School Boards Ban the Middle Aged.

A warning to all educational workers who are nearing the age of 40 not to resign without assurance of other jobs was issued yesterday by the Bureau of Educational Service, the employment division of Teachers College. Persons 35 or older are advised to do graduate work on leaves of absence. They are warned, in a pamphlet issued by the bureau, that if they resign to do graduate work with the hope of bettering their positions later "they may have trouble getting any position, let alone a better one."

The statement says in part:

"Many boards of education and educational institutions, and many business houses, have rules, written or unwritten, that persons in the neighborhood or 40 or beyond will not be added to the payroll. * * * The statement of the fact that for most positions most employers will not hire persons of 40 or beyond carries no approval of the fact by the bureau. On the contrary, the bureau holds that this discrimination on the basis of age alone is unfair and deprives both educational and business institutions of experience and the wisdom which youth, by reason of being youth, seldom possesses.

"The bureau recommends employment of well trained and competent persons whether young or middle aged and beyond. At the same time in view of the practice both in business and in education not to employ older individuals (unwise as that practice, in many instances, is), the bureau warns registrants approaching middle age of the difficulties of finding new positions. In exceptional situations in which long-proved and seasoned ability to carry administrative responsibility is required, age is obviously no handicap.

TILDSLEY PROPOSALS PUT IN ALBANY BILL

ETTINGER PLAN ALSO USED

Associate Superintendents Would Be Merely Advisers, Nominated by the Superintendent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The controversy started by Dr. John L. Tildsley, district superintendent in charge of New York City high schools, echoed in the Legislature today with the introduction of a bill by Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat, Republican, of New York, to reorganize the public school administration.

Following the suggestions of Dr. Tildsley, and more particularly those of Dr. William L. Ettinger, superintendent of schools emeritus, the bill proposes to centralize authority in the superintendent of schools, transforming the present board of superintendents into an advisory body or cabinet. At the same time the measure would have the associate superintendents appointed on nomination of the superintendent of schools instead of independently by the Board of Education, as is the present practice.

In initiating his attack on school management Dr. Tildsley condemned the Board of Education as being too steeped in politics. The bill advanced today would clip some of the board's power, but Assemblyman Moffat, who will press for the support of the legislative majority behind his proposal, said that George J. Ryan, president of the Board of Education, himself sponsored part of the suggested program three years ago, with respect to changing the system of nominating associate superintendents.

He quoted Mr. Ryan as saying:

"At present any person in or out of the school system possessing the general qualifications set up in the State education law is free to nominate himself or herself as a candidate for an associate superintendency. Personal friends, or friends of friends, often entirely out of touch with school needs and uninformed respecting the duties of an associate superintendent, and entirely uninformed respecting the actual capacities and attainments of their own candidates, may and do urge persons for the associate superintendency and insistently press their non-educational personal preference upon members of the board."

The Moffat bill provides that the cabinet members about the superintendent shall not be potentially his superior officers as at present. A majority of his associates now can outvote him on matters of fundamental policy. The bill would also make it possible for the associate superintendents to be selected for specific functions for which they would be responsible to the superintendent.

"They would of course meet and advise with the superintendent and with each other," Mr. Moffat said, "but their vote on any proposition put to them would not be binding, but would be merely advisory. The superintendent, with the advice of the particular associate responsible for any specific matter discussed, would make the final decision and thereafter be responsible for it."

WINS POINT IN OLD SUIT.

B. R. Kittredge Gets Permission for New Trial in $80,000 Action.

After more than fifteen years of litigation Benjamin R. Kittredge, a customer of a Wall Street firm whose brokers sold his securities to another firm, will have a new trial of his suit against William C. Langley in which he will offer proof of a claim for $80,000 with interest since 1908, under a decision of the Court of Appeals made public yesterday.

Mr. Kittredge had deposited his bonds in an account with the brokerage firm of Coster, Knapp & Co., which transferred them to Grannis & Lawrence without authority and got $86,000 for them, it was alleged. The opinion, written by Chief Judge aCrdozo, says William C. Langley was a special partner in the firm of Grannis & Lawrence, with capital contributions of $80,000. The firm was liquidated on June 1, 1908, when the $80,000 was paid to Mr. Langley; a Stock Exchange seat valued at $71,000 went to Arthur N. Grannis, with $7,412 in cash, and $10,599 went to the third partner, Robert C. Lawrence.

ORDERS 381 BUSES.

Public Service Coordinated Transport Buys Record Total.

The Public Service Coordinated Transport announced yesterday that it had placed orders for 381 buses, the largest number ever bought by it at one time. Of the total, 211 will be of the gas-electric type, for city service, and 170 of the gas-mechanical type for use on the so-called superservice route

Delivery of the new buses will begin within a month, and will be completed by July. Most of the bodies will be built in the company's own shops. The city-type buses will seat forty, and the others thirty. The "wheel-house" seat will be eliminated. There will be added safety devices on the new vehicles. On the superservice buses the windows will be operated by crank handles, as in private cars. These buses also will have a sound insulator equipment.

The 1930 budget of the company provides for new garages and about seventy new de luxe trolley cars.

BEGIN TODAY TO RAISE SHELL OF MUENCHEN

CREW TO FACE INQUIRY

Owners Deny That Cargo Was Inflammable and Sift Rumor of an Arson Plot.

DISPUTE BROPHY'S FINDINGS

Spontaneous Combustion Started Blaze, He Insists—7,000 Canaries Found Alive in Wreck.

The first move to float and recondition the liner Muenchen of the North German Lloyd, which burned and sank at her pier at Morton and West Streets Tuesday, following explosions in her hold, will be made today, when divers will examine the hull of the ship preparatory to raising and removing her to a Brooklyn drydock.

At the same time two investigations, one by the underwriters of the ship and another by the Fire Department, will be under way to determine the cause of the blaze.

A private investigation of the liner's crew, it was learned, will be made by officials of the North German Lloyd in an effort to ascertain all factors that may have had to do with the destruction of the ship.

Fire Out at 9 A. M.

It was not until 9 o'clock yesterday morning that the fire had been put out after nearly twenty-four hours of continuous battling by a small army of firemen supported by a fleet of fire boats. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a group of firemen boarded the half-submerged liner and after a careful search for any traces of smoke or flames, officially pronounced the fire out.

The blaze was under control by 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when [illegible] of the fire companies were sent off by Deputy Chief [illegible] McElligott. Only two companies remained to complete the task of putting out the blaze.

At 6 o'clock yesterday morning, following consultation with the Fire Department, the uptown service of the Hudson Tube was resumed. The service had been halted at 11 o'clock Tuesday afternoon because of the proximity of the tube under the river to the burning ship and the fear of further explosions.

A preliminary investigation made by Chief Fire Marshal Brophy [illegible] Fire Commissioner Dorman that "spontaneous combustion" was the cause of the fire. Brophy scouted the theory that the fire might have been incendiary, although suspicions of arson were [illegible] in shipping circles here. Officials of the North German Lloyd maintained that none of the [illegible] in the holds of the Muenchen, including fertilizer and chemicals, [illegible] of an inflammable nature [illegible] refused to accept the theory of spontaneous combustion. They declined to form any positive theory of [illegible] pending the [illegible].

Denies Inflammable Cargo.

Henry Schuengel, resident director of the North German Lloyd, [illegible] fire was still a complete mystery. Mr. Schuengel early on Tuesday [illegible] inclined to the spontaneous combustion theory, but he rejected this [illegible] after testing samples of [illegible] chemical contents of hold 6, where the fire was first discovered, [illegible] with assistants who made the tests [illegible] he declared himself convinced that there was nothing in the [illegible] that might have caused the [illegible].

Support of the theory that the fire [illegible] incendiary origin was [illegible] late yesterday when it became [illegible] the covers were taken off [illegible] at 5 P. M. on Monday as the Muenchen approached New York to [illegible] the mail and stack it on the [illegible] ready for discharging at Quarantine. [illegible] of the crew went down [illegible] to get the mail bags and [illegible] time without [illegible] any trace of smoke or unusual heat.

It was recalled that the Europa, [illegible] ship of the Bremen, which was [illegible] to make her maiden trip to [illegible] and had burned under mysterious circumstances in her Bremen [illegible] yard last year, where she was [illegible]. At that time some persons were inclined to attribute the fire [illegible].

Stevedores Are Questioned.

Marshal Brophy's report was based on information given him by stevedores who were the first to discover [illegible] 6.

It was only after they had removed the fifteen tons of cargo that they received the first indications of [illegible] in his report. Mr. Brophy emphasized his belief that the fire did not originate at sea, but [illegible] after the ship [illegible] at her dock. His report disclosed [illegible] in the day by Mr. Schuengel, [illegible] with the statement made [illegible] denied emphatically that [illegible] inflammable in the cargo. The marshal listed the following items [illegible] Hold 6: 499 bags of nitrate of potash, [illegible] 386 rolls of newsprint paper, [illegible] ingots of aluminum, 40 bags of [illegible] cases of hardware [illegible] of general cargo. Mr. Schuengel remarked that the material [illegible] have been nitrate of potash [illegible] potassium carbonate, a harmless [illegible].

Holds 4, 5 and 6 are flooded. [illegible] holds, 1, 2 and 3, will be [illegible]. They contain 3,500 [illegible] of toys, linens, crockery and machinery.

[illegible] after the divers complete [illegible] examination of the hull the [illegible] of pumping out the water [illegible]. It was feared yesterday, [illegible] be possible to determine [illegible] to Gustav Francke, [illegible] of the Muenchen, who is [illegible] the four explosions [illegible] his controls when the [illegible] of total darkness. [illegible] North German Lloyd [illegible] keeling over and taking with her a part of the pier against which the unsubmerged portion of her hull is resting.

7,000 Canaries Saved.

When engineers of the North German Lloyd and members of the crew boarded the wreck soon after the departure of the firemen, they were met with two pleasant surprises. First they rescued nearly 7,000 canaries, alive and chirping, from near Hold 4. The birds had been given up for dead.

Secondly, a small fawn-colored Dobermann dog and his mate were found alive. The dogs were in a kennel, aft of Hold 6, the centre of the fire, but by some chance, both escaped unharmed.

When the Chief Officer, J. Meller, went aboard, he found many important ship's papers, believed lost, intact in his room. Captain Fedor Brunnings, it developed, lost a prized and valuable stamp collection which he had for many years.

Frank Baum, the purser, who rescued $40,000 from the ship's safe on Tuesday before abandoning the vessel, bemoaned the loss of a complete photographic history of his family and an autographed photograph of President Roosevelt, presented to his father, who was chief officer of the Kaiser Wilhelm II and is now dead.

The North German Lloyd announced last night that until the Muenchen is removed from Pier 42 the line's ships will dock at Pier 4, the army base, at the foot of Fifty-eighth Street, South Brooklyn.

FACE BIG LOSS ON LINER.

Germans Held Entire $1,500,000 Insurance—Company Also Hit.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BREMEN, Feb. 12.—The destruction of the Muenchen means heavy loss not only to the Lloyd Line, but also to German insurance companies, as, contrary to the case of the Europa, which was insured in English and Dutch companies, the Muenchen's insurance was placed exclusively with German concerns.

The total insurance of $1,500,000 does not cover the whole loss to the Lloyd Line. Besides the value of the vessel in excess of the insurance, the company faces a big loss in earnings by the elimination of the Muenchen, which was one of the most popular vessels of her class, from the Atlantic service.

It is believed that most of the freight was insured for its full value.

Among the telegrams of regret received by the line was one from Mayor Schabnagl of Munich, the city which sponsored the lost vessel. Dr. Held, the Bavarian Premier, also sent a telegram.

WRECK REINSURANCE HIGH.

London Houses Quote 60 to 75 Per Cent to Assume Muenchen Loss.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The fire aboard the Muenchen, which was insured for about $1,500,000, caused activity in the London reinsurance market. Offers to reinsure the ship were quoted at 60 per cent on receipt of news of the disaster. Afterward rates advanced to 70 and 75 per cent and at the close of business had dropped back to 60 per cent.

Damage to expensive fittings in fires on passenger liners is always likely to be serious and this is being taken into account by London underwriters in fixing rates on the new North German Lloyd liner Europa, due to sail from Bremen for New York March 19. The Europa is insured for about $10,000,000 and lately, according to The London Times, 2½ per cent has been freely offered and taken against total loss.

Athletes Strike When College Refuses to Grant Concessions

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 12 (AP).—Threatened disruption of its next year's athletic program was faced today by Transylvania, oldest college in this section, as the result of a walkout yesterday of thirty more students over the stand taken by the president and the trustees on concessions to athletes.

The students, headed by some members of the football squad, marched out of chapel yesterday, with the idea of taking part in a general strike, it was reported by students, but most of the strikers returned to classes later in the day.

Dr. Elmer G. Campbell, the president, declined, he said, to grant "certain concessions to the football team that were not in accord with rules of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association."

Part of the football squad, it was revealed today, has been virtually on a strike since the beginning of the second semester, and Dr. Campbell said that several of the athletes refused to enroll for the new semester, which opened a few days ago.

THOMPSON BAR HALTS CHICAGO FINANCE PLAN

Mayor Fails to Name Officials to Meet Strawn Group—Aldermen Talk of "Revolt."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—The failure of Mayor William Hale Thompson to obey the City Council's order, unanimously adopted, to cooperate with the Strawn Citizens' Rescue Committee, whose $20,000,000 taxpayers' pool is being withheld from Chicago and Cook County until a plan of joint control of expenditures can be worked out, blocked efforts today to get a way out of the city-county financial dilemma.

The Mayor had been expected to name three city officials to meet today with Silas H. Strawn, Ernest R. Graham and Robert Carr of the citizens' committee to press the joint financing project. The Strawn committee agreed yesterday to the arrangement, proposed by Lewis L. Myers of the School Board, who is a Thompson backer. But the Mayor failed to act.

If the Mayor fails to cooperate before the next meeting of the City Council on Feb. 26, or announces his refusal to cooperate in the meantime, it is believed probable that the Aldermen will move to take the situation into their own hands.

T. A. T. Offices in Penn Station.

The New York offices of Transcontinental Air Transport-Maddux Air Lines, it was announced yesterday, have been moved from the Curtiss-Wright Building at 27 West Fifty-seventh Street to the Pennsylvania Station. The change was made after a voting trust [illegible] the stock of the company had been dissolved and, beginning today, the air transport company will deliver the stock in exchange for trust certificates.

BIG SHIP TERMINAL PLANNED IN HOBOKEN

Chapman Interests Consider Purchase of Five Piers That Were Seized in War.

AWAIT GOVERNMENT ACTION

Head of United States Lines Says No Announcement Can Be Made Meanwhile.

Plans for a great steamship terminal in Hoboken, to be built around the five Hoboken piers seized by the government at the entrance of the United States into the war, are being considered by the P. W. Chapman interests, which now control the United States and American Merchant Lines.

No official announcement has come from the United States Lines, and Mr. Chapman, reached in Washington yesterday, said that nothing could be done "until the government decided definitely what to do with the piers." The Shipping Board recently approved the Kean-Auf der Heide bill for return of the piers to private interests, however, and it is understood here and in Washington that the Chapman interests will be the only bidders.

Mr. Chapman already owns property on the Hoboken waterfront and this, with the pier property, would be made into a vast terminal for passenger and freight ships if the plan goes through.

Piers Were Seized in the War.

The piers, numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, have been a bone of contention for many years. They were formerly owned by the Hamburg American Line and the North German Lloyd Line. Seized in the war, their sale since has been urged by private interests and the city of Hoboken. Hoboken has been forced to curtail its annual budgets because the piers, as temporary government property, have brought no taxes.

Recently the government decided on their sale, with the stipulation that they go to private interests. This specification would exclude the Port of New York Authority, which several years ago considered taking them over as a harbor project.

Mr. Chapman would be able to erect one of the finest steamer and freight terminals in the East on the property. He already owns the valuable shoreline transportation system, the Hoboken Manufacturers' Railroad Company. It provides contact for ships with nearly every major railroad in the East. Thus steamship cargo can be transferred to trains without trucking.

Site for a 1,300-Foot Dock.

One of the five piers has a bulkhead line situated so that the dock itself may be built to a length of 1,300 or perhaps 1,400 feet without violating the War Department injunction against narrowing the Hudson River by pier extension. The new giant liners which the United States Lines proposes to build could be docked there when it is rebuilt.

The pier property facing the wharfs would be extremely valuable for warehouse purposes. Between the property gates and the land end of the piers themselves is a long open space approximately 100 feet in width. This runs the length of the five-pier head and, with piers, is considered worth more than the $10,000,000 valuation placed on the property.

The piers are now used by United States Lines, the Munson Line, the American Diamond Line and the American-France Lines. The Chapman interests are high bidders for the American Diamond and the American-France Lines, which are soon to be disposed of by the Shipping Board.

CHAPMAN TELLS PLANS FOR FASTEST SHIPS

Informs Shipping Board Two Passenger Vessels Will Be Speediest Afloat.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—Paul W. Chapman, president of the United States Lines, Inc., informed the Shipping Board today that his concern planned to build two ships that on completion probably would be the fastest afloat.

Under the provisions of a contract made in 1929 after buying vessels from the board, the United States Lines agreed to build two large passenger ships.

Chapman said the vessels would be in excess of 50,000 tons and would have a sustained speed of 28½ knots. He said this would enable them to break the record for a transatlantic passenger crossing held by the German ship, Bremen.

TWO HURLED TO DEATH FROM RISING ELEVATOR

Two men were killed yesterday morning in a fall from a freight elevator which apparently got beyond control in the Mount Morris View Apartments at 2 West 120th Street. They were Michael Terravecchia, 30 years old, an ice dealer, of 16 East 138th Street, and John Evans, 36, a negro porter, who lived in the building.

Officials were unable to determine whether the men were thrown from the elevator or became panic-stricken and attempted to leap to safety because they could not stop it. Inspector Michael Reynolds of the Building Department, Assistant Medical Examiner Robert C. Fisher and detectives of the West 123d Street station were agreed, however, that the accident was caused by one of seven garbage cans which evidently had protruded from the edge of the elevator as it rose.

As the elevator went up the can wrenched the iron grill doors from their hinges on the fourth and fifth floors and bent those on the other five floors of the building. There was evidence that the elevator had rocked violently backward as the can ripped along the gates. This movement, Dr. Fisher said, might have hurled the men to the bottom of the well, where they were found. It was believed they fell between the fourth and sixth floors.

"New Jersey Is Dry," Calhoun Declares; Plans No Drive as "One Can't Buy a Drink."

"New Jersey is dry, one can't buy a drink in Jersey," William J. Calhoun, Prohibition Administrator for New Jersey, declared yesterday, when asked whether his territory would figure in the current outburst of prohibition activities in various parts of the country.

Mr. Calhoun said his force did not face the same situation as that found in New York in regard to hotels and clubs to which patrons bring their own liquor. He said there were fewer hotels, restaurants and night clubs in New Jersey, and for that reason he was not planning any drive against "hip flask toters," such as that announced by Major Maurice Campbell in New York.

Mr. Calhoun declared he previously had made it clear that persons making a public display of drinking in hotels or restaurants were liable to arrest.

He said that if he discovered a situation in New Jersey similar to that in New York he would apply the same methods as those announced by the New York administrator. He added that he did not expect such a situation to arise.

MOTHER OF 8 STABS HUSBAND TO DEATH

Freeport Woman, 29, Carries Baby in Arms as She Slays Man in Vacant Lot.

SHE THEN CALLS POLICE

Says He Began to Beat Her After She Found He Had Brought Another Woman to Home.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., Feb. 12.—In a jealous rage, Mrs. Elizabeth Velez, 29 years old, carrying her 4-month-old daughter, Mary, in her arms, this afternoon stabbed and killed her husband, Silvio, 42, a taxicab owner, in a vacant lot at Main Street and Lillian Avenue, on the edge of the business section here. Mrs. Velez then stopped a motorist, William Hamilton of Rockville Centre, and told him to get a policeman; but, becoming impatient, walked to a gasoline filling station across the street and had the attendant telephone to Lieutenant Peter Elar at Police Headquarters.

Holding her infant close to her breast, the woman awaited the arrival of Patrolmen Anthony Fierro and Sylvester Wright, whom she led to a pit, where they said she pointed to her dying husband. Velez died while Fierro was attempting to question him, and Mrs. Velez then was taken to headquarters, where she was alleged to have confessed to Assistant District Attorney Alfred De Meo and Captain Harold King of the Nassau County police.

Her arraignment before Police Judge Albin Johnson followed two hours later. She waived examination and was held without bail for the grand jury tomorrow on a short affidavit charging murder in the first degree.

Mrs. Velez, who is the mother of eight children, six of whom are living, was permitted to take the infant to the county jail with her. Mrs. Alice Pendelton, an old friend of the woman, received the custody of the other children, James, 2½ years old; Elizabeth, 4; Lester, 6; Silvio Jr., 8, and Sylvia, 9.

Mrs. Velez was said to have declared in her confession that her husband began to beat her in their home at 302 North Main Street at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. One of their children had told her, she said, that in her absence Velez had brought a Hempstead woman to the house. She showed bruises on her arms and body where, she charged, Velez had kicked and struck her before she picked up a butcher knife from the table in the kitchen and started in pursuit of him, grabbing up her infant child on her way out of the kitchen door.

Velez, who appeared to have a prosperous taxicab business in the Freeport section, frequently had come into conflict with the law over [illegible], police said. Mrs. Pendelton told the police that she had known Mrs. Velez since they were inmates of an orphanage, and only recently renewed the friendship when she accidentally learned they were neighbors. Mrs. Velez at the time told her of the trouble she was having with her husband, she said. Assistant District Attorney De Meo said that the Hempstead woman probably would be called as a material witness in the grand jury investigation.

JERSEY ALUMNAE MEET.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 12.—More than 350 graduates of the New Jersey College for Women returned to the college today to attend the events planned in the annual observance of alumnae day. Alumnae listened once more to the lectures of their former professors and attended morning services in the Voorhees Memorial Chapel. After chapel there was a meeting of the associate alumnae at which Mrs. Horace N. Clark, '24, of Bound Brook, president, presided.

This afternoon the alumnae were guests of the Little Theatre Workshop group at a performance of Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon," presented in the Dramatic Arts Building.

Miss Agnes McDede of Jersey City headed the committee of undergraduates in charge of arrangements. She was assisted by the Misses Carol Hirsch, New York City; Fannie Smith, Jersey City; Corneliette Carpenter, Newark; Elizabeth Low, Clinton, and Janet Mather, Westfield.

FINDS STEEL MILLS KEEP 10-HOUR DAY

Church Council Says 53% of Men in 155 Plants Work on Shifts at Least That Long.

26.9% TOIL 7 DAYS A WEEK

Pay for Common Labor Ranges From 24 to 56 Cents an Hour, Survey of Official Data Shows.

More than 53 per cent of the men employed in 155 of the nation's steel plants are still putting in ten or more hours a day on the job, while 26.9 per cent continue to work seven days a week, according to information released yesterday by the Research Department of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The report is based on official data taken in plants which employ a total of 248,247 men. The names and locations of the individual plants are not given in the report, but generally the study covered conditions in parts of Alabama, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Western New York and Northern Illinois.

The men who made the survey are Emil M. Hartl and Edward C. Ernst, graduate students of Boston University School of Technology. They investigated conditions only in companies operating some form of elemental processes of steel production.

The inquiry was conducted in 155 plants owned by 127 companies. Statistics from twenty-one additional plants which belong to four other companies were not included because they were considered incomplete and unreliable for tabulation. Only such information as definitely covered every phase of the hours and days problem was used.

The report shows that 115,619 men, or 46.6 per cent, worked on an eight-hour day schedule; 110,698, or 44.6 per cent worked ten hours a day; 5,320, or 2.1 per cent, put in eleven hours a day, and 16,610, or 6.7 per cent, put in twelve hours.

Data on the working week showed that 51,234 men, or 20.6 per cent, work five to five and one-half days a week; 130,301, or 52.5 per cent, work six days a week, while 66,712, or 26.9 per cent, are putting in a full seven-day week.

The investigators say that these figures may be taken as representing the minimum number of men on the ten, eleven and twelve hour shifts and on the seven-day week.

"In fact, in many cases the figures were obviously colored in favor of the eight-hour day and five and six day week," the report says. "Such figures, however, were entered on the chart in just that fashion because it was desired to use only official data. * * * The investigators arbitrarily considered the 'one day off in nineteen' men as involved in the seven-day week. In one plant they found that the electric furnace men work fourteen hours per shift, the crane men work fourteen hours on the night shift and ten hours on the day shift and seven days per week, while many of the common laborers work sixteen hours per shift."

Wage rates for common labor in the steel plants range from twenty-four cents to fifty-six cents an hour, but in the majority of cases the range is from thirty-five cents to forty-five cents, the survey shows.

"The facts here presented are of the highest significance in view of the public announcement in July, 1923, that the long shift in steel was being abolished," says the release, adding that "the investigators found that in some cases the standards for the smaller concerns were admittedly set by the larger companies, which illustrates the force of example and the effects of competition."

REFUNDS $2,000,000 TAXES.

Treasury Department Allows St. Louis Estate $1,333,408.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Refunds of almost $2,000,000 in estate taxes, including an allowance of $1,333,408 to the estate of Paul Brown of St. Louis, were announced today by the Treasury Department.

Other refunds were made to the estates of the following:

Elijah P. Smith of New York, $72,047; Malcolm C. Ludlam of New York, $24,578; Henry H. Kraft of New York, $22,611; Mallie S. Riker of Newark, N. J., $25,925; George H. Pettee of Providence, R. I., $20,112; Zadoc L. White of Boston, $114,699; Henry L. Madgett of Boston, $29,161; Henry N. Talbott of Indianapolis, $20,060; Mrs. Maggie Brashaer of Houston, Texas, $99,631; C. E. Graham of Greenville, S. C., $21,040, and Chester Williams of San Francisco, $143,961.

CENSURE OF VITALE BY BAR PREDICTED

Committee Is Expected to Ask the Appellate Division to Investigate Magistrate.

MAY MAKE REPORT TODAY

Loan From Rothstein and Dismissal of Alleged Robber Seen as Basis—Whalen Charges Believed Dropped.

The report of the committee of the Bar Association which has been examining the judicial conduct of Magistrate Albert H. Vitale is adverse to the magistrate, it was reported yesterday. Kenneth M. Spence, chairman of the committee, refused to confirm or deny the reports.

"The report of the criminal courts committee is not yet completed," was his only comment.

The committee, after a protracted inquiry, in which it heard many witnesses, including Magistrate Vitale, is reported to have determined that a formal investigation by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court should be made. The appellate justices alone have power to discipline or remove city magistrates, after a hearing before a referee.

Two Accusations Predicted.

The unofficial versions of what will appear in the report had it that two points had been raised against the magistrate. They are his acceptance of a loan of $19,940 from Arnold Rothstein, the slain gambler, and his disposition of the case of Charles Fawcett, an alleged robber, who was discharged.

It was said that the committee, in considering charges made by Police Commissioner Whalen, had found nothing wrong with the magistrate's presence at the famed Roman Gardens testimonial dinner which was held up by seven armed men.

The Rothstein loan was disclosed by Major Fiorello La Guardia during one of his speeches in his unsuccessful campaign as the Republican fusion nominee for Mayor. Mr. La Guardia said that a Rothstein file had disclosed the transaction. He called upon Mr. Vitale for an explanation.

The magistrate said that the loan had been obtained from a corporation controlled by Rothstein, without his knowledge of the source of the money. He said that a friend, whom he declined to name, the man having died, had got the loan for him. He explained that he needed the money to strengthen his holdings in Bancitaly stock, which in June, 1928, was dropping rapidly in price. It has been reported the man who negotiated the loan for Vitale was the late Leonard Snitkin, an attorney.

Robbery Case Recited.

The Fawcett case involved the theft of $79 from the cash register of a Bronx storekeeper. Fawcett was represented by Joseph C. Harth of 2,461 Jerome Avenue, the Bronx, an attorney, who gave his name as Frederick Kaplan, but who was unknown at the address he gave. The lawyer said that he had been retained by Rothstein to defend the prisoner.

Commissioner Whalen in a letter to the bar association set forth the history of the case. The commissioner said that although Fawcett had confessed to the arresting policeman Magistrate Vitale disposed of the case without giving the policeman opportunity to make the confession known. After this, the commissioner charged, although he had found Fawcett not guilty, the magistrate signed an order directing that $79 found in possession of Fawcett be returned to Harth.

Whalen Called Hold-Up Fake.

The dinner episode, also a charge made by Commissioner Whalen, was that seven of the magistrate's fellow-guests at the affair had been men with police records. The commissioner said that the hold-up had been a fake, staged by another guest, Ciro Terranova, to get possession of a "murder contract" whereby a Chicago gangster was to be paid $20,000 for the murders of Frankie Yale and Frank Marlow. Terranova and three of the men were arrested, but were released for lack of evidence.

Magistrate Vitale, testifying recently at the trial of Joseph Bravate, who was acquitted as one of the hold-up men, denounced Commissioner Whalen. The magistrate defended his official conduct at the bar association hearings and was represented by Max D. Steuer as attorney.

The report of the committee is to be submitted today or tomorrow to the executive committee of the bar association. After this committee passes on it the report will go to Victor J. Dowling, as presiding justice of the Appellate Division. Justice Dowling, in accepting the offer of the association to undertake a preliminary inquiry, wrote that the "grave inferences" which were being drawn by the public from Mr. Whalen's charges made it essential that in justice to the magistrate and as a step to maintain confidence in the courts the investigation should be made.

District Attorney Crain, who is conducting a grand jury inquiry into the magistrates' courts and their staffs, spent yesterday studying the minutes of the Federal grand jury, which charged that policemen and court attaches grafted on the issuance of bail bonds. The grand jury will resume its session tomorrow with several witnesses waiting to be heard.

Francis P. Ward, Deputy State Superintendent of Insurance, conferred yesterday with representatives of bonding companies. He will report today to a committee, of which he is a member, composed besides himself of District Attorney Crain, United States Attorney Tuttle and Chief Magistrate McAdoo. The committee was named on Tuesday at a bail bond conference called by Mr. Tuttle. It will seek the establishment of a central bail bond bureau as a measure to help eliminate the abuses of the present system.

N. Y. U. WINS DEBATE.

Defeats Princeton Team Here in Argument on Disarmament.

New York University defeated Princeton in a debate last night at the Friends' Meeting House, 221 East Fifteenth Street, by 40 votes to 15.

The subject was "Disarmament." Princeton argued for, and New York University against it. The method used was the "Oregon" system, said to have been introduced in the East this year, whereby each team is divided into a "pleader," a "cross-examiner," and a "summer-up."

Will Rogers Finds One Merit In British Way of Doing Things

That England has one great custom in the government. They can bring before the House of Commons, in open session, any Cabinet member or the Premier and ask him what he has done and what he has in mind for the future, and he has to tell 'em. Today they questioned Mr. MacDonald himself about the conference.

We don't do it over here. It would be too embarrassing to our officials to have to admit what little they had done, and extremely humiliating to explain what they had in mind for the future when they had nothing in mind.

After their appointment, if they are not impeached, we never hear of them again. They only have one obligation here. They have to sign the payroll in person.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

FORESEES INCREASE IN TRADE ACTIVITY

Conference Board Reports Mill Employment in December Higher Than in 1928.

1,700 PLANTS SURVEYED

Employment in the manufacturing industries in the United States during December last year, although lower than in the two preceding months, was slightly higher than during December, 1928, according to figures made public yesterday by the National Industrial Conference Board, 247 Park Avenue. This board, which collected data from about 1,700 manufacturing establishments representing twenty-five major divisions of the manufacturing industry in various sections of the country, said its analysis "seems to point to a seasonal increase in industrial activity from now on."

The survey showed that the peak of the 1929 employment occurred in May and that the net decline between then and December was less than 10 per cent, even though the usual midwinter decline was an added factor in the situation.

Sees Wage Rate Unchanged.

In a summary of the statistics gathered in its survey, the board said that a significant phase of the depression in the last quarter of 1929 was that wage rates remained practically unaffected, as indicated by the hourly earnings per worker in the industries.

"In order adequately to appraise the nature of the decline in activity which occurred during the latter part of 1929," said the board, "it must be taken into consideration that employment in the earlier part of 1929 reached the peak level of 1923, and this in spite of the much increased productivity per worker achieved through technological progress during the past decade."

Hourly Average 58 Cents.

Throughout October, November and December, 1929, according to the survey, the hourly average earnings per worker amounted to 58 cents, a figure arrived at by dividing the total payrolls by aggregate man-hours—as compared with an average of 57 cents during the corresponding months of 1928.

"Average weekly earnings in December, 1929, reflected the effect of part-time work or reduced schedules of working hours, but were higher than in November and only slightly below those of December, 1928, indicating that the decline had slowed up or had run its course," the statement pointed out.

"With no general accumulation of stocks, and in consideration of the drastic reductions in production schedules during the latter part of 1929 in those industries which had most contributed to the high activity in the earlier part of 1929, the Conference Board's analysis seems to point to a seasonal increase in industrial activity from now on."

CUTTING ADVOCATES UNEMPLOYMENT DOLE

Head of Cooper Union Trustees Urges It as Relief for Winter Influx of Unskilled Labor.

Robert Fulton Cutting, president of the board of trustees of Cooper Union, advocated "some sort of an unemployment dole" last night at the annual Founder's Day dinner, held under the auspices of the Alumni Federation of the union at 2 Park Avenue.

The dinner, which was attended by 200 alumni, students and their guests, was preceded by a reception and a ceremony in the afternoon in which a wreath was laid before the statue of Peter Cooper in Cooper Square. The celebrations were in honor of the anniversary of the birth of the founder of the union.

Mr. Cutting was introduced by Robert C. Coffin, president of the federation. Mr. Cutting said that New York experiences too great an influx of unskilled labor in the Winter months and advocated a dole to remedy the consequent conditions. The dole, as a remedy for unemployment, was opposed by Herman A. Metz, chemist and former Controller of New York, who blamed the dole system for some of the poor economic conditions now existing in Germany and England. He warned that a "crisis" in the international war debt settlement question might again be expected in a few years when Germany reached her capacity for payment. John C. Riedel, a former president of the organization, was another speaker.

In the afternoon the wreath was laid before the Cooper statue by William H. Wagner, and a brief address was made to a small group of students and alumni by Henry D. Williams, class of 1885 at the union, and New York patent lawyer.

B. & O. IS VICTORIOUS IN SHORT-LINE MOVE

Acquisition of Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, Initial Link in Plan, Is Approved by I. C. C.

FIRST UNIFICATION ORDER

PRICE SET AT $14,263,216

Deal to Give Baltimore & Ohio a Lake Gateway, Entrance to Canada and Aid Traffic South.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Acquisition by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad of control of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway, the first link necessary to the consummation of its plan for development of a new low grade New York-Chicago short line, was approved today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The decision, the first unification order to be handed down since the publication of the commission's complete plan for consolidation of railroads, in which the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh was included in a suggested Baltimore & Ohio system, was looked upon here as a notable victory for the Baltimore & Ohio and a setback for both the Delaware & Hudson and the Pennsylvania Railroad, which had opposed the application.

The commission in 1927 rejected an application by the Delaware & Hudson to lease the road given today to the Baltimore & Ohio.

Today's order is believed to forecast favorable action on the applications of the Baltimore & Ohio to acquire control of the Buffalo & Susquehanna, another Pennsylvania coal road necessary for its New York-Chicago short line, and for authority to issue $63,031,000 in thirty-year 4½ per cent convertible bonds, part of the proceeds of which are intended to be used to acquire the two connecting rail links.

Road to Gain Advantages.

The acquisition of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, essentially a coal road, reaching from the Pittsburgh district, where it serves Western Pennsylvania bituminous mines, to both Buffalo and Rochester, will give the Baltimore & Ohio several important advantages not now enjoyed.

One will be the department of the port of Buffalo as a lake gateway, superseding the present Baltimore & Ohio terminal at Fairport, Ohio. It also will open the port of Rochester with its car ferry connections across Lake Ontario to Cobourg, Ont., with the Canadian National Railways.

In addition, the department of southbound traffic over a single line between Buffalo and Baltimore, largely through the movement of grain for export, will be encouraged, thus balancing its traffic.

The development of the Buffalo-Baltimore single line route will offer competition to the Pennsylvania's route between the two cities, although the latter route is some 200 miles shorter and possesses more favorable grades.

Acquisition of the road will be accomplished by execution of a contract with the Alleghany Corporation for purchase for $14,263,216 of 84.22 per cent of the outstanding stock of the coal road, including 43,024 shares of preferred and 96,927 shares of common.

The commission directed that the Baltimore & Ohio acquire on the same terms all other outstanding stock and to this the Baltimore & Ohio has agreed.

Operating Economies Expected.

The commission attached no other strings to its approval order, except that it will require the Baltimore & Ohio to maintain existing channels and rail gateways and to maintain separate operating records for the time being. The order, however, will not become effective until the commission determines the disposition of the Mount Jewett, Kinzua & Ritersville Railroad, a short line serving Kushequa, Pa., which it considers should be absorbed by the Baltimore & Ohio.

Acquisition of control of the coal road is intended to effect a total of some $800,000 yearly in operating economies, which soon will offset $900,000 in new construction in strengthening bridges in the Pittsburgh district required to permit the heavy engines of the Baltimore & Ohio to be utilized.

Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman, in a partially concurring opinion, insisted that the commission might later find that only the eighty-mile stretch of the coal road required for the New York-Chicago short line should be allotted to the Baltimore & Ohio. For this reason, he said, the action of the commission should have been conditioned upon possible other disposition of the remainder of the road at a later date.

FOR PARKING RULE CHANGE.

Forty-Second Street Group Urges Grand Central Modification.

Modification of the no-parking rule in the new Grand Central zone traffic regulations is urged in a bulletin issued yesterday by the Forty-second Street Property Owners and Merchants Association. It is suggested that parking be permitted for thirty minutes for automobiles containing an attendant, in order to permit customers of business establishments within the zone to come and go from such establishments conveniently.

Other changes suggested are modification of the commercial traffic ban to permit deliveries to be made within the zone at all times, but not to permit through commercial traffic; changing Vanderbilt Avenue from a one-way southbound street to one-way northbound; and addition of Forty-fifth and Thirty-ninth Streets to the list of streets on which parking is prohibited.

MARIA MUELLER CHARMS IN 'AIDA'

MME. BORI AS JULIETTE

Gounod's Opera, With Edward Johnson as Romeo, Nets $13,000 for the Free Milk Fund.

A capacity audience applauded an excellent cast of singers last night at the Metropolitan Opera House in the fifth performance this year of "Aida." Maria Mueller, resuming her rôle of the heroine, sang her music with appealing charm, though her lyric voice is not altogether suited to the rôle. Giovanni Martinelli, who is leaving for a six weeks' concert tour, looked every inch the Egyptian soldier-prince in a new and efective costume, sang with his usual brilliancy, and received the customary ovation. Others in the cast were Mme. Matzenauer, a regal Amneris; Aida Doninelli as the priestess, Joseph Macpherson as the King, Adamo Didur as Ramfis, Giuseppe Danise as Amonasro, and Giordano Paltrinieri as the messenger. Mr. Serafin conducted.

Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson sang the season's fourth performance of Gounod's "Roméo et Juliette" at the Metropolitan yesterday afternoon. The matinee was a benefit for the Free Milk Fund for Babies, Inc., and a holiday audience paid about $13,000 profit to that charity. Messrs. De Luca, Bada and Ludikar, Miss Swarthout and others reappeared and Mr. Hasselmans conducted.

Four French operas in four days will be the Metropolitan's high record when "Faust" is sung tonight for the 200th time in forty-five seasons at this house. Antonin Trantoul makes his début as Faust, following a matinee of "Lohengrin," in which Marie Jeritza as Elsa takes her leave for the season.

Next Sunday's all-Russian concert and Monday's third sold-out "Sadko" will usher in the opera's seventeenth week and the final third of New York's season. Two "first times" are "Das Rheingold," with Bohnen, Kappel, Kirchhoff and others, on Friday afternoon, Feb. 21, and "Tales of Hoffmann," with Bori and Trantoul, Saturday night, Feb. 22, a benefit for the Grenfell Association.

There will be performances in the regular subscription also of "Götterdämmerung" next Wednesday, with Ohms, Laubenthal and Bohnen; Thursday "Bohème," Moore, Johnson and Scotti; Friday night "Aïda," Müller and Ransome, and Saturday matinee "Meistersinger," Stückgold, Laubenthal and Whitehill.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS IN UNIQUE RECITAL

TAUGHT IN SCHOOL CLASSES

Demonstration by American Academy of Teachers of Singing to Show Improved Methods.

The American Academy of Teachers of Singing presented yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall a program of songs performed by boys and girls who had received class training in singing in high schools of this city, Providence, R. I., and Rochester, N. Y. The demonstrations, arranged by Frederic S. Haywood, were given to prove that class instruction in singing could be given boys and girls in the senior high schools in such a way as to make them intelligent amateurs of the art, and to give those with special talent a good foundation to pursue a professional career. This has not been deemed a possibility in the past. It is only within the last decade that training in good principles of vocalization, as well as sight-singing, counting time, &c., has been attempted in the public schools of this country. But yesterday afternoon twelve boys and girls from three high schools sang songs by the greatest composers with an enforced and musical tone and a quality of diction not equaled by many professionals.

Those who took part were William [illegible], baritone; Marion Sonner, contralto; Raymond Mookan, tenor, and Ines Steinberg, mezzo-soprano, from the Newton High School; Marie Rochon, soprano; Andrew Krekotan, tenor; Muriel Austin, soprano, and Sigmund Block, baritone, from the Providence Commercial High School, and Edna Marshall, mezzo-soprano; Rose Woodbridge, tenor; Helen Maddock, soprano, and Charles Bergener, baritone, from Rochester's West High School. The teachers, who introduced each singer, explaining his or her background and experience of singing, which was invariably outside of any private teaching, were Cornelius L. Valentine of the high school music department, Walter H. Butterfield, director of music of Providence, and Alfred Spouse, director of choral music for Rochester. The composers represented were Mendelssohn, Brahms, Herbert, Speaks, d'Hardelot, Humperdinck, Handel, Wardlaw, Dix, Coe, Hurleigh, Gaul, Strickland, Curran, Brown, Rasbach, Fuel and O'Hara.

The purpose of the meeting was stated in an introductory address by George Ferguson of the American Academy of Teachers of Singing, who emphasized the need of making good singing an accomplishment, or rather a natural means of expression for the entire rising generation of the country, thus pointing out that symphony orchestras and opera houses do not suffice to make a musical country. Mr. Haywood, who followed Mr. Ferguson and whose work during the last ten years has been that of study of methods of teaching singing in the high schools, said that he was convinced [illegible] the pupils who [illegible] but wished instead to represent their performances as typical of a general level of work accomplished.

The pupils included one singer who had only a year and of three years ago and now performed, with excellent tone, diction and general interpretation, two songs by standard composers. There were other equally significant examples of accomplishment. Mr. Haywood that any of his performers possessed of phenomenal voices or necessarily individuals who [illegible] and proved special talent for a career as a professional artist. The work of teaching aimed at quality [illegible] of tone, at an accurate intonation, good phrasing and musical interpretation with regard to the significance of text. These [illegible] were admirably fulfilled [illegible] evinced by many teachers of high reputation who were present, after the performance, members of an audience of about 200 critical and deeply interested listeners put questions to the instructors about their work.

STUDENTS GIVE CONCERT.

Before a holiday audience, including musicians eager to discern new talent, the Institute of Musical Art gave its seventeenth annual "students' concert" last night at Carnegie Hall. Margarete Dessoff led the Madrigal Choir of sixty voices in Brahms's setting of a Psalm, Op. 74, No. 1. Willem Willeke conducted the orchestra players in [illegible] of Goldmark and Berlioz and [illegible] for strings, Op. 3, by [illegible].

Vladimir Selinsky was a dignified soloist in the adagio from Beethoven's violin concerto. Edna Rockstein [illegible] Franck's tone poem, "Les Djinns." Except for two bass viols, a bass tuba, bassoon and cymbals, the entire ensemble was of youthful [illegible] young women. The orchestra was said to be the largest non-professional group to appear here, unless [illegible] high schools which gave [illegible] this spring.

MALEVA HARVEY PLAYS.

Pianist Shows Mature Musicianship in Classic and Modern Works.

Maleva Harvey, a pianist who came here [illegible] gave a recital last night in the Town Hall. A pupil of the late Oliver Denton and of Isidor Philipp of Paris, Miss Harvey has [illegible] organist [illegible] of the West End Presbyterian Church.

Her playing last night of a varied program of classic and modern works showed sincere and mature understanding occasionally hampered by technical shortcomings. Her program comprised short pieces by Pasquini, Couperin and Rameau; Beethoven's "Waldstein" sonata; a Chopin group that included the Berceuse, two Etudes and the C sharp minor Scherzo; Liszt's "Sposalizio," Busoni's arrangement of the Paganini-Liszt Etude No. 5, a Scherzo by Tcherepnine, and Debussy's "L'Isle Joyeuse."

AGNES DE MILLE GIVES FINE DANCE RECITAL

Performance of Unusual Charm Is in the Nature of an Intimate Revue.

Agnes de Mille made her first appearance of the season at the Martin Beck Theatre last night in what was actually a dance recital but actually one of the most entertaining of intimate revues. For sheer theatrical pleasure it will be difficult to recall another program of the kind, whether by Miss de Mille or any of her colleagues, which could match it. If the higher reaches of the dancer's art were nowhere conspicuous, there were skill in the assembling of the eighteen numbers and inventiveness and technical excellence in their performance.

The cast which supported the star performer consisted of Frank Parker, a diseur who has been seen and heard hereabouts on previous occasions, but never to better advantage; Warren Leonard, a dancer who was Miss de Mille's partner in "The Black Crook" in Hoboken and who made his concert debut in this program, and the apparently indispensable Louis Horst at the piano. The combination made for variety and yet had the good taste all in maintaining the general key and style of the performance.

Miss de Mille's new dances, of which there were three, are scarcely to be ranked among the best of her creations. "Julia Dances," accompanied by charming sixteenth century music, proved to be the best of them. It possessed line and form, both of which were enhanced and, indeed, partly expressed, by a beautiful costume quite consistent with the Herrick poem upon which the dance was based. "Blues," her only other new solo, makes an oppressive point of tawdriness, but is otherwise obscure. If every concert dancer must create one jazz dance, as seems to be the case, this may be only Miss de Mille's way of getting it over with.

The third new dance is a Scottish duet with Mr. Leonard, charming enough, but with no particular reason for being. None of these compositions compares in any particular with the older dances with which they were surrounded. "Civil War," for example, which is [illegible] closely knit than formerly; "'49," with its genuineness and muscle; "Harvest Reel," a peasant bacchanale full of vigor and beauty, though a trifle obscure, are all of more solid fibre and greater emotional warmth. "Tryout" is less touching, but scarcely less real, and "May Day," danced with Mr. Leonard, is thoroughly delightful.

Mr. Leonard proved himself an admirable partner for Miss de Mille. He also contributed three solos to the program and showed himself to be superior to the average dancer in technique, composition and stage presence. His most popular number was "Spring Song," a bit of comedy done in archaic style. "Hero Saga," in spirit, [illegible] technical mannerisms of Martha Graham, contained some excellent movement and was marred only by a bad costume.

Mr. Parker presented among other songs, two of his delicious moralistic relics of a past generation and recited a Verlaine poem by way of variety. His best number was a ditty depicting a day in the life of a Hollywood star "according to the Cine Photo Magazine." In it he employed his delicately cutting method of ridicule in his most genial manner.

MOSES LEVINE MAKES A BRILLIANT DEBUT

Young American Violinist Delights Audience at the Town Hall.

Moses Levine, young American violinist, who gave his début recital yesterday afternoon at Town Hall under the auspices of the Juilliard School of Music, may justly lay claim to the title of artist in view of the manner in which he interpreted the Brahms sonata for violin and piano in A, the unaccompanied Bach sonata in G minor, Saint-Saëns's B minor concerto and Vieuxtemps's Rondo in E.

Mr. Levine, though a native of New York and consequently brought up in an environment hardly conducive to quiet and reserve, nevertheless contradicted all this in his interpretation of Brahms and Bach. Despite his comparative youth, there was a mature gentleness, and often a spirituality, which seemed at times quite incongruous when matched with the slight and almost motionless figure of the violinist. In understanding and what seemed to be a native feeling for phrase in these two classics, the violinist was again unusually happy.

It is a paradox that a young violinist should play Bach and Brahms with more affinity than Saint-Saëns and Vieuxtemps. The very qualities of introspection and subjectivity which made the two former so grateful militated somewhat against hearing the two latter composers. A little more warmth of tone, an admixture of some yellow in his palette, more abandon, more speed and brilliance in the right hand and brilliance of bow technique, would act as a splendid balance to the present scholarly musicianship of this player—in short, more of the superficial brilliancy of virtuosity.

In justice, it may be said that the self-consciousness attendant upon a first engagement and the fact that none of the unusual shorter show pieces was included in the program probably prevented Mr. Levine from displaying his full abilities. A début does not reveal everything which a performer can do. At present Mr. Levine plays [illegible] to the small circle of musicians and violinists.

SCREEN NOTES.

"Happy Days," the Grandeur film, will be shown on the enlarged screen of the Roxy for the first time today. This picture was made for projection on a screen that almost fills the proscenium of any theatre. Many of the Fox stars and featured players take part in the production.

The Vitaphone version of William Archer's play "The Green Goddess," with George Arliss, is to be launched this evening at the Winter Garden.

"Puttin' on the Ritz," with Harry Richman, will be presented [illegible] Artists at the Earl Carroll Theatre tomorrow evening. Joan Bennett, Lilyan Tashman and James Gleason are in the supporting cast.

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Joseph, Broadway Style.

| Potiphar | Ferdinand Gottschalk |

Although the "Joseph" who supplies the title to Bertram Bloch's play, which was acted at the Liberty last evening, is identical with the young man who once interpreted Pharaoh's dream, George Jessel enacts the title rôle, and you know what that means. Whatever traces of seriousness may have lingered in Mr. Bloch's mind as a playwright are quite dispelled by Mr. Jessel's mountebankery. It is good mountebankery; it results in a Joseph with all the racial blandishments of a ticket speculator and all the ingratiating qualities of Mr. Jessel's unctuous fooling. And since nothing is seriously intended, no offense need be taken at its technical irreverence. Being a fragmentary narrative, it is spasmodic entertainment—amusing in the early moments, labored through the middle and then deftly comic through a capital last act when all wise plays strike to be as good as they can. This one is thin to the point of transparency. It is, in fact, no better than Mr. Jessel makes it. Being nimble-witted, light and dextrous, he needs only a firmer script to make the evening altogether delightful.

Such of the facts of the story as Mr. Bloch has used in this sketch he has preserved in sufficient accuracy. First he introduces Joseph as Potiphar's slave. Then he successively reveals Joseph as an aggressive farm overseer, as the one whom Potiphar's wife desires, as the slave who is unjustly condemned to prison and death for offending the dignity of his mistress, as the prisoner who eludes the death sentence and, finally, in a moment of good luck and quick thinking, interprets Pharaoh's dream and becomes overseer of Egypt.

But this suggests little of the true spirit of the play which is frivolously iconoclastic. For the point is that, by virtue of Mr. Jessel's Jewish comedy, Joseph becomes a realist and an amiable opportunist with his eye always on the main chance. He is a salesman and an organizer. He can talk anybody into a bargain. When Potiphar is on the point of buying one slave for 125 pieces of silver, Joseph shows him how he can buy three for seventy-five, including a certain energetic Hebrew from Canaan. Somewhat skeptical about the benevolence of the Egyptian gods, he digs a practical irrigating ditch to water the fields in case the gods should be slack. He turns a deaf ear to the honeyed phrases of Potiphar's wife, not because he is scrupulous, but because he fears the crocodile fate of the slave who has loved his mistress. And when he is in prison, only a day this side of execution by hanging, he coaxes the prison superintendent into letting him put the prison on a paying basis; and he becomes the manager himself. He is, in fact, the biblical counterpart of Marco Millions, but inoffensive, because the background is not the serene wisdom of the Orient, but the heavy-footed obtuseness of the Egyptians. And because, withal, he worships devoutly the god of Israel.

If Fannie Brice were to play Potiphar's wife, rolling her enormous eyes and chasing her insinuating voice up and down the register, Mr. Jessel would have an admirable foil for his buffoonery—although the result would be, as they say, something else again. As it is Ara Gerald plays that part with sufficient sense of travesty to make it amusing. The rest of the acting is mixed and various. Douglass Dumbrille is a Pharoah too much on the heavy side. But Ferdinand Gottschalk is there with a fussy, petty Potiphar in the spirit of dry farce and a constant pleasure in his scenes. If the many other actors in the cast had as light a touch the comedy might be better filled out, and George S. Kaufman's direction more evident.

Well, back it comes again to Mr. Jessel's volatile jesting. He is a remarkably likable comedian in the Broadway vernacular, vulgar in his point of view but never vulgar in his style. He keeps the colored ball of comedy in the air. Without him "Joseph" might be distasteful as satire on a beautiful Bible story. Even with him it is not a comedy that is fully sustained.

"TOPAZE," SUNNY PLAY RUNNING TO SLY HUMOR

Frank Morgan Provides Much Fun at Music Box as a Schoolmaster.

The play called "Topaze," which Lee Shubert escorted into the Music Box last night, may possess some novelty as a French comedy in which infidelity is not the central theme. But it has other and happier distinctions than this purely negative one. It is a leisurely piece which, if it never quite recaptures the amusement of its first scenes, rounds out the evening as a pleasant and often extremely diverting entertainment.

In Paris this comedy has been highly successful. Its author, represented here once before as collaborator upon the play called "Merchants of Glory," which the Guild produced several seasons ago, has achieved considerable celebrity in France with it and with "Marius," which Gilbert Miller expects to do on Broadway some fine day. And when you know that the discerning Jed Harris was once interested in "Topaze" you have just about all the necessary background.

By no more estoteric means than looking up the notices, you may gather that in Paris "Topaze" was regarded as a rather bitterly satirical affair. The translation now in Forty-fifth Street, where it has arrived by way of London and the English playwright called Benn W. Levy, is comparatively mild and sunny, running to sly humor and gentle irony as, in always literate dialogue, it pokes its fun at an almost stupidly idealistic schoolmaster and the corrupt governmental officials with whom he finds himself involved. And somehow Mr. Levy has preserved part of the Gallic flavor of the original, which also comes through in Frank Morgan's excellent performance as the pedagogue.

It may be slightly hard to believe that Mr. Morgan, aided by a number of stage children as his pupils, could provide as much agreeable fun as he does in the first act. Here he is the decent, slightly abashed schoolmaster who is endeavoring to inculcate in his more than slightly recalcitrant charges such of the simpler virtues as are represented by wall mottoes reading "Ill-gotten gains are not worth while." His sole ambition is to become a Doctor of Moral Philosophy, and he is the soul of honor in every transaction. When he refuses to falsify the records and give one of the school's favored pupils better grades than he deserves, Topaze soon finds himself without a class to teach.

Ignominiously dismissed from the school, this gentle, trusting soul goes to the home of a woman whose nephew is one of his private pupils. Those assembled there are quick to realize Topaze's suitability as a dummy to hide the illegal, not to say grafting, operations of the Muncipal Councilor, who is the woman's lover.

Unknowingly at first Topaze becomes party to a number of Parisian scandals, some of them extremely lauhgable in the telling. When he finally discovers with what crooked business he is involved, he is made to believe that by continuing in it he can rescue the woman, Suzy Courtois, with whom he himself is in love, from the Municipal Councilor. The final straw comes when he learns that even the newspaper which is threatening him with exposure has its price. It takes this worm some time to turn, but turn he does for the last scene, wherein, immaculately dressed and with his scraggly beard shaved to a snappy mustache, he becomes the biggest man of affairs of them all and reverses matters completely by capturing Suzy Courtois.

Both in the writing and playing, Topaze, at times, is made just a trifle too gullible and innocent. There are moments when he is a bit sappy, and you feel that even a few simple lessons from the birds and the flowers and the bees would help. But since the play subordinates character study to facile comedy, this need not seriously hamper your enjoyment.

In addition to Mr. Morgan's superior portrait of the perplexed school teacher, there are capable supporting performances by the patrician Phoebe Foster, by a Dickensian pair, Hubert Druce and Alf Helton, and by Harry Davenport, among others. Stanley Logan's direction is better than usual, and the settings by Rollo Wayne are likewise above par.

SUBSCRIPTION GROUPS FOR GRIBBLE'S PLAY

"Elizabeth and Essex" to Be Presented in Chicago and Philadelphia Before Coming Here.

"Elizabeth and Essex," Harry Wagstaff Gribble's version of three old English plays, will be presented for subscription engagements in Chicago and Philadelphia before it comes to New York. "Elizabeth and Essex" will open in Wilmington on Friday of next week and, after playing in Cleveland and Detroit, will be seen in Chicago on March 17 under the auspices of that city's Dramatic League. After four weeks there the play will journey to Philadelphia, where it will have a month's engagement at the Adelphi Theatre under the auspices of the Professional Players. The Shuberts are sponsoring both of these subscription groups, which have been organized this season along the lines of the Theatre Guild.

The cast of "Elizabeth and Essex" includes Thais Lawton, Vivienne Osborne, Verree Teasdale, Hugh Buckler, Murray Kinnell and Wilfrid Seagram. W. P. Tanner is the producer.

"SEA HAWKS" ATTRACTIVE.

Film Shows the Habits of Ospreys, Eagles and Peregrines.

An interesting film of ospreys, eagles, peregrines and other birds was exhibited yesterday morning for a single showing at the Little Picture House by Captain C. W. R. Knight, who also gave a talk about the habits of the birds, with descriptive details concerning the making of the motion-picture.

The film shows the birds in motion and at rest, sometimes slowing up the action in views of them in flight. The grace of movement and the method by which the osprey dives into the water after food or alights on objects are clearly shown.

Most of the film was made on Gardiner's Island, near Montauk Point, L. I., where the osprey and other birds have a refuge on Clarence H. Mackay's estate. Captain Knight also showed pictures of falconry as it was in the middle ages and said he thought the sport would be revived in England. He some time ago took four ospreys to Scotland in the hope of rehabitating the species in Great Britain, where the osprey has been extinct.

Needless Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving neuralgic, neuritic, rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. The doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! For millions of men and women have found it does. To cure the cause of any pain you must consult your doctor; but you may always turn to Bayer Aspirin for immediate relief.

Irish Setter, Pekingese and Bulldog Complete Group—Big Crowd at the Garden Cheers Winner.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Crowned queen of the fifty-fourth annual bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club in Madison Square Garden last night, Pendley Calling of Blarney, the wire-haired fox terrier bitch owned by John G. Bates of Morristown, N. J., received an ovation from the greatest gathering of dog fanciers that ever has cheered a bench winner in the United States. It was one of the old-time demonstrations, as the fox terrier is on the very top wave of popularity in this country, and the victory of the magnificent little terrier had been anticipated because of her record on both sides of the Atlantic.

It was a fitting climax to the greatest of all American dog shows, and the pent-up feelings of the spectators, keyed to the highest tension by the competitions in the variety groups which had preceded the final spectacle, were let loose without restraint.

In some other years, when the unexpected has happened, there have been ominous hushes when the winner was announced. No such feeling was in evidence in the Garden last night, since Pending Calling of Blarney, winner of many championship certificates in England before she sailed to this country last September in the personal charge of her owner, had gained a host of friends and admirers by her continuous victories, beginning with the specialty show of the American Fox Terrier Club on the Hotel Pennsylvania roof last Sunday.

She battled her way to victory over all of the stars of her breed, fought it out in the terrier group and defeated the representatives of all the terrier breeds in the country before she came into the ring for the final judgment.

Winner Picked by McCandlish.

W. L. McCandlish of Foxlydiate Redditch, England, chairman of the English Kennel Club, was the man into whose hands was given the task of picking the best from the six winners of the variety groups. This was the first year in which six had come into the last competition, the sporting group having been divided last year into gun dogs and dogs of the hound type. Thus there was just one more factor to add to the uncertainty.

The great ring, with its covering of dark green matting was surrounded many deep when the dogs were called for the concluding and most spectacular feature of the annual exhibition. Boxes and arena seats were filled and the first balcony jammed at 9:45 o'clock when the dogs were summoned into the ring. There was a hush as they were lined up for the first inspection, but thereafter the applause was almost continuous as the partisans gave their favorites full measure of support.

Pitted against the winner in the parade about the ring was the lumbering bulldog, the far-reaching shepherd, the proud free-moving Irish setter, the mincing little Pekingese and the merry beagle. Mr. McCandlish made his first decisions quickly. The bulldog, the Pekingese and the setter were the first to be waived and passed out of the picture.

Shepherd Is Spectacular.

The noted English expert then devoted his critical attention to the fox terrier, which was shown by her owner; the beagle, handled by Everett Fread, and the shepherd dog, which obeyed the slightest command of her handler, John Simpson, who did not use a lead. The last was the most spectacular shower and possibly the sympathies of the crowd leaned more to her than to the fox terrier. The beagle was patently tied and did not show at her best.

It is probably unique in the history of the Westminster Kennel Club that the final judgment rested among the female of the species, all three being bitches. It may be said that every dog was given the best of handling and had brought out every ounce of show quality she possessed.

To the winner went a purse of $100 in gold and a rosette in the club colors of purple and gold with a medal in the centre. There was no prize for the other two, although Mr. McCandlish sent the beagle, Meadow Lark Watchman, owned by Louis Batjar of New Brunswick, N. J., into the second winning stall, with the shepherd dog, Giralda's Lola, owned by the Giralda Farms of Madison, N. J., being moved into third position.

For the final events the many rings had been thrown into one broad expanse of matting-covered floor space on which every contestant had the fullest opportunity to show his paces before the greatest gathering of dog fanciers that ever had assembled in the United States.

In this respect the fifty-fourth annual exhibition of the Westminster Kennel Club broke all previous records, just as the entry of 2,673 dogs on the benches had far surpassed anything in American dog show history.

Long before the gun dogs of the sporting dog variety group were summoned to the ring for the first of the events of the evening program not a seat was to be had about the ringside. Boxes were filled, as were the arena seats, while at the height of the evening's proceedings the balconies, framed in long sweeping lines of bunting in the club colors of purple and gold, were crowded with enthusiasts who found there a spot that gave a perfect view of everything going on below. A multiplicity of lights flooded the arena.

Champion Delaware Kate, typical of all that is good in Irish setters, was proclaimed best of the gun-dog division of the sporting dog group, first of the events of the evening program. This splendid specimen of the breed, owned by Ernest W. Smoot of Washington, a son of the United States Senator from Utah, is the heroine of many a hard-fought battle in the show ring.

Of the most intense coloration, her magnificent red coat glistening under the glare of the flood lights, Delaware Kate, daughter of Ravenhill Phil and Delaware Mill Lass, showed herself the proud beauty she is, posing beautifully under the rigid scrutiny of W. T. Payne of Kingston, Pa., who judged the group. She was marked the moment she entered the ring and received continuous applause whenever she was asked to show her paces.

Eleven of the gun-dog winners competed and second ribbon went to the cocker spaniel, Idahurst Belle II, owned by O. B. Gilman of Boston. This great little bitch, winner of the Boston and New York specialty shows, was conceded a great chance for the honors in her division and she gave the winner a hard battle. Champion Lilac Wonder, the springer spaniel owned by E. DeK. Leffingwell of Whitter, Cal., carried off third honors, fourth going to the pointer Post Road Dover, shown by Joe Armstrong of East Greenwich, R. I.

This group is second only in popularity to the terriers and partisanship ran high, each contestant being accorded a full measure of applause as it paced up and down the ring. Until the very last there was no indication of the way the ribbons were to go, and because of the time the judge lingered over the spaniels it was thought that he might finally select either the cocker or the springer for top honors.

Finally Mr. Payne waved the winners to their respective stalls in the order named and even then he did not make his final award, keeping the crowds in still further suspense. These four once more were asked to parade that the judge might confirm his own mind in his preliminary judgment. Then they were waved back in the first order and the ribbons were handed out to the accompaniment of a great outburst.

Best of the Terriers.

Pendley Calling of Blarney was proclaimed best of all the terriers when Walter S. Glynn, the British terrier judge, waved her owner, Mr. Bates into stall No. 1, indicating victory.

Fifteen terrier stars, which had come through the bitter battles in their breeds during the first two days of the show, came into the ring for competition in the most popular of all the variety groups in the classification. There was almost continuous applause as the various favorites paraded.

Mr. Glynn adopted a method of his own in making his selections. The dogs were grouped promiscuously at the lower end of the ring. There he went over each individual carefully for confirmation, coat and all the other details on which a terrier is judged. Then he had their handlers walk them slowly in a great circle, where his practiced eye took in the manner of going of each.

One by one, as they came before him, he scrutinized each, making his decisions quickly. One here, another there, was waved aside, the gesture meaning that they were to leave the ring. Finally when the circle had been completed there remained the fox terrier, an airedale, a Bedlington, a Welsh and a Sealyham. Next the Bedlington was sent to the gate and the final parade was ordered. Then they were motioned in order to the stalls indicating the final awards.

Second was the Airedale terrier Wolstanton Superb of Firenze, owned by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim of Babylon, L. I. Third went to the Sealvham terrier Delf Discriminate of Pinegrade, owned by the Pinegrade Kennels of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic C. Brown of New York, and fourth to the Welsh terrier Rowdy Boy, owned by the Misses De Coppet of Narragansett Pier, R. I.

Procession Delights Spectators.

Late afternoon in the Garden found a procession passing through the entrance of the judging ring that brought "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" from the spectators. It was the annual parade for the toys—winners of the various breeds that are the pride of the women fanciers and the everlasting delight of the youngsters. Black, white, silken and curly coated, they toddled along by the sides of their mistresses and handlers, as proud and cocky as the perkiest of the terriers and with as much dignity as ever was shown by a Great Dane.

Walter H. Reeves of Canada was the judge and he lined them up the full length of the ring. Each breed had the noisy support of enthusiastic admirers and those among the spectators who really knew nothing about the distinctive points of any of them certainly must have found some one among them to admire above the others to judge by the applause.

If one stood out in the eyes of the casual visitors it was the snowy white Maltese terrier, Lady Cleo of Arr, owned by Mrs. James Gardner Rossman of Plainfield, N. J., who has done more to keep the breed alive in this country than any other fancier. But color did not carry her through, and she was placed no better than fifth in the final award.

Eleven Show for Best of Group.

Eleven toys showed for best of the group, and for that honor none could challenge seriously the claims of the great little Pekingese, the recent importation Fuchon Paladin of Alderbourne, owned by Mrs. Kay A. Cushman of New York City, who won with him in England after she bought him, captured the highest honors at the recent Pekingese specialty show here, won best toy at Baltimore and best of breed here this week. He was superbly shown by Miss Marjorie Cross, the English girl who has handled him in all his appearances here.

Second was the Pomeranian Perivale Golden Bracket, owned by Viola G. Procter of Wenham, Mass. He showed to perfection and defeated the Yorkshire terrier Haslingden Dandy Dinty, owned by Andrew Paterson of Buffalo. Fourth came the little Brussels Griffon, champion Bazil, owned by Mrs. William D. Goff of Concord, Mass. Great applause greeted the awards of the ribbons among the toys.

The non-sporting group was the smallest of them all, including only eight breeds. Predictions of many experts were verified when the bulldog topped them. This was the Canadian-bred Champion Maple Spring Boddie Boy, owned by Carey W. Lindsay of Baltimore. He is a striking red fawn in color and a splendid shower. He was best of breed last year in the Garden and finished second in his group.

Second ribbon went to the striking poodle, champion Ago v. d. Felsenburg, owned by John Macbeth Richard of New York City, which was placed over the Dalmatian Champion Gladmore Guardsman, owned by Mrs. Charles K. Lyons of Carnegie, Pa. Fourth was won by the French bulldog, Pompey's Rival, owned by Mrs. Henry L. Bauer of St. Albans, L. I.

Keen interest was displayed in the parade of the braces and teams. Mrs. Ilch's collies were the best of the working dogs in braces and teams, while Robert F. Maloney of Pittsburgh had the best of the sporting dog braces and teams.

There was a big parade of the terriers, a large percentage of the breeds competing for the brace honors. This was one of the most picturesque events of the day, and it gave the spectators an unequaled view of the various types as they were put through their paces individually in the wide expanse of matting-covered floor. Best of the braces were the Sealyham terriers of the Shelterfield Kennels of Buzzards Bay, Mass., while the team honors were carried off by the wirehaired fox terriers of Richard C. Bondy of Golden Bridge, N. Y.

Stirring Features Start.

It was at the opening of the afternoon session that the first of the spectacular features of the exhibition was started. This was the judging of the first of the variety groups in which the winners among the various breeds grouped in the hound division of the sporting group came into the ring for judgment.

One great ring occupied the centre of the Garden and on all sides it was surrounded by a densely packed mass of enthusiastic spectators. Boxes and balconies were filled as the hounds, ranging from the towering Irish wolfhound to the seemingly miniature beagles and dachshunds, were paraded before W. T. Payne of Kingston, Pa., who made the awards.

Mr. Payne, a hunting man himself, demands working qualities in the dogs he selects and that point has been noticeable in his judging during the show. It needed not many minutes of consideration for him to select as best of group the winning beagle, Champion Meadow Lark Watchman, the hound owned by Louis Batjer of New Brunswick, N. J. He had scored brilliantly over all the others in his breed and this little showman was a picture in the ring.

Second went to the whippet, Champion Nora of Sionhill owned by the Althea Farm Kennels of Darien, Conn. Another of the speedy type of hound, a greyhound, was placed third. This was Gamecock David Wales, a homebred from the kennels of George S. West of Chestnut Hill, Mass. Fourth went to the biggest of all breeds, the Irish wolfhound, the winning representative being Felixstowe Kilmorac Halcyon, a famous winner from the Halcyon Kennels of Goshen, N. Y.

Going on to a still more brilliant triumph than she gained in competition among all others of her kind during the morning, Giralda's Lola fought her way to the top of the working dog group over a notable field. This American-bred shepherd dog, the property of the Giralda Farms of Madison, N. J., provided one of the most beautiful pictures that has been seen in a Westminster ring in many a year. Black she is, with the tan of her body a brilliant shade, and Lola would be a commanding figure in any canine company.

But Lola is a dog among thousands in her temperament and her training. No lead she needs—merely a gentle word of command or a wave of the hand to tell her what to do. It was this picture of a dog of the highest mental development that caught the fancy of the assemblage, held attention throughout the time she was in the ring and brought forth great applause when her handler received from G. V. Glebe, the judge of the working dog group, the ribbon and envelope which carried with it the highest award in the division.

Collie Takes Second Prize.

Second went to the collie, Lucason of Ashtead O Bellhaven, owned by the Bellhaven Kennels of Mrs. Florence B. Ilch of Red Bank, N. J. Defeat of Lucason of Ashtead dashed all hopes of his owner of repeating the sensational victory scored a year ago by his litter brother, Laund Loyalty of Bellhaven, then a puppy and which went to best in show. The collie made a gallant fight for the honors but the shepherd scored a rather easy victory.

Third honors in the group were carried off by the Old English Sheepdog, Montford Marksman, owned by the Tenacre Kennels of P. Hamilton Goodsell of White Plains, N. Y. This dog had been shown in fine coat and condition in his breed and it had been predicted that he would surely get into the ribbons in his group.

It was the winning Great Dane, Betty of Ridgerest, striking golden brindle owned by D. Herbert Hostetter of Pasadena, Cal., that was placed fourth in the group. She is a worthy specimen and made the going very warm for the other competitors.

Two notable breeds in number and quality—shepherd dogs and Great Danes—wound up the judging in the regular classes. All the smaller rings were thrown into two great enclosures that these breeds, in the judging of which so much depends on action, movement and soundness, might have the fullest scope in which to exhibit their paces.

Shepherds had the larger following as might be expected from the intense interest in the breed throughout the country; and this was heightened because the breed was judged by Lady Kitty Ritson of Cobham, Surrey, England, one of the most colorful and interesting figures in the English dog world and in shepherd dogs particularly. This charming authority on the breed was greeted with a splendid entry of 140 dogs—a sufficient number for a first-class specialty show.

American-Bred Dog Scores.

An American-bred dog gained the highest honors ever attained in the United States—going winners bitches, best of winners and best of breed—defeating Siegers and Siegerins, champions and former winners of great competitions. It fell to Giralda's Lola, owned by the Giralda Farms of Mrs. Geraldine R. Dodge of Madison, N. J., to carry away the purple rosette emblematic of best of all the shepherds shown.

Giralda's Lola, a beautiful black and bright tan bitch, was bred at Madison. She is by Champion Giralda's Iso von Doernerhof out of Lola von der Secretainerie and was whelped on March 17, 1928, so that she is not yet two years old. She is a bitch of the highest quality—a beautifully-headed dog, showing strength of shoulder, grand back and a splendid expression.

The victory of Giralda's Lola emphasized once more the tremendous progress that is being made by American breeders. Here was a home-bred bitch that swept through all opposition—competition of the keenest nature, her opponents in the final judgment including German Siegers and Siegerins of recent years and many of the greatest dogs and bitches in America. It was one more proof—if that were necessary—that just as good dogs can be bred in the United States as in any country in the world.

One further point is developed by this award. It has been said that while we can develop near perfection in the points most desirable in a shepherd dog, our results show lack of character and temperament in a large number of cases. Here was temperament brought to the highest point, for Lola's ring manners brought the most enthusiastic comment from the ringsiders. She was shown without a lead, answering instantly the slightest command and her actions were a delight to follow.

It was an entry that any judge of the breed might feel complimented to pass upon. Needless to say, shepherd dog fanciers from all over the United States and Ganada crowded about the ringside at both of the sessions during which Lady Kitty was in action with her dogs. On the whole it may be said that her decisions were received with approbation from the ringside. Her manner with dogs and exhibitors was especially pleasing.

In the ring Lady Kitty was most workmanlike. She was painstaking and thorough. Her ends, it seemed to the spectators, were soundness and substance—rugged substance—with emphasis upon trueness of gait from front and rear rather than on length of stride and ground covering. It was particularly pleasing to note that she lost no time in culling out those which would have no chance for the money and devoting all of her attention to the careful placement of those of quality.

Beginning with the puppy dogs she found that quality was not extraordinary, although the four in the ribbons were considerably above the average. The winning puppy was Hettel v. Barorch owned by H. K. L. Castle of Winchendon Springs, Mass.

Big Class in Novice Dogs.

Novice dogs brought out a big class, the blue going to Harras v. Maraldene, owned by Maraldene Kennels of A. C. Gilbert of Hamden, Conn. This is a very long, well angulated, black and tan son of the Sieger Klodo v. Boxberg out of Asta v. Bodman and was bred by his owner. In the ring he appeared a trifle listless and undermuscled. Second went to the Jessford Kennels' puppy Lars of Jessford, son of the other great Sieger and American champion, Arko v. Sadowaberg of Jessford, and which had previously scored third in the puppy class.

American-breds brought out a large class of good dogs. Chubby of Willow Gate, owned by the Willow Gate Kennels of Princeton, N. J., going to the top, and subsequently being placed reserve winners, dogs. He is a solid black and in the ring showed splendid liberty of motion and back transmission and might possibly have been placed over the winning dog, Siegfried v. Schulberg, owned by Edward Zuerker of Armonk, N. Y.

Siegfried is a noble black and tan of much substance, which has suffered somewhat in his career on this side because of his back and movement, which was somewhat improved in this, his most recent appearance. Siegfried went through the limit class to winners' dogs, the competition in the former being apparently very close, and it held the attention of the spectators until the ribbons were awarded.

The open class contained a number of well-known imported and homebred dogs including Alf v. d. Webbelmannslust, Reserve Sieger in Germany in 1929, which was placed second to the new addition to the Cosalta Kennels of Greenwich, Conn., from the coast, Darius v. Scheelefeld. Alf seemed somewhat soft in condition. Darius is a grandson of the late Sieger, Geri v. Oberklamm. He is a rich black and tan, extraordinarily smooth, and possesses fine angulation and back. The Dutch Sieger Bruno v. Valunaspark was also in the open class. He is a dog of much nobility, but seemed to find the hard floor not to his taste for movement and was unplaced.

Then came the competition for winners dogs, and Lady Kitty's ideals in shepherds were demonstrated by her selections, the winner conforming to what she had evidently been seeking, this one having gone very high in the youth class in the Sieger show in Germany in 1928.

Fine Collection of Puppies.

There was a remarkably fine collection of puppy bitches. The winner was a lovely black and tan youngster, a homebred by Kim of Shereston out of Sprite of Shereston, bred and owned by Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Sherer of West Orange, N. J. Second and third were two daughters of Arko von Sadowaberg of Jessford, Heraclean Chole of Glenmar and Krafta of Jessford. Best of the novice bitches was Flora of Glenmar, owned by Mrs. C. F. Tears of Mountain Lakes, N. J.

Asta of Linwood, owned by the Heraclean Kennels of Syracuse, N. Y., a very smooth bitch with beautiful motion, was the best of the American-bred bitches. She is a Cito v. Mundtsdorf daughter and defeated the Cosalta Kennels' Cosalta's Rhoda.

A new one came out in the limit class, the winner being Alruth v. Weiland, owned by R. L. Gray of Kansas City. She is a bitch of extremely fine angulation and outstanding gait. Second was Victor Moench's Alline v. d. Johannisau.

Giralda's Lola easily went to the top in open bitches, second to her being the Openaka Kennels' Love Fortunate Fields, third going to R. L. Gray's Asta v. Sonnenbild. Lola then went on the take winners, bitches.

It was a brilliant field that came out to be judged for best in show, after Lola had been awarded best of winners. It included eight champions of record, among which Ch. Inky of Willow Gate, Grand Victrix of 1927; Elly von Fuerstensteg o'Jessford, German Siegerin in 1927 and Reserve Siegerin the following year, and Champion Utz v. Haus Schutting, the German Sieger of 1929.

Lady Kitty, therefore, had before her the best of the German shepherd dogs in America in this final line-up. She gave them full consideration, but it seemed to the spectators that she was extremely taken with the winning bitch and that it did not require an unduly long comparison of the merits of the many famous dogs to settle in her mind that the American-bred dog was the best of all.

There was a splendid entry of ninety-three Great Danes and Dr. Irving R. Johnson of Buffalo had a lot of dogs of high quality all through the breed. The competition was keen throughout and the judge was extremely painstaking, it requiring his undivided attention up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon to complete his awards.

The Erin Dane Kennels of Ardmore, Pa., carried off a large share of the honors, although best in breed was taken by the winning bitch, Betty of Ridgerest, owned by D Herbert Hostetter of Pasadena, Cal., and a daughter of Etta v. d. Saalburg, which was best Great Dane in the show last year. She is a beautiful golden brindle and is considered by many Great Dane fanciers as a finer specimen of the breed than her dam.

Best of the dogs was Golo v. Hexengold, owned by Mrs. W. G. Clarke Jr. of Englewood, N. J. He is an upstanding brindle and won over a good field in the open class to go best. He was beaten by the winning bitch for best of winners and the latter went to the top against close competition.

The Columbia basketball team rose to its greatest heights last night by defeating Pennsylvania, 32-18, in the Columbia gymnasium, while an alumni day crowd of 3,500 was kept in a constant frenzy of joy. The Lions decisively defeated their greatest rivals and took the lead in the Eastern Intercollegiate league with three victories and no defeats while Penn, the defending champion and leading team up to last night, was displaced, now occupying second place with three victories and one defeat.

Columbia, aspiring to its first league title since 1926, flashed a great passing attack which centred around Bender, Gregory and Schoenfeld. After the first ten minutes of the opening period there was little doubt as to the eventual victor.

Penn was forced to take most of its shots from far out on the court as the stellar defense play of Tys and McGurk checked the Quakers' passing advances time after time.

At the opening Columbia took the ball away from Penn under the Lions' basket and then Bender slipped down the floor to score on a pass from Schoenfeld. Ullrich sent the Red and Blue into a 3-2 lead when he tallied a foul and a long field goal. On a pretty pass from Gregory, Schoenfeld tallied from the corner to put the Lions in a 4-3 lead, but McNiff tied the count with a free toss.

Penn Takes the Lead.

Ullrich flipped a long one through, giving the visitors the edge, 6-4. A foul shot and a field goal by Schoenfeld sent Columbia out in front, 7-6. The Lions jumped further ahead when Gregory scored two fouls and a field goal and Bender tallied from the floor, sending the count to 13-6. McNiff broke the Lions' drive with a field goal and Columbia led, 13-8. Gregory followed up Schoenfeld's shot and scored. Tys tallied from under the hoop and Bender scored a foul, making the score at half-time 18-8 in Columbia's favor.

It was several minutes in the second half before the Lions broke through the Penn defense. Then Bender scored from under the hoop on a pass from Schoenfeld. A minute later Schoenfeld tossed a foul shot through, and Bender also got a free toss, making the score 22-8.

Tanser lifted a long shot through as the score was 22-10. Bender scored from under the hoop, putting the tally at 24-10.

Hale Scores Long Goal.

Tanser scored a foul and Penn opened up a long-distance attack and Hale sent one through from half-way down the side court, the score being 24-13. [illegible]

The Notre Dame ticket office has received thousands of requests for pasteboards although applications for individual games will not be available until Aug. 1.

PRINCETON BEATS NAVY FIVE, 27-23

Tigers Annex Fourth Victory in Row, Leading Rivals During Most of the Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 12.—Princeton's basketball team annexed its fourth successive victory tonight by defeating the Navy quintet, 27 to 23. The Tigers led throughout, with the exception of the first few minutes. The score at half-time was 14 to 7 in favor of Princeton.

Following the opening tally, when Bessire made good a free throw, Keyes of the Navy retaliated with a field goal and a foul followed by another foul by Campbell. Nicholson scored for Princeton, succeeded by another goal by Keyes. Then Low replaced Nicholson and made a sharp cut in to tie the score at 5-all. From that time on the Nassau aggregation kept well in the lead.

FORDHAM FIVE BEATS MUHLENBERG, 38-25

Scores 11th Victory in 14 Starts, Crowd of 1,000 Seeing Game in Maroon Gym.

Fordham scored its eleventh victory in fourteen starts by defeating the Muhlenberg quintet, 38-25, in the Maroon gymnasium last night before 1,000 spectators.

George Mulligan, star Maroon guard, was leading scorer with six field goals and one foul for a total of thirteen points. The winners were ahead at half-time, 14-11.

The losers spurted in the second period against a substitute Fordham five, but the home team's regulars had piled up too big a lead and the visiting quintet was unable to overcome the advantage.

FOUR WORLD MARKS BROKEN BY SKATERS

JAFFEE BEATEN BY HURD

New York Star Finishes Second in Whitby Memorial Trophy Race in Which 32 Start.

Special to The New York Times.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Four new world records were set on the second day of the North American outdoor amateur speed skating championship races at the Pontiac Rink today before a crowd of several thousand.

Jack Shea, Lake Placid High School skater, who holds the North American championship, lowered the record for the one-sixth-mile race when he was timed in 24 seconds. Ross Robinson, Toronto, was second, and Ray Murray, New York, third. They were the only contestants in the finals, as Allan Potts of Brooklyn, Alex Hurd of Toronto and Melvin Johnson of Detroit did not start.

Art Pickering of New York set a record in the half-mile intermediate event, cutting it from 1:24 3-5, the time set by Don Mahoney of Malone last year, to 1:22 1-5.

Wilbur Marks of Chicago created a new one-mile record for juniors. His time was 3:11 4-5. The former record of 3:13 2-5 was set by Herbert Flack of Toronto.

Orlie Duffy of Toronto set the fourth new record in the 440-yard race for boys under 14 years old. His time was 30 1-5 seconds. The former record, 32 seconds, was set by Thomas Brogan of Saranac Lake last year.

Today's events concluded the races here, those for the last two days being scheduled for Lake Placid.

The five-mile Eddie Whitby Memorial Trophy was the feature event of the day, thirty-two starting. Herbert Taylor of New York led the first nineteen laps, taking the lap prize. Jaffee, Bialis and Shea then alternated in the lead but in the final lap Alex Hurd of Toronto shot into first place and crossed the tape the winner. Jaffee came next and Ross Robinson was third.

HOLY CROSS BEATS HARVARD BY 45-25

Crimson Takes Early Lead, but Rivals Spurt and Are in Front at Half.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12.—Holy Cross defeated the Harvard basketball team in Hemenway Gymnasium tonight, 45 to 25.

Harvard led, 10-8, after five minutes, but Luke Driscoll, tall Holy Cross centre, began following up his team-mates' long shots and sinking them for baskets. At half time the Worcester team held a 23-15 lead.

Strothers Lead Attack With Six Field Goals—Cadets Ahead at Half, 23-11.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Army defeated Amherst at basketball today, 42 to 25, in a game where sluggish play marred the work of both teams.

The collegians, who were on the little end of a 23-11 count at half time, shot poorly and displayed a wretched passing game throughout. Army, never extended, lacked dash but always had a safe margin.

ST. JOHN'S QUINTET BEATS LEHIGH, 34-25

Brooklyn Team's Defense Marks Game in Which Losers Score Only Five Field Goals.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 12.—Lehigh University's basketball team bowed today to St. John's College of Brooklyn by 34 to 25.

So effective was the St. John's defense that in the first half Schaub's baskets were the only two pointers registered for Lehigh, while in the second half many succeeded with field goals, giving Lehigh a total of five twin pointers for the entire game.

Kinsbrunner and Schuckman were the top scorers for St. John's, each with four goals. The latter also annexed a foul shot. At half time the visitors were leading, 21 to 10, and held this lead until late in the half when Lehigh drew closer.

MARTIN REGISTERS 2D VICTORY IN U. S.

PETKIEWICZ ALSO SCORES

Poland's Star Triumphs Over Mile Route Before 6,000 at Osceola Democratic Club Meet.

Dr. Paul Martin, Swiss middle distance Olympic star, scored his second American victory when he captured the special 800-yard invitation race in the Osceola Democratic Club's twelfth annual athletic meet at the Seventh Regiment Armory last night. Sharing honors with Switzerland's premier runner was Stanislaw Petkiewicz, one of Poland's foremost distance runners, who romped home an easy winner in the invitation mile run.

A crowd of more than 6,000 persons was on hand to watch the foreign stars perform, and the spectators were rewarded with a pair of capable achievements.

Petkiewicz's victory was the more decisive, the Polish star winning much as he pleased in 4:28 4-5, after completing the distance without once being headed. Martin ran the 800 in 1:46 4-5. The Swiss runner had a margin of ten yards over Tom Brennan of the New York Athletic Club, who finished second.

Brennan enjoyed a lead over his famous rival for half a lap, but could not fight off Martin's final spurt. Petkiewicz lost no time taking the lead in the mile fixture, and went ahead of the field with the crack of the starting gun.

Frank Bayley of the New York A. C. made an effort to challenge the foreigner's margin at the start, but was quickly fought off. Petkiewicz ran a sturdy race, and set an even pace until the final lap, when he went out to finish fifteen yards ahead of Loring McMillan, another N. Y. A. C. runner. Fred Lorz, Mohawk A. C., was third and Bayley fourth.

G. B. Spitz of the Fushing High School turned in a fine performance to win the running high jump handicap. Competing from scratch, the Flushing youth cleared the bar at 6 feet 3 inches.

The 1,200-yard high and prep school relay was won by the James Madison High School's second team, which earned a narrow margin over George Washington High School. The winning team's time was 2:23 3-5.

THE SUMMARIES.

880-Yard Handicap Run (First Division)—Won by W. Schuke, New York Stock Exchange (28 yards); J. Lyons, St. James's H. S. (30 yards), second; H. Leber, Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. (35 yards), third. Time—2:04 1-5.

Lehigh Cards Football Drills for 3 Weeks, Starting March 7

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 12.—Three weeks of Spring practice is definitely assured for the football men at Lehigh University, Coach A. Austin Tate announced today, when he assembled his charges for their first meeting in Drown Hall.

Seventy-five aspiring athletes responded to the call and were briefly addressed by the coach. Spring football practice will start on March 7.

YALE HOCKEY TEAM WINS 14TH IN ROW

Defeats St. Nicholas Club by 7 to 1, Reserves Carrying Brunt of Work.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 12.—The Yale hockey team scored its fourteenth consecutive victory of the season tonight by defeating the St. Nicholas club of New York City, 7 to 1.

Fresh from its hard-fought game with Marquette last night, the Elis depended on substitutes for the brunt of the play tonight, using the first line forwards less than twenty minutes, and the first string goalie not at all. Sixteen Yale players saw action.

Yale led at the end of the first period, 2 to 0, on goals by McLennan and Stoddard. Nelson found the net sixteen seconds after the second period opened and Luce and Palmer each scored in the four minutes of the period they played. Farrington chalked up the visitors' lone tally as the chapter ended. The third period was a leisurely affair, with Palmer and Todd completing Yale's scoring.

The line-up:

| Yale (7). | | St. Nicholas (1). |
|---|---|---|
| Sizer | G. | Morrill |
| Wilson | L. D. | Ryan |
| Hickok | R. D. | Hallock |
| Bent | L. W. | Bishop |
| Nelson | C. | Baldwin |
| McLennan | R. W. | Rogers |

Spares—Yale: Palmer, Luce, Bostwick, Stoddard, Mills, Todd, Iglehart, Muhlfeld, Winter, Curtiss; St. Nicholas: Jones, Ferguson, Carey, Rice, Farrington.

Goals—First period: Yale, McLennan (Nelson), 1:01; Yale, Stoddard (Muhlfeld), 8:27. Second period: Yale, Nelson (unassisted), 0:16; Yale, Luce (unassisted), 9:18; Yale, Palmer (unassisted), 10:57; St. Nicholas, Farrington (unassisted), 18:52. Third period: Yale, Palmer (unassisted), 8:02; Yale, Todd (unassisted), 17:37.

Penalties—Yale: Nelson, Bent, Wilson; St. Nicholas: Rogers, Jones, Farrington.

PRINCETON'S SEXTET TRIUMPHS BY 3 TO 1

McAlpin Gets Two Goals to Defeat Boston University by Rally in Third Period.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 12.—Princeton and Boston University sextets battled on even terms for more than two periods of their clash today, but in the final fifteen minutes the Tigers rallied to score two goals and their fourth straight victory, 3 to 1.

Bill Barber, Princeton wing, returned to the Tiger line-up and was instrumental in sending the visitors down to defeat. He recorded the first goal for Princeton late in the second period. Mal McAlpin scored the Tigers' other two goals, while Lombard made Boston's lone tally.

The line-up:

MISS WALSH CLIPS WORLD'S 220 MARK

BOWMAN WINS FROM ELDER

Conger Scores Again at Mile—Gibson Wins Meadowbrook 660, Veit Disqualified.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—The greatest woman runner to crash her way into the track limelight in recent years, Miss Stella Walsh of Cleveland, shattered the world's 220-yard indoor record for women beyond all recognition tonight at the Arena in the fifteenth annual Meadowbrook Club games while a crowd of nearly 5,000 gave her the tremendous ovation that her achievement demanded.

The flying feet of the new feminine phenomenon clipped two full seconds off the former standard of 0:28 4-5 to win by twenty yards over Miss Dallas Creamer, Canadian champion, in one of the most startling performances that a woman athlete ever has fashioned.

In this day when records that are broken by fractions of seconds are heralded as extraordinary, the amazing Cleveland girl took two full seconds off the mark that Miss Ellen Brough made in 1925 and equaled by Miss Catherine Donovan in 1928.

As recently as last Saturday Miss Walsh set a new universal standard of 6 seconds flat for 50 yards to erase the old mark of 0:06 2-10 made by the great Olympic star, Mrs. Helen Filkey Warren. Tonight she sped over the little-run distance of 45 yards, for which no record is listed, in 0:05 4-5 to have the distinction of establishing a new record. The worth of this is testified by the fact that the women's 40-yard mark is 0:05 1-5, so that Miss Walsh was as close to record time as is necessary.

Makes Up Lost Ground.

What she would have done if she had had the benefit of a good start can be left to conjecture. However, she was left absolutely flat-footed at the crack of the gun and had a five-yard deficit to make up before she took a step. So magnificent a sprint did Miss Walsh unleash when she did get going that she caught Miss Myrtle Cook of Canada, a member of the Maple Leaf Olympic team, at the half-way mark and then flew on to win by three yards.

Even in the 220, Miss Walsh lost a few valuable fractions of a second by calmly looking around to ascertain the whereabouts of her nearest rivals before she thundered down the straightaway. She even seemed to pause in her headlong flight for a moment before a frantically waving official at the sidelines urged her on to greater speed. Her time of 0:26 4-5 is so great that it equals the women's outdoor record of Miss Brough.

So unsurpassable were Miss Walsh's feats of accomplishment that she shunted into the background the brilliant effort of Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C., who conquered Jack Elder of Notre Dame in the men's 45-yard invitation in the near world's record time of 0:05. In this same meet a year ago Percy Williams, Canada's double Olympic champion, set a new standard of 0:49 9-10, and Bowman equaled the old record in gaining a hair-breadth decision over the Notre Dame flash.

Venzke Is Second.

In another of the features Ray Conger of the Illinois A. C., America's unbeatable miler, increased his string of triumphs by unreeling the fastest mile of the season, 4:20, to defeat by two strides the surprising Gene Venzke of the Swedish American A. C. for the Johnny Overton Memorial trophy. Joe Hickey of N. Y. U., the intercollegiate mile champion, ran one of his best races of the campaign to overtake Gus Moore of the Brooklyn Harriers for third place.

The Meadowbrook 660 that Fred Veit won a year ago went to Johnny Gibson of Bloomfield Catholic Lyceum, former Fordham star and present world's record holder for the 440-yard low hurdles. But it didn't go to Gibson because Veit finished second. The former N. Y. U. star, who gave Bernie McCafferty of Holy Cross his only defeat of the 1929 campaign in this same race a year ago, snapped the tape in first position, but he was disqualified for roughing.

Veit and Gibson battled from the gun. Freddy's prominent elbows threw Gibson off stride at the start, and then he knocked Gibson off balance at the bell lap. So incensed did Gibson get at this last rebuff that he deliberately shoved Veit. As soon as Veit crossed the finish line he immediately went to the meet chairman and refused to take first prize. This gesture was promptly made official, and Gibson received the award.

The University of Pennsylvania captured the one-mile intercollegiate relay for the Rodman Wanamaker trophy. A remarkably speedy first leg by Bill Castler, Penn track captain, gave Coach Lawson Robertson's charges the victory for the trophy, which was won last year by Fordham.

So wide a gap did Kastler open up and so steadily did Frank McLoughlin add to the lead on the second leg that the valiant efforts of Arthur Briggs and Vic Burke of Georgetown in the latter stages of the test could make little inroads on the Penn advantage. The result was that Jack Steele, Penn anchor, fairly coasted in by a five-yard margin.

Both Fordham and New York University were off to poor starts. Georgetown, which was to come up with surprising celerity toward the close, was last at the getaway but Lou Ricca, former New York school boy, had climbed up to second place at the baton exchange and the order was not altered up to the finish, which saw Penn, first; Georgetown, second; Fordham, third, and New York University, fourth. Penn won in the excellent arena time of 3:28 3-5.

Larchmont Y. C. Six Wins, 15-1.

Lincoln Handicap at Miami Captured by Blessefield as Five Favorites Score

BLESSEFIELD TAKES LINCOLN HANDICAP

Beats Griffin by Length and Half in Feature Event at Miami Race Track.

ST. PRISCA ALSO SCORES

Gets Up in Final Stride to Triumph Over Queen Towton by Head—Five Favorites Win.

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12.—For the second day in succession five favorites won at Hialeah Park. In the Lincoln Handicap, the day's feature, the Royal Stable's Blessefield was made the odds-on choice in a field of four and he scored easily, chalking up his second consecutive victory and his third at this meeting. The other favorites to win were Silver Beauty, Distinguish, Sign Off and St. Prisca, although Distinguish went to the post the joint public choice with another horse after opening the favorite.

For Blessefield the mile and a sixteenth of the feature was a procession, as he was in front a stride or two after the break and he never relinquished the lead. Griffin was the one to finish second, and a length and a half divided his nose from the winner's heels. Six lengths to the rear came Nearby, and Ormonbird trailed. Ormonbird had up the top weight of 118 pounds, one more than Blessefield, and although well backed he never got going.

Willie Garner made a safe ride out of his work with Blessefield, for he roused him with the whip in the stretch, even though the Royal color-bearer was going smoothly well ahead of his company. Blessefield was timed in 1:45 1-5 and passed the mile mark in 1:38 3-5.

Best of the other races was the fifth, in which George D. Widener's St. Prisca came home a winner by a head. The favorite, St. Prisca, just managed to get up in the last stride, coming from a rear-guard position to catch Queen Towton on the post. Pennant Lass, hot second choice, was third and four others completed the field. Sidney Hebert was riding St. Prisca, which was a change in jockey arrangements, as Eaby has been riding the horse of late.

Hebert got his horse shut off shortly after the start and the close quarters forced the favorite back to last position. But the lad did not lose his head. He went to the outside and drew up gradually. In the stretch he evidently felt he had the race won, for he did not force the filly to do her best, even though she had to go into a drive to win. The time was 1:12 for the six furlongs.

Hussey to Race in Crescent Meet; Will Oppose Elder and Pappas

The special sprint series arranged for the Crescent A. C. meet at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory Saturday night will be a three-cornered affair. Jack Elder and Jimmy Pappas, the original starters, will be joined by Frank Hussey, it was announced yesterday. The trio will compete in two events, sprinting 50 yards and 60 meters, using starting blocks.

DISTURB TRIUMPHS AT NEW ORLEANS

Closes With Burst of Speed to Annex Feature by Nose—Returns $6 for $2.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 12 (AP).—Disturb, from the Southland Stable, won the De Soto Hotel purse, the feature on today's card at the Fair Grounds. The Rancocas Stable's Leucite was second and J. M. Cooper's Macbeth was third. Old Dutch was the only other starter. He ran second, but was disqualified for cutting off Leucite at the three-furlong pole. The winner paid $6 for a $2 mutuel.

Disturb, outrun early, came with a burst of speed in the last quarter and managed to win by a nose through the capable handling of Jockey Kenneth Russell. Leucite was away to a good start and was going well when cut off by Old Dutch in the stretch. He made a game effort, but was unable to catch the leaders. Old Dutch displayed the most early speed.

SCHOONOVER BEATS HOYT AT PINEHURST

STATZELL ALSO ADVANCES

Defeats Jamison in First Round by 1 Up—Hollingsworth and Williamson Triumph.

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 12.—The elimination of the medalist, Frank H. Hoyt of the Engineers Club, was the surprise of the first round of match play in the tenth annual seniors' championship today. Hoyt, a former national seniors' champion, was upset by C. L. Schoonover of Warren, Pa., by 3 and 1. Hoyt was 1 down to Schoonover at the turn, the Pennsylvanian going out in 41 to Hoyt's 42. Trapped twice coming back, Hoyt could not withstand the pace set by Schoonover, who shot the last six holes in one over par.

A battle that went to the nineteenth gave G. W. Statzell of Philadelphia a victory over J. M. Jamison of Greenburg, Pa., by 1 up. C. B. Hollingsworth of Greensburg took his match against C. M. Rudel of Montreal by 3 and 1. The closest match of the day was the 20-hole affair between J. P. Williamson of Wilkes-Barre and John L. Given Jr. of New York, which ended in favor of Williamson.

Schoonover took the lead against Hoyt on the second when the medalist overpitched, and went 2 up on the fifth with his par 3. Schoonover was trapped on the ninth, losing the hole. Coming back Hoyt was trapped on the eleventh and seventeenth.

DARTMOUTH SIX WINS FROM AMHERST, 11-1

Green's Second and Third Teams Are Used Freely—Johnson and Andres Star.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 12.—Dartmouth crushed its oldest college rival, Amherst, today by an 11-1 score, the hockey game furnishing good preparation for the Green's contest with Harvard this Saturday.

Coach Bower used his second and third teams freely, keeping Morton out of the game entirely and using Jeremiah, his ace, sparingly. Johnson and Andres, football pair, were starred in the Dartmouth attack, scoring seven goals between them.

| Dartmouth (11). | | Amherst (1). |
|---|---|---|
| Hawkes | Goal | Hanson |
| H. Booma | Defense | Perry |
| Johnson | Defense | Knutson |
| Jeremiah | Centre | Nichols |
| Guilfoy | Wing | Turner |
| Andres | Wing | Williams |

Goals—First period: Johnson, Dartmouth, 7:15; Johnson, Dartmouth, 8:05. 5:18; Andres, Dartmouth, 7:48; Johnson, Dartmouth, 2:10; Second period: Andres, Dartmouth, 16:18; Knutson, Amherst, 18:53. Third period: Booma, Dartmouth, 10:00; Andres, Dartmouth, 2:18; Johnson, Dartmouth, 14:28; Fisher, Dartmouth, Allyn, Dartmouth, 18:05. 17:00; Fisher, Dartmouth.

BOXER INJURED IN FALL.

Maloney Credited With Knockout After Mishap to Friedman.

BOSTON, Feb. 12 (AP).—Jimmy Maloney was credited with a four-round knockout over Al Friedman, his Boston heavyweight rival, tonight when the latter plunged through the ropes and struck his head a blow on the edge of the ring. The accident rendered Friedman unconscious for several minutes.

The battle was a furious slugfest until the abrupt ending, with Maloney holding a slight edge.

PRINCETON CONQUERS COLUMBIA WRESTLERS

Wins, 18-12, When Barfield Throws Britton in Final Bout at Loser's Gymnasium.

Barfield's throwing of Britton in the unlimited class gave the Tigers a victory, for at the opening of the final bout the visitors held a 13—12 lead and a Columbia victory in the bout would have meant victory in the meet.

In the 125-pound class Ihrig of Princeton threw Amster of Columbia in 8:55 with a half nelson and crotch hold. Amster suffered a dislocated shoulder late in the bout, unknown to his team-mates and opponents, and he continued with the bout.

THE SUMMARIES.

125-Pound Class—Ihrig, Princeton, threw Hamster, Columbia, with half Nelson and crotch hold. Time 8:55.

175-Pound Class—Baker, Columbia, defeated Strawbridge, Princeton. Time advantage—3:20.

GOLF UPSETS MARK ST. AUGUSTINE PLAY

WEBER TRIUMPHS, 6 AND 5

Medalist Gains Easy Victory Over Culver—Barnes and McCarthy Also Advance.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 12.—Dr. Fred Lund, a member of the Cherry Valley Club at Garden City, L. I., figured in one of the two surprise victories in the first round of match play in the fourteenth annual St. Valentine's tournament on the St. Augustine links today.

The metropolitan entry defeated one of the favorites, E. T. McGovern of Great Barrington, Mass., by 1 up in eighteen holes and tomorrow will oppose last year's tourney victor, Joe Capo of this city.

Another unexpected outcome was the triumph of Cyril C. Spades of Chicago over George Morse of Rutland, Vt., by 2 and 1.

Harold Weber, medalist, had the easiest match of the championship flight, overcoming the New Yorker, Van Culver, by 6 and 5. Other golfers who are still in the running for the William R. Kenan Jr. Cup are Ira W. Barnes of the Pine Valley Golf Club at Clementon, N. J., and Ray McCarthy of the Wykagyl Country Club at New Rochelle.

THE SUMMARIES.

Harold Weber, Toledo, Ohio, defeated Van Culver, New York City, 6 and 5; Ray McCarthy, New York City, defeated Edwin Vare, Clementon, N. J., 2 up; Cyril C. Spades, Chicago, defeated George Morse, Rutland, Vt., 2 and 1; Joe Capo, St. Augustine, won by default from A. E. Delschlager, Sound Beach, Conn.; Dr. Fred Lund, Garden City, L. I., defeated E. T. Lee, Columbus, Ohio, defeated C. D. Baldwin, South Orange, N. J., 2 up; Clive Alvord, Greenwich, Conn., defeated S. L. McKay, Sarnia, Ont., 2 up; Jack Yale, Rye, N. Y., won by default from L. P. Moore, Summit, N. J.; W. J. Worcester, Montclair, N. J., won by default from H. A. Hoffman, Providence, R. I.

World's Champions Applauded by 9,000 at Carnival—New Yorkers Present Ice Spectacle.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—More than 9,000 ardent figure skating fans packed the Arena tonight to witness the stars of the world perform. The carnival was given for the benefit of the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital.

The European contingent, which won the world titles in the New York meet, were applauded for their magnificent work. Miss Sonja Henie, Karl Schafer and Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Brunet, the 1930 world champions, headed the foreign group. Miss Meleta Brunnel and Ludwig Wrede of Austria also participated.

"Veiling the Sun," a colorful spectacle which turned into a scarf dance, was presented by a cast of young women from New York, headed by Miss Beatrix Loughran. A Roman gypsy quadrille with a cast selected from a group of New York, Boston and Cambridge young women was another feature. Miss Maribel Vinson and Roger F. Turner, United States women's and men's titleholders, respectively, also aided in the carnival.

BRUINS BEAT PIRATES, 4-3.

Champions Continue Winning Form, but Are Extended in Final.

FORT ERIE, Ont., Feb. 12 (AP).—The Boston Bruins continued their winning form in National League hockey tonight when they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 3, in a free-scoring game in which the champions were put to the test in the final period when George Owen was sent down on a major penalty.

Gutierrez Suspension Lifted.

HAVANA, Feb. 12 (AP).—The suspension of Pinchio Gutierrez, Havana fight promoter and manager of Kid Chocolate, by the Cuban National Boxing Commission was automatically lifted tonight, and the commission issued Gutierrez a new license as manager and second.

Miss Collett to Defend Title In North and South Tourney

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 12.—Miss Glenna Collett, women's national golf champion, announced today that she would defend her title as North and South champion on the twenty-eighth renewal of the event, which starts March 31. Miss Collett has consistently played in the event, but there has been some doubt as to her entry this year. Miss Collett today scored an 81 on the No. 2 or championship course.

MISS ORCUTT WINS IN QUARTER-FINALS

Triumphs Over Mrs. Zech by 7 and 5 in Women's Miami Championship Golf.

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12.—Without the loss of a single hole, Miss Maureen Orcutt, metropolitan and Eastern titleholder, won her quarter-final match today in the annual women's Miami championship event. The White Beeches Club representative triumphed by 7 and 5 over Mrs. Lillian Zech of Chicago.

All of the other matches in the first flight were also decided by large margins. Miss Marian Bennett of New Britain, Conn., defeated Mrs. R. H. Gardner of Pittsburgh, 8 and 7, while Miss Lillian Holland of Ossining, N. Y., turned back Mrs. Eddie Williams of Cleveland by 6 and 5.

Mrs. Henry March of Glen Cove, L. I., scored over Mrs. F. D. Malcolm of Maywood, Ill., 5 and 3.

TRYON DEFEATS LEE IN CORAL GABLES GOLF

Wins, 1 Up, by Sinking 6-Foot Putt in First Round of Invitation Play.

Special to The New York Times.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 12.—Matching stroke for stroke with his more experienced rival, Howard Tryon of Elmira, N. Y., newly crowned national champion of golf club champions, defeated the veteran Lee Chase of Buffalo in the first round of the invitation tournament over the Miami-Biltmore Country Club links today.

The up-State player was carried to the last green to win by 1 up, sinking a 6-foot putt for the victory. A long putt on the seventeenth enabled him to square the match, after he had lost the two previous holes.

THE SUMMARIES.

EVENT MAY BE A FIXTURE

Miss Wethered Definitely Announces Retirement and Miss Leitch Also May Withdraw.

LONDON, Feb. 12 (AP).—The prospect of a woman's international golf match between the stars of Great Britain and the United States will be considered by the Ladies' Golf Club in the near future, it was announced today.

Miss Glenna Collett, outstanding woman player of the United States, wrote to Miss Joyce Wethered, holder of the British championship, several weeks ago, suggesting the match between teams of the two countries. Today, however, Miss Wethered definitely announced that she would not defend her title at Formby in May and, furthermore, had finished with championship play altogether.

The result is that the situation has been placed in the hands of Miss Molly Gourlay, who has undertaken to arrange a team to meet the American players. Miss Gourlay said today she hoped the match would be played on a course in the London area soon after the woman's championship and expressed the hope that in the future an international match between Great Britain and the United States will receive official recognition.

Miss Wethered last May regained at St. Andrew's the title which she had let go by default four years previously. It was understood that she had returned to the championship field then as a result of urgings from the British golfing world that she protect the title against the formidable threat presented by the American star, Miss Collett.

The retirement of this five-time holder of the British championship comes at the comparatively early age of 28, but it is known that for some time she felt she was faced with too difficult a task in keeping up the standard of play expected of her by the golfing public.

In addition to Miss Wethered's retirement it also was stated in authoritative golfing circles today that Miss Cecil Leitch, long one of England's leading woman golfers, will not again be seen in premier championship play.

HOVEY ORDERS YACHT FOR EUROPEAN RACES

30-Square-Meter Boat Will Be Sailed by Miss Hovey in Sweden and Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—A new thirty-square-meter boat to represent America in Europe next Summer is to be built here this Spring, it was learned today. Chandler Hovey, well-known Boston yachtsman, whose daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hovey, is one of the team of three Americans which will race in Sweden and Germany next Summer, has given an order to L. Francis Herreshoff to design a new craft. It will replace the Oriole, which Miss Hovey sailed last year and will be built in a yard yet to be determined.

The prospects of a new boat in addition to the Yankee and the Rima on the American team strengthens this country's chances materially. Last year was the first in which the United States ever built or raced boats of the thirty-square-meter class and in the international races last August at Marblehead the home team did not fare any too well. The knowledge gained during the series and other racing of the Summer, however, should be of great value the coming season.

SCHMELING ACCEPTS OFFER

Agrees to Meet Winner of Sharkey-Scott Bout.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—Max Schmeling, after conferring with his manager, Joe Jacobs, who arrived here tonight, decided to accept the offer to fight the winner of the Sharkey-Scott bout scheduled for Feb. 27.

Max, as well as Jacobs, is convinced Sharkey will defeat Scott. No decision has been reached as yet as to whether Schmeling—who says he needs another bout before he meets Sharkey—will fight in Berlin.

Cutler Wins Twice at 18.2.

Albert G. Cutler triumphed in two 18.2 balkline matches at Dwyer's New Recreation Academy in Brooklyn yesterday. In the afternoon he defeated John Herts, 100 to 19, in 7 innings. Cutler's high run was 70 and Hert's 5. At night he vanquished F. K. Thielen, 100 to 15 in 10 innings. Cutler's best cluster was 55 and Thielen's 7.

Pell Defeats Lord Aberdare in Gold Racquet Final—Hunter Beats Brunie

GOLD RACQUET WON BY PELL 12TH TIME

VICTOR IN BRILLIANT FORM

Displays Amazing Control, Accuracy and Speed in Capturing Final From British Star.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Feb. 12.—For the twelfth time in the twenty-four years that the tournament has been held since 1904, Clarence C. Pell, winner on nine occasions of the national racquets championship, captured the Tuxedo Gold Racquet today.

With the seating and standing room of the court taxed to capacity, the most brilliant of all the tournaments held for this trophy came to an end at the Tuxedo Club with a straightforward victory for Pell over Lord Aberdare, one of the two foremost players of England. The scores were 15—10, 15—6, 15—12, and there was never a time, with the exception of a short period in the final game, that Pell was not out in front and in complete command of the situation.

When the gallery filed out of the balcony after the match was over any number of players, both amateurs and professionals, were heard to remark that it was the finest performance Pell has put forth in the history of his long and distinguished career.

Praised by Britishers.

Lord Aberdare, who defeated Pell on this same court in the Gold Racquet tournament of 1928, commented that he might have played better racquets himself, but that Pell never gave him a chance to do so, while his compatriot, Dr. H. W. Leatham, stated that it was the finest racquets he had seen and that he did not know of any one in England who could have beaten Pell as he played today. In this opinion he was in agreement with Eddie Rodgers, who marked the match, and Arthur Forester, the racquet and tennis master at the club.

This was the fourth meeting between Pell and Lord Aberdare and it evened the score between them. The British visitor scored a victory at the Queen's Club in England and his other here in 1928, while Pell's first triumph was gained in the 1928 national championship. Every one of the four matches has been decided in three games.

Pell was the favorite to win today, in spite of the fact that Lord Aberdare defeated Stanley Mortimer, the only other player besides Pell to win the Gold Racquet since 1914, in the first round. But few were willing to concede that the match would be decided in the minimum of games. That was because probably no one was quite prepared for so magnificent an exhibition as Pell put on.

Pell's Service at Its Best.

The American, who lost his national title last year to Huntington Sheldon by the margin of a point in the fifth game, had his unexcelled service working at its best, and his strokes were so withering in their speed and placed with such amazing accuracy within an inch of the telltale that his opponent for the most part had no chance to get his racquet on the ball.

Not only was Pell's control uncanny, but he covered up his strokes so well and had so much spin on the ball that it was almost impossible to anticipate its course, and Lord Aberdare frequently found himself starting off the wrong foot as the cut on the ball deflected its direction. The American was in the saddle from the start and his opponent never was able to take the offensive away from him.

The match was closer than might be gathered from the figures, for the service changed hands constantly, and Lord Aberdare was playing so much better in the third game that if he had won it, and he led at 12—11, it is possible that the outcome might have been a different story.

Formidable on Backhand.

The English player had a service that was almost as good as his opponent's, particularly his backhand serve from the left box, and his backhand stroke, when he had a chance to get set for it, was fairly paralyzing in its speed.

On Friday at the Racquet and Tennis Club in New York the members of the British team will play the pick of the American players in an international match. Pell and either Mortimer or Sheldon probably will play the singles for the United States, while Lord Aberdare will select his second singles player from Duncan Cambridge, Dr. Leatham and Peter Kemp-Welch.

HARVARD CLUB WINS IN CLASS A SQUASH

Princeton Club Also Triumphs in Met. League Tourney—Columbia Match Put Off.

The Harvard Club and Princeton Club Class A squash tennis teams were victorious in Metropolitan League matches played yesterday. The Harvard Club defeated the Yale Club team, 4 to 2, on the Harvard courts and the Princeton Club representatives blanked the Park Avenue Squash Club team, 7 to 0, on the Princeton courts.

The match scheduled to be played at the New York A. C. between the undefeated, league-leading Columbia University Club and the New York A. C. teams was postponed until today.

THE SUMMARIES.

Sports of the Times

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By JOHN KIERAN.

CARNERA knocked out some highly unimportant fellow in St. Louis. That makes the fourth down and plenty to go. The promoters will now set one up in another alley.

Some of the brave boys in the ringside seats used to insist that Knute Hansen, the now permanently melancholy Dane, was inclined to quit under fire, but Knute went down with his colors flying in his last bout. He climbed up from the floor five times to wade back in for more, which isn't what a timid soul would have done under the same discouraging circumstances. He was more than game. He was stubborn.

When Jimmy Slattery first flashed over the pugilistic horizon, the delighted critics pronounced him the future heavyweight champion of the world. Jimmy never could have been that. He couldn't make the weight. But it's odd to find him reaching the championship heights at a time when he isn't what he was and far from what he might have been.

Slattery and Ace Hudkins are the extremes in the fight game. The Buffalo boy is as pretty a boxer as modern fans ever saw, and Ace is so crude that Commissioner Muldoon insists he is no boxer at all. Ace doesn't begin to fight until he has his head poked into the other fellow's chest. Then, he starts operating on the style of a threshing machine.

With two maulers like Hudkins in the same ring, the spectators in the rear seats would see nothing except two fellows leaning on each other. But with Maxey Rosenbloom it won't be that way. Ace will have some difficulty finding a resting place for his head so that he can start firing. Maxey never keeps his chest long in the same place. He's a blooming bounder and the American equivalent of Fuzzy-Wuzzy, Mr. Kipling's famous india rubber idiot on a spree.

There recently appeared a picture of Rosenbloom going through some training stunt. There's some mystery in that; perhaps a case of mistaken identity. Maxey is like the late Harry Greb. He does all his training in the ring. He figures that anything else is a waste of energy.

Pot-Pourri.

Holy Cross has another fine quarter-miler in Bernie McCafferty. The Purple mile relay is also up to Worcester standards, which are high in the collegiate world. Boston College seems to specialize in two-mile relays.

Yale runs to pole vaulters. Dartmouth has turned out some great hurdlers. Stanford is always strong in the field events. Cornell monopolized the cross-country prizes over a long period.

The Detroit Tigers always had a heavy-hitting outfield. The Giants went in for famous infields. The Brooklyn Robins bob up year after year with fine pitchers and haven't had a first-class infield since the opening of the Gowanus Canal.

Those things get to be habits. City College always has a fine basketball team and, for that matter, so do all the colleges in Father Knickerbocker's bailiwick. But over a period of years, the Lavender could probably top them all. In recent years Columbia has slipped from its ancient heights, but Fordham has come up to maintain the metropolitan average on the floor.

Columbia is far out ahead in rowing and, indeed, has no neighborhood competition at all. However, the Lions turned out the greatest crew in the country last year, and, looking back over the records, it can't be classed as an accident.

The Catholic colleges are still strong in baseball, but that game has lost ground to football, even in its college strongholds. There was a time when baseball was the most profitable sport at Holy Cross. The popularity of the collegians drove the league team out of town. Now, it's football that brings in the big receipts.

Rambling Along.

The first college sport recognized by the University of Pennsylvania was cricket. That was some time ago. The Red and Blue athletes haven't played much cricket lately. They prefer football and basketball, at which they are fairly adept.

Two famous golf clubs in Philadelphia started as cricket clubs and still retain the ancient designation. They are the Philadelphia Cricket Club and the Merion Cricket Club.

Major Phil Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at West Point, is mushing into the North again to officiate as judge at the finish in some important dog derbies. Clad in a piebald parka and standing knee-deep in snow, he called off the winning team of huskies at Lake Placid without any trouble. He claims it takes steady nerves and a great eye to judge those finishes. The second dog team is sometimes within a quarter of a mile of the first team over the line.

Commander Jonas Ingram's latest fulminations against the Army attitude in the famous Army-Navy football debate were read to Major Fleming, Biff Jones and Captain Wells. Major Fleming said: "Hum." Biff Jones said nothing. Captain Wells was nonchalant. He reached for a cigarette.

Captain Wells wanted it understood that the Army is going to Chicago to play football next Autumn and not for machine-gun practice.

Rowing is a dead issue at West Point because Major Gen. William R. Smith would rather see one good third baseman on the Plain than eight great stroke oars on the river. The superintendent doesn't see much use in teaching seamanship to soldiers. But what about those army oarsmen who rowed Washington across the Delaware?

PASSAIC FIVE WINS 23D.

Routs Rutherford, 75-25, to Continue Victorious Streak.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO RIDERS IN TIE.

McNamara-Belloni Team in Four-Place Bike Deadlock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12 (AP).—Hard, fast riding failed to break the quadruple tie in Chicago's twenty-third international six-day bicycle race today. At the end of the sixty-sixth hour the leaders were Gerard Debaets and Tony Backman, Charley Winter and Freddie Spencer, Paul Brocardo and Alfonse Zucchetti, and Reggie McNamara-Geatano Belloni.

CANADAS TRIUMPH, 11-1.

Defeat Team Representing England in Hockey Match.

BRIGHTON, England, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—The Canadas hockey team of Toronto tonight defeated a team representing England by 11 goals to 1. Tomorrow the Canadians will meet the combined Oxford and Cambridge University teams.

Bull Beats Torrance to Gain Senior Squash Quarter-Finals

C. M. Bull of the Crescent Athletic Club reached the quarter-final round in the national senior squash tennis championship tournament at the Columbia University Club yesterday by defeating Norman Torrance, also of the Crescent A. C., by the score of 15—11, 15—7. Only one tournament match was played.

SWIM RECORD SET BY MISS HANF, 12

Ninety-Pound Star Wins Met. Junior Title in 100-Yard Free-Style Event.

A flash of speed by Miss Constance Hanf in winning the Metropolitan A. A. U. junior 100-yard free style championship and a brilliant victory by Miss Eleanor Holm in the senior 100-yard breast-stroke classic were features of an interesting water carnival in the 75-foot pool of the Women's Swimming Association last night. The latter club swept the awards in both the title events.

Little Miss Hanf, 12 years old, weighing but ninety pounds, amazed by capturing the junior sprint in the extraordinary time of 1:09 4-5, a new record for the fixture and the fastest century ever credited to a girl of her age. She defeated Miss Eva Bein by two yards and Miss Dorothy Myers by five yards.

Miss Holm won as she pleased in the senior breast stroke event. Setting the pace throughout, she led home by four yards Miss Ella Molnar, who was two yards ahead of Miss Augusta Muller. The time was 1:26 2-5.

Miss Lisa Lindstrom did remarkable work in a 300-yard free style handicap, returning the best actual time of 3:56 from the 10-second mark, but she finished third. Miss Marie Berger, allowed 45 seconds, was the winner in 4:26 4-5. Both wear the W. S. A.

George Kojac of the New York A. C. and Rutgers University covered 100 yards back stroke in 1:03 1-5 in an exhibition.

HUNTER DEFEATS BRUNIE IN FINAL

Scores, 6-3, 11-9, 2-6, 7-5, to Gain Trophy in Casino Heights Indoor Tennis.

SECOND SET HARD FOUGHT

Davis Cup Star Overcomes 4-0 Lead, Then Wins 20th Game—Hall-Mercur Doubles Victors.

By LINCOLN A. WERDEN.

Furnishing Francis T. Hunter with stronger opposition than the Davis Cup star encountered in winning the final of the national indoor tennis title recently, Harry Brunie of the West Side Tennis Club carried the champion to four sets before bowing in the concluding round of the Heights Casino invitation tournament yesterday on the club courts in Brooklyn.

Brunie, without a place in the national ranking, gave an excellent exhibition of tennis and, although heavier than Hunter, weighing 185, he was none the less agile and alert. His fine court covering was one of the features of the match. Hunter, after winning the first set, 6—3, had to overcome a lead which Brunie had run to 4—0 in the second and, although Brunie later was at set-point four times, the New Rochelle veteran, applying his pulverizing forehand at the critical junctures of the set, pulled through at 11—9. Although Hunter dropped the next set, he won the match by 6—3, 11—9, 2—6, 7—5.

Hunter Baffled at Net.

Brunie, who plays the best part of his indoor tennis on the Casino courts, made his first threat in the second set, with a fine half-volley attack that brought Hunter to the net, enabling Brunie to pass the veteran as he drove to the far corners of the court.

It was not until Hunter got his forehand working smoothly in the fifth and sixth games that he halted Brunie's rush, and the West Side player who caused something of a stir when he disposed of Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Pa., in the semi-final, overanxious, smashed most of his returns into the net.

Hunter drew even at 4—4 and after each had won his service, Brunie was within a point of the game four times, only to have Hunter bring the count back to deuce and finally win the set. They divided the next six games, each winning his service, then Hunter added the nineteenth game after it had been at deuce four times. Hunter brought the set to a close at 11—9 by winning the next game, profiting on his fine service.

Brunie Recovers Power.

Brunie summoned all his reserve power in the third set and, although he appeared to be tiring rapidly, he smashed with great power, finishing with a stunning cross-court shot that gave him the set, 6—2, and volleys of applause from the gallery.

Coming back to the court after the rest period and playing by the aid of flood lights overhead, Brunie caught Hunter at 2—all after the latter had assumed the lead in the first two games of the fourth set. Brunie won the next game at love and they divided the next four. Hunter, nicking the lines with his shots, then took his service to make it 5—all. He broke through Brunie to capture the twelfth game before bringing the match to a close with a love game. Hunter received the trophy that last year went to John Van Ryn.

The national indoor doubles champions, however, did not fare so well, Perrine Rockafellow and Merritt Cutler losing a one-sided contest to Fritz Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall, who hold the national clay courts doubles title. Mercur and Hall, away to a flying start, took the first set at 6—4 and then went on to win at 6—3, 6—4.

ENGLAND SCORES 605 RUNS.

Hendren, With Double Century, Leads Attack at Georgetown, B. G.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press Cable).—Elias (Pat) Hendren, great Middlesex cricketer, today gave another exhibition of batting skill when he defeated the best efforts of nine British Guiana bowlers and scored his fourth double century of the present English tour of the West Indies.

Largely as the result of his play, the English team scored 605 runs for 5 wickets, declared, in the first innings of the match. The home team scored 57 for no wickets before stumps were drawn.

Six of Hendren's strokes went for 6 runs each and he made twenty-five 4s. He and O'Connor scored 60 runs in half an hour. Hendren scored 254, not out. Sandham also reached a century, knocking out 112. O'Connor made 67 and Townsend 60.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

All Exchanges Closed for the Holiday—Aspects of a Midwinter Situation.

Although it has come to be the tradition that general business, especially in the retail branch, is less observant of yesterday's rather superfluous midwinter holiday than of any other legal holiday on the list, all banks and all financial and commercial exchanges were closed. There were no quotations of stocks, commodities, money or foreign exchange, except on markets outside the United States. Cotton at Liverpool advanced 1⅝ per cent in price, but that mostly reflected New York's advance on Tuesday after the Liverpool market had closed.

Of industrial news there was little yesterday except the carloading figures for the final week of January. They increased considerably over the preceding week and were the largest of the year to date; but that is usual at the end of the first month in any year, and they were still much smaller than in the corresponding week in any of the past six years except 1925. Compared with a year ago, the decrease in loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight, the usually accepted measure of business activity, was 6¼ per cent.

Great Britain's foreign trade statement for January was also published yesterday. It showed substantial decrease from 1929 in both exports and imports, but the surplus of imports was reduced nearly $20,000,000 from a year ago, and was the smallest since last Summer. In foreshadowing the trend of sterling exchange, it should be observed that the season of largest British imports, and therefore of largest monthly import surpluses, is now drawing to a close. In the six months beginning with last August, the aggregate surplus of British imports over exports was, in American values, $1,044,000,000. In the six preceding months, beginning with last February, it was $805,000,000. The difference goes far toward explaining why exchange traditionally moves in favor of London during the Spring and Summer months.

Some of the industrial reports now shortly on the calendar are bound to be interesting. The complete figures of railway gross and net earnings for January have been pretty closely foreshadowed by individual statements and weekly car loadings, but the Labor Department's nation-wide returns of employment during January may be illuminating. As yet the New York Industrial Commission's report for this State, with its 2 per cent increase in unemployment over even December, has appeared to be at odds with the assurances given out, on the basis of incomplete returns, at Washington. The monthly cotton consumption statement will have its bearing on conditions both in the spinning trade and in the raw cotton market. The report on this country's foreign trade in January will show whether or not our exports have been stimulated by reduced home trade and lower prices, and whether the financial setback has cut down imports, as such occurrences usually do.

Yet a rather prevalent impression exists that the business situation in all its phases is not stationary, but is changing with sufficient rapidity to make even January's results in many cases hardly applicable to the middle of February. There has not, at any rate, been a disposition to contend that things have been growing continuously worse. Discussion has mostly addressed itself to conjecture as to how soon a distinct and general turn for the better will come, and how far recovery will be carried. But those questions will hardly be settled until well into the Spring, if they are settled then.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Business will be resumed in Wall Street and other financial centres of the United States today after having been suspended yesterday in observance of Lincoln's birthday. Most of the important financial and commodity markets were closed yesterday, as were the banks.

Treasury Bills.

Announcement of the forthcoming offering of treasury bills was apparently unexpected by bankers, as several of them had recently expressed the opinion that no fresh offering of bills would be made until close to the next tax date, March 15. The reduction of the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to 4 per cent a week ago probably means that the treasury will get a good price for the bills. The first offering of bills, made last December, netted the treasury a return equivalent to a rate of 3¼ per cent, compared with 3⅛ per cent on the contemporary offering of treasury certificates. It was calculated, however, that despite the higher rate the treasury saved money on the bills, since it received cash for them instead of deposit credits as in the case of the certificates of indebtedness. At the time of the original offering bankers explained that such good terms might not be met a second time, since some of the low bids which brought down the average rate were placed largely for the purpose of starting the innovation in treasury financing well, and a repetition of this circumstance could not be expected.

Insurance Company Bond Purchases.

Heavy purchases of railroad and public utility bonds by insurance companies have been a feature of the bond market this week. Although at first glance it would appear that such purchases have been made at the expense of government, municipal and other bonds, it is a fact that some active business has been done also by dealers specializing in bonds of the latter groups. Only a short time ago the great bulk of municipal bonds offered was taken by insurance companies, but in recent weeks dealers have come to rely less on buying from this source. Early in the year several of the newly organized investment trusts, whose proportion of ready cash to investment portfolio rated sizably large, were credited with making heavy purchases of United States Government bonds and have since profited substantially by the appreciation of prices. The holdings of government securities by the Federal Reserve Banks have been maintained at fairly high levels during the last few weeks.

New Commission Problem.

The action of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in directing that railroads with merger petitions should give the financial details in them was said by railroad men to provide a prime subject for study. It was suggested that the Baltimore & Ohio and the Chesapeake & Ohio, which prepared their merger petitions with the financial details expressly omitted, might not give way to the commission's suggestion without some demur. In this they probably would receive indirect support from the Delaware & Hudson, which is in the same boat with them. On the other hand, the Wabash is willing to accept the suggestion. With the railroads thus divided, it was said that an interesting situation was created which might prove to be a "cause célèbre."

Foreign Investments.

Indirect participation of American investors in foreign public utility and industrial organizations, together with offerings of stocks of foreign companies directly to Americans, has been exemplified in a marked degree recently by financing of Siemens & Halske, General Italian Edison, European Electric and other companies, and new acquisitions of International Telephone and Telegraph abroad. General Electric and Electric Bond and Share participation in certain of these developments shows the importance of the present trend, and it is to be assumed, as a result of this activity, that the application of American standards and methods in European industrial life is to receive a further impetus.

Consolidation Comment.

Comment on the Interstate Commerce Commission's consolidation plan has been sparse in New York, and for that reason the action of the Shippers' Conference on the question aroused interest. The conference expressed doubt of the advisability of having large systems which tend to remove responsibility for managements and to reduce competition. It was commented that if, in addition to approving this generality, the conference had taken a specific stand on the fifth trunk line, there would have been more guidance. The State Chamber of Commerce is considering the consolidation plan and a more definite expression is expected as a result.

Comptroller Berry, in a statement issued on December 9, 1929, declared: "I will open bids for $65,000,000 worth of long term City of New York bonds on Wednesday of this week. This will be the last time for at least a year that the City will sell bonds of any description, short term or long term. In other words, after the sale on Wednesday, New York City will not sell long term or short term bonds until late in 1930."

We and our associates purchased on December 11, last, the $65,000,000 bonds and corporate stock referred to by the Comptroller. We have to date sold more than $47,000,000 of this amount and offer the balance indicated above.

We believe these bonds to be a sound and attractive investment and will be glad to furnish upon request the comprehensive statement of Comptroller Berry setting forth the financial position and policies of the City.

BIG NEW UNIT SOUGHT BY STONE & WEBSTER

Exchange of Six of Its Shares for Ten of Engineers Public Service Common Offered.

BOTH BOARDS FAVOR PLAN

WALL ST. RUMORS REFUTED

Move Indicates Entrance of Company Into Banking Line Will Not Affect Utility Activities.

Direct evidence that Stone & Webster, Inc., intends to maintain and increase its participation in the public utility industry of the United States was seen yesterday in the announcement that the directors had voted to offer six shares of Stone & Webster capital stock for each ten shares of Engineers Public Service common stock.

Final quotations for Stone & Webster, Inc., capital stock and Engineers Public Service Company common stock on Tuesday were 99⅞ and 53¾ respectively. On the basis of 100 for Stone & Webster stock, the offer is equivalent to 60 for a share of Engineers Public Service, which places an aggregate value of $108,844,260 on the 1,814,071 common shares outstanding.

Consummation of the exchange offer would place under single ownership properties with total assets exceeding $420,000,000, including subsidiaries. Stone & Webster, Inc., at latest reports owned only 10 per cent, or 180,427 shares, of Engineers' Public Service common stock, although Stone & Webster were instrumental in the original formation of the Engineers Company five years ago and has had operating supervision of its properties since that time.

Plan Ends Some Wall Street Rumors.

In the announced plan the directors of Stone & Webster, Inc., have disposed of rumors heard in Wall Street at various times that the utility properties of the organization might be disposed of. Such reports were current when Stone & Webster, Inc., was forming the Marine Midland Company, which owns a group of banking institutions in Northern New York and is planning to acquire an important bank in New York City.

The Engineers Public Service Company owns more than 99 per cent of the common stocks of the Virginia Electric and Power Company, operating in Richmond and Norfolk, Va.; the Puget Sound Power and Light Company, serving western Washington; the Gulf States Utilities Company and the Baton Rouge Electric Company, serving the Gulf Coast in Louisiana and Texas; the El Paso Electric Company, serving El Paso and adjacent parts of the Rio Grande Valley; the Western Public Service Company, operating in western Nebraska and northwestern Missouri; the Savannah Electric and Power Company of Savannah, Ga., and other properties.

In addition, Stone and Webster, Inc., has important investments in and supervises a large number of other public utility companies. These interests in all involve properties operating in twenty States and in adjacent countries, providing public utility services to more than 6,000,000 persons.

List in Stone & Webster Fold.

Acquisition of Engineers' Public Service will give Stone & Webster, Inc., a diversification of interests covering many separate fields of business, its activities to be carried on by constituent companies, as follows:

| Company. | Percentages Owned. |
|---|---|
| Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation | *90 |
| Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. | 66 2-3 |
| Stone & Webster Service Corporation | 100 |
| Stone & Webster Associates Corporation | 100 |
| Stone & Webster Investing Corporation | 100 |
| Stone & Webster Realty Corporation | 100 |
| Engineers Public Service Company | ** |

Directors of the Engineers Public Service Company have voted to recommend to their stockholders the acceptance of the offer of Stone & Webster, Inc. A committee representing holders of common stock of Engineers Public Service, comprising Murray W. Dodge, P. A. S. Franklin, C. W. Kellogg, G. N. Lindsay, Ray Morris, Eliot Wadsworth and Albert H. Wiggin, was formed to represent the common stockholders in connection with the plan, and in a letter to the stockholders urged its acceptance, indicating that the holders of a substantial amount of the common stock have signified their desire to participate in the plan.

Deposit of Engineers Public Service common shares must be made with the Chase National Bank here, the New England Trust Company in Boston, the First Union Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, or the First National Bank in Philadelphia, as depository and sub-depositories, before the close of business on March 17 to participate in the plan. Consummation of the plan is conditioned upon its acceptance by the holders of not less than 75 per cent of the Engineers Public Service common stock outstanding, including the amount already owned by Stone & Webster, Inc., and the approval by stockholders of the latter company of the increase in its shares.

As dividends at $4 annually are being paid on Stone and Webster, Inc., stock, present holders of Engineers common shares will receive $2.40 a year on each share they now own, compared with $1 in cash and one-twenty-fifth of a share of common stock annually now received.

Stone and Webster, Inc., has 1,500,000 shares authorized, of which 1,258,981 are outstanding. It is proposed to increase the authorized capital to 3,000,000 shares of no par value to provide for the consummation of the plan. The company last Fall made a public offering of a part of its shares, whereas formerly the organization was privately owned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Aggregate resources of the 7,408 reporting national banks in Continental United States, Alaska and Hawaii on Dec. 31 last, the date of the recent call for statements of condition, amounted to $28,882,483,000, exceeding by $958,173,000 the amount reported by 7,473 banks on Oct. 4, 1929, the date of the previous call, John W. Pole, Controller of the Currency, announced today. Total resources of the reporting banks, however, were $1,706,673,000 under those of 7,635 reporting banks on Dec. 31, 1928, the date of the corresponding call in the previous year, when resources were more than $30,500,000,000.

Loans and discounts, including rediscounts, on Dec. 31 amounted to $15,150,046,000, an increase of $188,169,000 since Oct. 4, 1929, but a decrease of $129,585,000 in the year.

Decrease in Government Securities.

Investments in United States Government securities of $2,612,087,000, which amount included bonds deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to secure circulating notes outstanding, showed decreases in the three and twelve month periods of $92,787,000 and $396,636,000, respectively. Other miscellaneous bonds, stocks and securities totaling $3,845,756,000 increased $104,742,000 since the date of the previous call, but declined $272,839,000 in the year.

Balances due from correspondent banks and bankers of $4,761,093,000, which amount included reserve with the Federal Reserve Banks of $1,348,046,000, were $470,476,000 more than three months previously and $919,916,000 less than reported on Dec. 31, 1928. Cash in vaults, $393,330,000, increased since October, 1929, and December, 1928, by $45,968,000 and $5,201,000, respectively.

The paid-in capital stock of the reporting associations was $1,704,473,000, exceeding by $33,199,000 that on Oct. 4, and was $87,997,000 greater than on Dec. 31, 1928.

Surplus funds of $1,548,376,000 and net undivided profits, excluding reserve accounts, of $497,043,000, a total of $2,045,419,000, declined $25,695,000 since October, 1929, but increased $63,592,000 in the year.

Circulating notes outstanding aggregating $646,420,000 were $5,316,000 more than three months previously, but $3,985,000 less than reported on Dec. 31, 1928.

Total deposits on Dec. 31, 1929, aggregated $22,773,493,000, an increase of $871,496,000 since the previous call, but a decrease of $1,573,887,000 in the twelve-month period. Included in total deposits were balances due correspondent banks and bankers and cashiers' and certified checks, &c., of $3,146,301,000, demand deposits of $11,192,750,000, which included United States deposits of $103,318,000 and time deposits of $8,434,442,000. In time deposits were included postal savings of $96,767,000, time certificates of deposit of $1,308,242,000, and deposits evidenced by savings pass books of $6,021,109,000, the last figure being represented by 15,660,880 accounts.

The aggregate liability for money borrowed on account of bills payable of $397,411,000 and rediscounts of $148,176,000 was $545,587,000. Money borrowed on Oct. 4, 1929, was $657,572,000 and on Dec. 31, 1928, $785,309,000.

The percentage of loans and discounts to total deposits on Dec. 31, 1929, was 66.52, compared with 68.31 on Oct. 4, 1929, and 62.76 on Dec. 31, 1928.

Thirty Year 5% Gold Bonds

Due March 1, 1960.

Coupon bonds, dated March 1, 1930, in denomination of $1,000 each, registerable as to principal and exchangeable for fully registered bonds, re-exchangeable under conditions provided in the indenture. Interest payable March 1 and September 1.

NOT REDEEMABLE BEFORE MARCH 1, 1940.

Redeemable as a whole but not in part, at the option of the Company, upon not less than sixty days' prior notice, on March 1, 1940, or on any subsequent interest date up to and including March 1, 1955 at 105% and accrued interest, and thereafter at 100% and accrued interest plus a premium equal to ½% for each six months between the redemption date and the date of maturity.

For further information regarding the Company and this issue of Bonds, reference is made to a letter dated February 11, 1930, received from Newcomb Carlton, Esq., President of The Western Union Telegraph Company, copies of which may be obtained from the undersigned and from which the following is quoted:

"The purpose of this issue is to reimburse the treasury of this Company for expenditures made on account of extensions, additions and improvements to its plant and equipment (outside of the State of New York) and to provide funds for further extensions, additions and improvements (outside of that State).

The Western Union Telegraph Company was incorporated in 1851 and operates a comprehensive communication service; its land line system embraces about 1,875,000 miles of wire and its undersea cable system comprises about 30,680 nautical miles of ocean cables. The Company, with over 25,000 offices, supplies about 82% of the telegraph service in the United States and serves practically every community within its borders, and through its complementary and important cable system and connections establishes telegraph communications with all parts of the world. The services rendered the public by the Western Union consist of full rate telegrams, night messages, day letters, press dispatches, corresponding overseas cable services, financial quotations, reports of baseball and other news, money transfers, time service and messenger service.

The outstanding funded debt of The Western Union Telegraph Company and its subsidiary Companies, including this issue of bonds, will amount to $107,980,000.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has outstanding $102,378,907 par value of stock, having a present market value of approximately $210,000,000. This does not include an additional $2,360,100 par value of stock subscribed for by the employees of the Company under an installment payment plan. The Company has paid dividends on its stock uninterruptedly since 1874; from 1917 to 1925 at the rate of 7% per annum and since the beginning of 1926 at the rate of 8% per annum.

The net income of the Company, after charging all operating expenses and rentals of leased plants and taxes (other than Federal income taxes), but before interest charges, for the year ended December 31, 1929, amounted to $20,829,000, or more than five and one-half times such interest charges for the same period, which amounted to $3,742,000. Such net income during the seven years ended December 31, 1929, was never for any year less than five and one-half times interest charges for such year, while the average of such net income for this period was more than six and one-half times average interest charges.

The Thirty Year 5% Gold Bonds are to be issued under an indenture to be made by the Company to The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, as Trustee, which, among other things, will provide that, while any of the bonds of this issue are outstanding, the Company shall not create any new mortgage (other than purchase-money mortgages) or charge upon all or any part of its real estate or telegraph plant, or upon the securities of subsidiary companies held by it, unless the bonds of the present issue shall be secured by such mortgage or charge ratably with any other indebtedness secured thereby, and that any such mortgage or charge shall expressly so provide."

THE UNDERSIGNED OFFER THE ABOVE BONDS FOR SUBSCRIPTION, SUBJECT TO ALLOTMENT, AT 100% AND ACCRUED INTEREST TO DATE OF DELIVERY.

The above bonds are offered if, when and as issued and received by the undersigned and subject to the approval by their counsel of all legal proceedings in connection with the issuance and sale thereof. Temporary bonds will be delivered against payment in New York funds for bonds allotted, which temporary bonds will be exchangeable for definitive bonds when prepared.

Application will be made in due course to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

$35,000,000 BONDS FOR WESTERN UNION

Issue on Market Today, First in Three Years, to Provide for Expenditures Outside State.

$20,829,000 NET IN 1929

Carlton Reports Income 5½ Times Interest Charges for Year—Listing on Exchange Planned.

An offering of $35,000,000 principal amount Western Union Telegraph Company thirty-year 5 per cent gold bonds will be made today by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at 100 and accrued interest, subject to allotment. The purpose of this issue is to reimburse the treasury of the telegraph company for expenditures made on account of expenses, additions and improvements to its plant and equipment outside the State of New York and to provide funds for similar expenditures.

This is the first financing of the Western Union Telegraph Company in more than three years. An offering of $25,000,000 gold 5s was made on Dec. 1, 1926. The last previous offering consisted of $15,000,000 gold 6½s dated Aug. 1, 1921. The only other important issue not outstanding consists of $20,000,000 funding 4½s offered in May, 1900.

The company and its subsidiaries have a total funded debt of $107,980,000, including the present issue. The company has outstanding $102,378,907 par value of stock, having a market value of about $210,000,000. This does not include $2,360,100 par value of stock subscribed for by employes of the company under an instalment plan.

In a letter to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Newcomb Carlton, president of Western Union, said:

"The net income of the company, after charging all operating expenses and rentals of leased plants and taxes, other than Federal income taxes, but before interest charges, for year ended Dec. 31, 1929, amounted to $20,829,000, or more than five and one-half times such interest charges for the same period, which amounted to $3,742,000. Such net income during the seven years ended Dec. 31, 1929, was never for any year less than five and one-half times interest charges for such year, while the average of such net income for this period was more than six and one-half times average interest charges."

UTILITY EARNINGS.

Columbia Gas and Electric.

Net income of the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation for 1929 amounted to $32,161,139, equal after preferred dividends to $3.11 a share earned on 8,477,224 common shares, according to a preliminary statement of earnings issued yesterday. This is an increase of $3,005,555, or 10 per cent, over the net income for 1928, which was equal to $6.97 a share on 3,372,692 shares outstanding at the close of that year.

In the final quarter of 1929 net income was $10,101,054, or 12 per cent, more than the net income of $8,987,775 in the fourth quarter of 1928. Gross earnings were $31,016,095, against $29,083,661 the year before, an increase of $1,932,434, while operating expenses were only $38,977 higher at $15,063,264.

Gross earnings in 1929 set a high record for the company at $115,150,313, compared with $107,195,658 in 1928, an increase of $7,954,655. Operating expenses were $56,830,212, an increase of $3,898,948. Net earnings and other income, after operating expenses, taxes, renewals, reserves, replacements and depletion, totaled $41,049,487, an increase of $3,056,474.

Alabama Water Service.

Gross revenues of $839,440 are reported for 1929 by the Alabama Water Service Company, against $765,292 in the preceding year. Gross income, after expenses and general taxes, was $399,681, against $363,322.

$47,305,000 New Securities To Be Offered to Public Today

|---|---|
| Public utility | $35,000,000 |

NEW STOCK ISSUE.

New Rochelle Water Company.

An additional issue of $480,000 New Rochelle Water Company 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock will be placed on the market today by Hale, Waters & Co., priced at $99 a share. This financing will bring the preferred stock outstanding to $1,780,000. Net earnings for 1929, after all charges, including interest, depreciation and all taxes, amounted to $251,540, compared with annual dividend requirements of $124,600 on the preferred stock. The company is one of the principal subsidiaries of the Community Water Service Company.

ARKANSAS RECEIVES NO BIDS FOR BONDS

State Unable to Take Less Than Par for $18,000,000 of 5s—Will Offer Notes.

The State of Arkansas received no bids yesterday on its issue of $18,000,000 highway bonds, maturing on Feb. 1, 1935 to 1964, because of the inability of the State to accept bids of less than par for the bonds, which carried a 5 per cent coupon, the maximum interest rate under the State law. Two groups were represented yesterday at the meeting held by the State Highway Note Board, one headed by Lehman Brothers and the other by Halsey, Stuart & Co.

In order that the State may continue its program of highway construction, the State Treasurer, Ralph Koonce, announced yesterday that bids would be opened on March 7 on a new issue of $9,000,000 nine-month notes. Proceeds from the sale of these notes, together with $6,000,000 which the State still has of the last bond issues marketed, will be sufficient to continue the State's program for 1930 without interruption. Bankers yesterday expressed the belief that the State would not experience difficulty in marketing the note issue.

| COMMON STOCK (No Par Value) | *1,500,000 Shares |

*The Common Stock of the Yosemite Holding Corporation will be issued under a voting trust composed of five members. The voting trustees will be members of the Board of Directors of the Yosemite Holding Corporation. Of the unissued stock, 410,000 shares are reserved against purchase warrants, to be issued with the Preferred Stock; and in payment for services to the management of the Yosemite Holding Corporation and the Securities Research Corporation (payment to be made at the end of each year during the five year management contract), and to the Bankers. An additional 90,000 shares are reserved against purchase warrants which may be issued in further acquisition of assets.

Warrants entitle the holder to purchase one share of Common Stock represented by voting trust certificates at $7.00 per share at any time before December 1, 1934, and at $10.00 per share any time before December 1, 1939.

BUSINESS—The Yosemite Holding Corporation was organized in 1929 under the laws of the State of Delaware, with broad charter powers, to operate as an investment company of the general management type, and, to acquire or organize investment companies of practically any size or type. The Yosemite Holding Corporation owns a controlling interest in the Securities Research Corporation.

An offer for exchange of stock has been made Union Investors, Inc., an investment trust of the general management type, on the basis of approximately the liquidating value of that company.

MANAGEMENT—The Corporation is under the direction of men who have had long training in industry, investment banking, and finance.

The Securities Research Corporation, under the supervision of the Board of Directors of the Yosemite Holding Corporation, will completely manage the portfolios of those companies acquired or organized by the Yosemite Holding Corporation. The management fee will be 1% of the average market value of invested funds, annually, (½% for counsel and advice and ½% for administrative expense). It will charge the Yosemite Holding Corporation the same fees for the management of its funds.

MARKETS IN LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN

Shipping Issues Decline on the English Exchange—Railway Dividends Announced.

FRENCH STOCKS IMPROVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The stock markets were quiet today and interest in the trading was overshadowed by the declarations of dividends by three of the four great English railway systems. In each case the distribution has been increased, although only in the case of the Great Western Company were last year's receipts greater than in 1928. A final dividend of 4¾ per cent brings Great Western's yearly dividend to 7½ per cent, while the London, Midland & Scottish, with a 2½ per cent final dividend, brings its yearly disbursement to 4½ per cent. The Southern Railway surprised the market by declaring a 2½ per cent dividend on its deferred stock when only 2 per cent had been expected.

On the Exchange renewed alarm was caused by a sharp drop in Royal Mail Shipping shares. Ordinary shares plunged from 29 to 22½, a new low price, while Elder Dempster 5 per cent. preference shares declined to 5s and White Star preference fell to 9s 9d.

Gilt-edged securities were steady, with the funding loan at £88. Profit taking caused Canadian Pacific to slump to $223. International Nickel rallied to 39⅜ after early weakness caused by unfavorable reports of earnings. Columbia Graphophone rose 3-32 to £6⅜. Hydroelectric shares also were strong at $42⅞. Rhodesian coppers advanced on professional support, B'wana spurting 1s 1½d to 23s 9d.

Money was tight in Lombard Street, where over-night loan rates jumped to 4¾%. Discount rates were firm at 3⅞ for three-month bills. Sterling weakened to $4.86¼.

French Market Firmer.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The situation on the Bourse improved slightly today but the volume of business did not increase much. In financial circles the chief complaint now turns toward taxation, which is regarded generally as excessive and held to be the main cause of the restriction of activity.

A special mission representing the Ottoman debt council has been appointed to go to Turkey and study the financial situation there and collaborate with the Turkish Government. The council will not take it upon itself to propose a special solution but it desires to establish a contact between the Angora Government and the Ottoman bond holders, who have been alarmed by rumors of a moratorium.

French rentes today were quiet but firm. Closing prices were: The 3 per cents, 89.45; 1918 4s, 99.95; 1920 amortizable 5s, 136.50; 1928 5s, 104.25; 1920 6s, 103.20; 1927 amortizable 6s, 107.97.

Trading Light in Berlin.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—Today's session of the Boerse exactly resembled yesterday's, with the volume of trading so small that hardly any tendency was evident, although a few stocks suffered slight losses, including North German Lloyd, which dropped 2 points in connection with the loss of the liner Muenchen in New York, and electrical, artificial silk and bank shares. An advance of 8 points in Polyphon shares, steadiness in dye trust shares and an announcement of a further reduction in the private discount rate for short loans had no visible effect upon the rest of the market.

Fall of Spanish Currency Causing Concern in Business

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Feb. 12.—The peseta fell considerably today, and as a result of the continued monetary slump business in all lines began to show a disquieting decline. Speculation in the peseta abroad as a result of lack of confidence in the political situation is felt to be causing the persistent weakness.

It has been learned from authoritative sources that the government Department of Labor has decided to lay off 5,000 State employes, including office and road laborers, in the interests of economy.

MADRID, Feb. 12 (AP).—The peseta was quoted in the closing unofficial Exchange today at 7.92 to the dollar, the lowest figure reached since Domaso Berenguer assumed the Premiership in place of Primo de Rivera. In banking circles it was said however, there was no basic cause to justify alarm.

BRITAIN'S EXPORTS REDUCED IN JANUARY

IMPORTS ALSO DECREASED

Drop of £14,692,030 From Year Before—Decline Chiefly in Raw Cotton and Waste.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A serious decline in Britain's foreign trade is revealed by the Board of Trade figures for January, which, together with the increase in the unemployment figures, will make disturbing reading for British business men.

In a month when the unemployment figures were 130,125 higher than a year ago, British exports declined £8,617,129 as compared with January, 1929. Big declines are also recorded in imports of essential raw materials.

The total exports for the month were £58,262,478, a decline of £167,358 from December. The only encouraging item was coal exports, which totaled 5,493,410 tons—more than 1,000,000 tons more than the January, 1929, figures. On the other hand, there were losses of £2,906,558 in exports of cotton yarn manufactures as compared with the previous January; of £1,114,296 in woolen worsted yarns manufactures; of £1,796,372 in vehicles, including locomotives, ships and aircraft, and of £948,476 in iron and steel manufactures.

Imports for January totaled £101,853,658—a decrease of £4,720,882 in comparison with December and of £14,692,030 in comparison with January, 1929. The outstanding decreases were in raw cotton and cotton waste, which fell £4,456,858 below the figures for January, 1929; non-dutiable foods and drinks, which decreased £2,269,974, and grain and flour, which decreased £1,841,543 below last January's figures.

The month's re-exports totaled £8,173,899—a drop of £1,636,783 from the previous January.

COMMERCIAL CREDIT COMPANY, BALTIMORE

for 1929 discloses that the Company had the best year in its history. Organized in 1912 with Cash Capital of $300,000, the invested Capital is today over $58,000,000, and Consolidated Resources over $192,000,000. Net operating income has expanded from $125,729 for 1913 to $6,254,142 for 1929. Gross volume has increased from $9,413,783 in 1913 to $442,807,262 for 1929. After all Preferred dividends, Federal Taxes, bonuses and adjustments, net operating income for 1929 was $4.48 per share on the average Common stock outstanding.

For over seventeen years—through periods of business and financial depression as well as prosperity—the Company has never failed to annually show net operating income, after Federal Taxes and all adjustments, in excess of its dividend requirements on all Preferred stocks then outstanding, and to pay same quarterly.

In the light of this record and of future prospects, the Preferred Stocks of the Company, as referred to below, today offer to discriminating investors the advantages of an unusual opportunity to safely invest funds at attractive yields in a class of well-seasoned, listed securities which, at their present market prices are, in our opinion, intrinsically undervalued.

6½% First Preferred Stock—Yielding 7.50%

7% First Preferred Stock—Yielding over 7.00%
Tax Refund in whatever State held up to ½%.
Outstanding $4,000,000; par value $25; book value $115.43 per share.
Present market quotation $23—$25 per share.

8% Class "B" Preferred Stock—Yielding over 8.00%
Tax Refund in whatever State held up to ½%.
Outstanding $4,000,000; par value $25; book value $271.28 per share.
Present market quotation $23—$25 per share.

All issues of the Preferred Stocks are cumulative, fully paid, non-assessable, and are preferred as to assets and dividends over the $15,000,000 Class "A" Convertible Stock and 1,037,052 shares of Common Stock (No Par Value). Both issues of First Preferred Stocks are on a parity as to security.

All the Capital Stock issues of Commercial Credit Company are listed on the New York and Baltimore Stock Exchanges. At current market prices for the Class A Convertible and Common stocks, there is an indicated equity of over $42,800,000 junior to all of the Preferred stocks.

This Company is one of the oldest and largest financial institutions of its kind in the United States. Its assets are very liquid—practically all cash and current receivables—and are in excellent condition.

ECUADOR EXCHANGE UPSET.

Apprehension Exists Over Drop in Central Bank's Gold Reserve.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GUAYAQUIL, Feb. 12.—There is apprehension over the rate of exchange, according to Quito papers, on account of the reduction in the gold reserve of the Central Bank.

El Dia, commenting on the last bulletin of the Central Bank, says "In the month of January, the balance between the purchase and the sale of foreign exchange was disturbed, as purchases were only 600,000 sucres, while sales were 2,977,000 sucres, resulting in a loss in the gold reserve of 2,386,000 sucres."

A prominent banker gives as the cause the low figure of exports and the payment of outstanding foreign debts by merchants.

$132,000 Peruvian Bonds Drawn.

Holders of Peruvian National loan 6 per cent external sinking fund gold bonds, second series, due October, 1961, have been notified by J. & W. Seligman and the National City Bank that $132,000 of these bonds has been drawn by lot for redemption at their principal amount and accrued interest on April 1.

WOULD AVOID MORATORIUM.

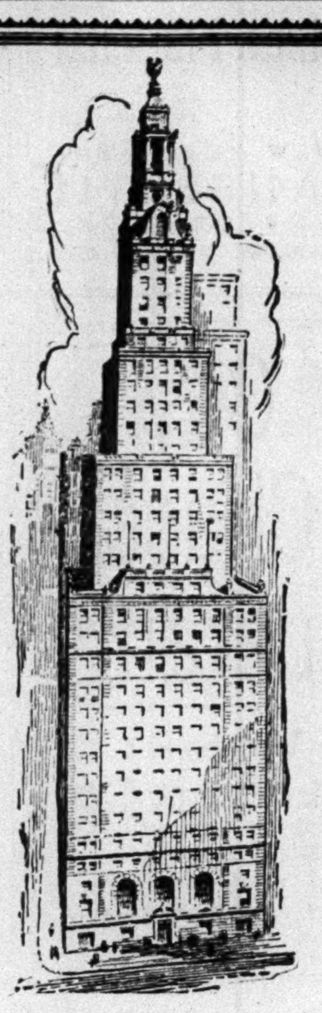
Aksham Intimates Turkey Regards This as a Last Resort.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 12.—The newspaper Aksham says that sentiment in government circles at Angora favors a moratorium only if the Ottoman Debt Commission cannot make any other proposal.

Kiazim Pasha, president of the National Assembly, says: "This would be a tool in the hands of our enemies abroad to attack Turkey, but we are accustomed to that. Our desire is a mutual understanding only on the old debts involved, not on those of the republican government.

Carrying Forward A Distinguished Banking Tradition



SINCE the establishment of the Bank of New York by Alexander Hamilton 145 years ago, this institution has maintained banking facilities in keeping with each succeeding stage of the country's growth. No pledge is necessary for the continuance of those progressive policies which have created a wealth of banking tradition for New York's oldest bank.

In the specialized administration of trusts our experience goes back to 1830, the founding of the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company, which company was consolidated with the Bank of New York in 1922.

Accumulated strength of resources and breadth of experience in Commercial Banking and Trusteeships may be credited to the personal interest which this bank has always taken in business entrusted to it.

Silver foxes sail to sea

After seeing them all comfortably settled for the voyage, the Seattle fox-farmer came to us with complete invoices and bills of lading asking for payment.

One of our Hamburg correspondents, on behalf of a Norwegian client, had instructed us to pay for this curious cargo upon presentation of shipping documents.

But, such an odd shipment demanded more than the usual papers. So our Export Letter of Credit Division asked for a certificate of good health and for an insurance policy covering the foxes' lives. These were produced and immediately a check exchanged hands.

Absolute accuracy and thorough examination of the multitudinous papers necessary for every import and export transaction are as essential to us as are the correct figures on a check to you. Yet complete sets of documents are prepared and scrutinized by our experienced experts in an amazingly short time.

Sending live foxes to sea is indication of the extensive and varied scope of our world-wide experience, covering almost every type of merchandise that comes into or sails out of this country.

What is your foreign problem?

Through our 11,000 carefully chosen foreign correspondents; our branch offices in London, Paris and Mexico City; our subsidiary banks in Shanghai, Hongkong and Tientsin; and through our experienced personnel in New York, we are helping many American corporations to develop and strengthen their connections abroad.

If you have a trade problem—a surplus to sell abroad, or a home market to fill—we invite you to discuss it with us, either in your own office or at any one of ours.

F. R. Henderson of Rubber Exchange Forms $7,000,000 Investment Corporation.

DEALS TO BE WORLD-WIDE

Foreign and Domestic Leaders in Certain Lines Are to Be Among Directors.

Formation of a $7,000,000 company to invest primarily in essential commodities and raw materials, and to be known as the Basic Commodities Corporation, was announced yesterday by F. R. Henderson, president of the Rubber Exchange of New York. The new company, which has been incorporated in Delaware, will apply the investment trust principle to investment in the world's basic commodities and will have on its board of directors leaders in commodity markets, both foreign and domestic.

The corporation's charter will permit "participation in syndicates, underwritings and other financial operations." The company will have a scientific research department to compile data from all parts of the world relating to basic commodities. There will also be an advisory board to assist in determining the policy of the company in regard to investment in securities.

"With many of the world's essential commodities selling in their raw state at the lowest levels in many years, I believe the public must recognize the soundness of investing in them at this time," Mr. Henderson said. "With this in mind I have organized the Basic Commodities Corporation.

"A staple and essential commodity may be regarded as an investment which should be proof against loss if disposed of at the proper time. The average individual with money to invest has neither the time nor the opportunity to acquaint himself with the opportunities in this field, however, and it is to furnish a medium for such an investment that the corporation has been organized."

PLANS FOR FOOD MERGERS.

National Brands Organized With View to Wide Acquisitions.

National Brands, Inc., has been incorporated in Delaware to acquire ownership, in whole or in part, of companies manufacturing articles distributed through retail grocery stores. The concern has authorized $5,000,000 of 6 per cent convertible debentures, 250,000 shares of Class A and 200,000 shares of common stock. It has acquired the Quaker Products Company of Philadelphia and is negotiating for the American Dairies Company of Detroit.

A. Victor Hughes, president of the Crosby & Hill Company of Wilmington, Del., is president of the new organization; R. A. McKee, president of the Defiance Dairy Products Company of Defiance, Ohio, is vice president, and H. Ruthven Crowley, president of the American Mint Company of Philadelphia, is secretary and treasurer.

Auto Exports in 1929 Put At $722,660,331, New Peak

Official export declarations of automotive products rose to new high levels in 1929, reaching $722,660,331, according to Automotive Industries. This was $60,000,000 more than the total in 1928, equivalent to a gain of approximately 9 per cent.

Considerably lower prices on numerous products such as passenger cars, trucks, tires and batteries were included in the figures.

PLANS HUGE POWER PLANTS

Norway May Export Electricity to Germany.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 12.—The possibility of exporting Norwegian electric power to Germany on a great scale is seen in plans to create three giant waterfalls in the Norwegian districts of Telemarken and Soerlandet.

Altogether the three falls would produce 600,000 kilowatts, which would be transferred by cable through Sweden and across the Baltic to Sassnitz and Luebeck, where a German receiving station would be placed. An alternate proposal is to send the electricity to Germany across Denmark. The total cost of the project is estimated at $93,000,000.

NEW GENERATING STATION.

Producing 150,000 Horsepower for Duke Power Company.

The Duke Power Company announces it has placed in commission a 150,000-horsepower steam generating station at River Bend, N. C., and that it has contracted for one-half the output of the new hydroelectric power station at Mountain Island, N. C., capable of developing 90,800 horsepower.

The new River Bend station has a 50 per cent greater capacity than any of the generating plants heretofore owned or operated by the Duke Power Company and gives the company a total capacity in excess of 1,103,000 horsepower.

HEADS INSURANCE COMPANY

W. W. Parsons Promoted to Presidency of the Atlantic Mutual.

Walter Wood Parsons, vice president of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, has been elected president of the organization to succeed the late Cornelius Eldert. William D. Winter, formerly second vice president, was elected vice president, and J. Arthur Bogardus second vice president. Percy G. Craig was made loss manager.

PRICES TO REMAIN LOW IN MID-CONTINENT OIL

Farish Reports No Prospect of Early Increase—Sees Outlook as Uncertain.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 12 (AP).—There is no immediate prospect of an increase in Mid-Continent Crude Oil prices to the level prevailing before the recent reductions made by subsidiaries of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, W. S. Farish, president of the Humble Oil and Refining Company, says in a statement to the Oil and Gas Journal. The statement was made after a conference of officials of Standard of New Jersey in New York.

In discussing the general situation, Mr. Farish said that with California gasoline available in Atlantic Coast markets at 8 cents a gallon or less, a lowering of prices of crude oil in territories affected by this competition was necessary to protect refiners purchasing a large part of their crude requirements.

Hayes-Jackson Reports.

The Hayes-Jackson Corporation, an investment company, reports for 1929 a net income of $14,772 after all expenses and charges, including Federal income tax. It shows total assets of $204,446.

NEW YORK CENTRAL REPORTS FOR 1929

$37,090,531 IN DIVIDENDS

Extra Payments of $22,015,000 From Subsidiaries—Their Earnings Also Announced.

The New York Central Railroad Company in its statement covering operation for the twelve months ended on Dec. 31, 1929, reports a net income of $78,277,291, including the net income of the Boston & Albany Railroad and the Ohio Central Lines. This compares with $50,334,485 for 1928, an increase of $27,942,806. Dividends accrued totaled $37,090,531 during the year and sinking fund and other reserve funded $190,948, a total of $37,281,480, leaving for the year a surplus of $40,995,811. This compares with $15,303,754 for 1928, or an increase for 1929 of $2,250,749.

One of the principal increases for 1929 occurred in the item of non-operating income. The item totaled $59,139,763, including $22,015,800 received during the year as extra dividends paid on stocks of the Michigan Central Railroad Company, the Chicago River & Indiana Railroad Company and the Indiana Harbor Belt Railroad Company.

The income accounts for the New York Central and its subsidiaries for the three months ended on Dec. 31 and also for all of 1929, with comparisons with 1928, follow:

Jewel Tea Company Reports.

The Jewel Tea Company, Inc., reports sales of $1,202,513 for the four weeks ended on Jan. 25, compared with $1,181,767 during the corresponding period in 1929.

Wheat Traders Kept Guessing By Unprecedented Conditions

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Conditions surrounding the wheat market are different from any ever known before, even during the World War, and traders are kept guessing as to the next move by the stabilization officials.

That the latter will buy wheat on breaks seems certain. So far, however, there is no evidence that they have sold any of the wheat bought in leading markets.

ROAD TO SPEND $50,000,000

Canadian Pacific Plans New Eqiupment and Branch Line Construction.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will expend more than $50,000,000 in 1930 on new equipment, new branch line construction and improvement to existing equipment and roadbed, according to an announcement received here yesterday by the local offices of the road from its chairman and president, E. W. Beatty. This sum, it was pointed out, will not include large expenditures to be made during the year on ocean steamships now building or on the work of the road's department of colonization, which will approximate $1,000,000 for 1930.

Orders totaling $14,442,730 have been or will be placed for equipment and for the conversion and improvement of existing equipment. More than $3,000,000 will be expended on the improvement and extension of the Canadian Pacific telegraphs and $3,500,000 on the road's system of hotels. Additions to rail facilities in all parts of Canada will total about $10,000,000. The expenditure for new work in Eastern Canada will approximate $7,500,000.

WABASH ASKS USE OF STOCK

Seeks I. C. C. Authority to Pledge Lehigh Valley Shares for Loans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Wabash Railway Company asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today for authority to pledge 177,900 shares of the Lehigh Valley Railroad held in its treasury as collateral for short term loans.

The application sought amendment of a Commission order almost two years ago, which granted the Wabash authority to issue $17,867,000 of refunding and general mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds, under condition that the company refrain from disposing of its holdings in the Lehigh Valley or pledging these holdings for loans.

The conditions stipulated by the Commission at the time of the order were looked upon as its method of retaining control of this large block of Lehigh Valley stock pending the outcome of consolidation plans then in progress.

ROAD ORDERS 1,800 CARS.

Pullman, Pressed Steel and Mount Vernon Get L. & N. Contracts.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Pullman Car and Manufacturing Company announced today that it had been commissioned to manufacture and deliver 250 freight cars as a part of an 1,800-car order of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

MOUNT VERNON, NEW YORK
February 4, 1930

To the Holders of the Preferred Stock of Willow Brook Dairy:

You are hereby notified that pursuant to the provisions of the Amended Certificate of Incorporation of this corporation, all of the outstanding preferred stock of this corporation is hereby called for redemption on April 1, 1930. Said redemption will be made at the office of The National City Bank of New Rochelle, 491 Main Street, New Rochelle, New York.

Upon the surrender to said Bank on that day, for account of this corporation, of the certificate or certificates for said preferred stock then held by you duly endorsed in blank and witnessed, there will be paid to you One Hundred and Ten Dollars ($110) per share, together with the dividend accruing thereon at the rate of seven per cent (7%) per annum from January 1, 1930, up to said April 1, 1930. Any stockholder failing so to surrender his certificate or certificates of preferred stock on April 1, 1930, shall not, in any event, be entitled to receive further dividends thereon or to exercise any rights with respect thereto except to receive from said Bank the amount set aside for the redemption thereof without interest. If payment is to be made to other than the registered holder, or through a bank, certificates must bear state and federal stock transfer stamps and the endorsement on the certificate must be guaranteed.

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY OF THE State of Delaware in and for New Castle County—ROBERT PENINGTON, Complainant, vs. COMMONWEALTH HOTEL CONSTRUCTION CORPORATION, a corporation of the State of Delaware, Defendant.—Receivership Cause.—To

(1) The holders of the preferred stock of Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation who have paid in full for their shares.
(2) The holders of the common stock of Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation who have paid in full for their shares.
(3) Persons who have subscribed for shares of preferred stock but have paid only part of their subscriptions.
(4) Persons who have subscribed for shares of common stock but have paid only part of their subscriptions.
(5) All other persons if any there be claiming the right to share in the distribution of the funds of the said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation remaining after the payment of debts, expenses, etc.:

Pursuant to an order of the Chancellor of the State of Delaware made in the above entitled cause on the 31st day of January, 1930, you are hereby notified—

(a) That to enable you to share in the distribution of the funds of the said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation, remaining after the payment of all its debts and the expenses of the receivership cause of said corporation, it is necessary for you to file with Robert H. Richards, Receiver of said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation, at his office at No. 4,060 du Pont Building, Wilmington, Delaware, a duly verified proof of your claim for the purpose of establishing your right to share in such distribution, which proof must be so filed on or before the third day of May 1930, and that if you should fail to so file your proof of claim on or before said date you will be barred and forever foreclosed from filing any proof of claim in the said receivership cause of the said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation. In filing such proof of claim you may use, but are not required to use, the form of proof of claim accompanying this notice, which form was approved by the Chancellor in his said order.

(b) That on the fourteenth day of May, 1930, at the Court Room of the Court of Chancery in the County Court House at Wilmington, Delaware, the said Chancellor will hear the petition of the said Receiver and a petition of intervention heretofore filed by a Stockholders Protective Committee of Preferred and Common stock of said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation praying a determination of the relative rights of all persons claiming the right to share in the distribution of the funds of the said Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation remaining after the payment of all debts and expenses required to be paid therefrom, at which time and place the Chancellor will hear all persons claiming the right to share in such distribution of said fund and all evidence offered or desired to be offered by them, and their respective solicitors that may appear for them, and will determine the relative rights of all such claimants to share in such distribution, and all such claimants desiring to be heard must appear or be represented at said time and place.

This notice is sent to you pursuant to the above mentioned order of Honorable Josiah O. Wolcott, Chancellor of the State of Delaware, and you are warned that your failure to act in accordance therewith will be at your peril.

ROBERT H. RICHARDS,
Receiver of Commonwealth Hotel Construction Corporation.

| CITY OF BERKELEY | 9489 | New York | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| HAYMON | 9489 | New York | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| HAXTUM | 9489 | Norfolk | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| HATHAWAY | 9489 | New York | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| HAWARDEN | 9489 | Norfolk | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| HATCHIE | 9489 | New York | Turbine | Foster | Oil |
| AUDITOR | 8756 | New Orleans | Turbine | B.&W. | Oil |
| LAKE FIBRE | 4060 | New York | Reciprocating | Scotch | Oil |
| HAYDEN | 9489 | New York | Turbine | Foster | Oil |

The aforesaid description and any other information furnished concerning said vessels is solely for the general information of bidders and its accuracy is not warranted. The vessels are offered for sale "as is, where is" at date of award, except stores, bunker fuel, submarine signal apparatus, vacuum tubes and other leased equipment, and without warranty or guaranty or representation as to seaworthiness, condition, description, capacity, tonnage or otherwise. Vessels may be inspected upon application to the undersigned office or to officer in charge at their present locations. Delivery will be made of said vessels at their present locations.

Bids may be submitted for one vessel or for more than one vessel or for all vessels. The vessels will be sold on either one of the following conditions:

1. That the vessel or vessels bid for be converted into a barge or barges.
2. That the vessels shall be completely dismantled and scrapped as steamships, inclusive of engines, boilers, auxiliary machinery and all other equipment whatsoever, all of which shall be rendered non-usable for other than scrap.

In the event an award is made under Proposition 1 each vessel shall be completely stripped of all propelling machinery with the exception of one boiler and such propelling machinery, other machinery and equipment used in the conversion of the vessel to a barge. Any successful bidder shall have the right at any time within eighteen (18) months from the date of the delivery of the vessel to install the other boiler on each vessel in any other ship owned by him. All the remainder of the machinery and equipment on each vessel, including said boiler removed therefrom, if said boiler is not installed in such other vessel within the time, as aforesaid, shall be completely scrapped and rendered non-usable for other than scrap. All work shall be performed within the Continental limits of the United States and the vessel shall not be operated prior to such conversion.

In the event an award is made on the basis of Proposition 2 the vessels shall not be operated except as hereinafter provided and the hulls thereof shall be dismantled in such manner that they shall be rendered unfit for subsequent use as vessels, barges or any means of transportation whatsoever. The work of scrapping and dismantling may be performed outside the Continental limits of the United States in which event the purchaser may with the prior written consent of the United States Shipping Board carry one (1) outbound cargo of scrap iron, grain or coal.

Any successful bidder under Propositions 1 or 2 shall be required to execute a sales agreement satisfactory in form to the Board which shall include, among other things, the conditions of sale set forth herein, together with provisions for the payment of liquidated damages in the event the conditions of sale are not fulfilled or the said work is not completed within the time specified as follows: For each day operated other than as hereinbefore provided, $300.00 per day for each vessel; for performing the work, except scrapping and dismantling, outside of the Continental limits of the United States, $5,000.00 per vessel; for failure to perform the work within the time limit $100.00 per day for each vessel for a period of 180 days and in case such delay shall exceed 180 days there shall be a total default whereupon the Buyer must pay as liquidated damages in addition to the amount or amounts aforesaid a lump sum of $7,000.00.

The successful bidder shall also state the time within which he agrees to complete the work of conversion to barges or dismantling and scrapping and no bid will be considered which fixes a time in excess of eighteen (18) months from the date of delivery of the vessel. Should the Buyer be delayed in the performance of the contract by any cause beyond his control the Shipping Board may extend the time for the performance of said contract.

Vessels will be at risk of the successful bidder after date of award. The successful bidder will be required to accept delivery of vessels within sixty (60) days after date of award. The Fleet Corporation will break vessels out from their present location at time of delivery at its own expense, and effect delivery in the stream at that point, but neither the Shipping Board nor the Fleet Corporation will be liable for any damage to vessels incurred during such breaking out. If for any reason delivery is not accepted within said sixty days' period, or vessels are not promptly removed from point of delivery after being broken out by the Fleet Corporation, the successful bidder shall pay to the Fleet Corporation any costs which thereafter shall be incurred by reasons of the custody of and/or removal from their then position.

All bids must be on a lump sum basis and must state plainly the names of vessels bid on, the amount bid for each ship, whether or not the offer may be accepted for any number of the ships named in the bid at the prices stated therefor or only for the total named therein, under which proposition the bid is made and if made under Proposition 2 whether the work is to be performed outside the Continental limits of the United States. Bids must be accompanied by a good faith deposit of 10% of the amount offered, in cash, or by a cashier's check, or certified check, payable to the United States Shipping Board. If award is made, the good faith deposit will be credited on the purchase price, or will be retained as liquidated damages if the successful bidder fails to complete the purchase within the time specified. The balance of the purchase price shall be payable on delivery of bills of sale by cash. Amounts of deposits will be returned promptly to unsuccessful bidders.

The Board reserves the right to withdraw from sale such vessels as it desires and to accept or reject any or all bids.

Bids shall be enclosed in a sealed envelope marked "Bid for (Name of Vessel)", and this envelope enclosed in another and addressed to the Ship Sales Division, United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation, Washington, D. C. Bids will be received until 12:00 o'clock, Noon, Eastern Standard Time, March 10th, 1930.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Good Retail Holiday Turnover.

Retail turnover yesterday in a number of departments of stores here proved the best of the year thus far, according to retail executives. Milder weather, plus the holiday, served to bring out the largest attendance of consumers since the Christmas holidays. Accessory, home furnishings and furniture departments were credited with the best sales figures. Somewhat greater interest was also reported in ready-to-wear, particularly dresses and the new ensembles, indicating that sales in these departments will expand at an early date provided weather conditions are favorable. Chain variety stores also enjoyed a heavy turnover.

Fur Sale Sets Peak for Day.

Northern and Southern muskrat were the only articles sold at the Huth fur sale here yesterday. Both declined 30 per cent from the average prices of the September auction. More than 300,000 Northern skins of fair quality sold poorly at prices ranging to $1.60 for the best. Top for the Southern pelts, of which a collection of 1,100,000 was offered, was 94 cents. The quality of these skins was good, but the bidding for them was only fairly active. Due largely to the number of Southern "rats" sold, a new high record for a single day's selling was set with $1,500,000. The total for the first three days of the sale is $2,900,000.

Cotton Rise May Help Sales.

The rise in cotton in the last three trading days on the Exchange here, which brought spot middling upland up 70 points to 15.90 cents, is expected materially to help business in several kinds of finished goods. Right now the attention of the manufacturers is fixed mostly on May cotton, the price of which rose from the low of 15.35 cents on Friday to 16.02 at Tuesday's close. Manufacturers of heavy colored cottons, in which the staple plays an important part in fixing the price, saw a definite contraction of demand during the slump, and the same was true of makers of heavy knitted underwear. In both instances, however, there was an absence of important price shading.

Handbag Orders Showing Gain.

Clearance sales of handbags last month served to move most of the stock in retailers' hands, a condition reflected in better orders during the last ten days, according to manufacturers here. Leather bags in both pouch and envelope styles continue to lead, but the outlook for fabric types for later selling is considered good. Use of zipper fastenings still features much of the leather merchandise, but considerable attention is also being given fancy metal frame items. The color preference displayed so far stresses tan, black, green, blue and beige. Sports bags are being sought for immediate delivery, particularly from the South.

Garment Specialization Growing.

Increasing specialization on the part of retailers in handling ready-to-wear lines, which consists mostly of adding special departments for garments needed by different types of customers, is making it steadily more difficult for manufacturers who adhere to a general line. It was said here yesterday that the specialists are doing far better business this season than the "general" manufacturers, and volume figures cited by the former indicate substantial increases over those for the same period of 1929. Specialization in handling dresses by the stores is particularly marked, and manufacturers who have swung with the trend apparently are "cleaning up." Reduced necessity of alterations is the keynote of the matter.

"Clip" Jewelry Well Reordered.

Reorders have developed in substantial volume for stone-set "clip" ornaments for both dresses and hats and these items are asserted to be leading sellers at retail at the present time. Their vogue is held likely to continue well into the Spring season. Buying interest is also reported in a new series of novelty jewelry just introduced, known abroad as "galeria" jewelry. These items are reproductions of French museum pieces and comprise necklaces, brooches, earrings and clips. They are set with baguettes, rhinestones and clusters of odd-shaped colored stones in sterling silver or white metal mountings. Crystal necklaces continue in favor and are now regarded as staples.

Consumers Seek Apparel Values.

One of the most marked features of women's garment buying here during the past week or ten days, it was said yesterday, has been the emphasis which retailers have been laying on the popular-price ranges. Both in dresses and in coats and suits there has been a tendency to operate slowly on both ends of the price line. This has had the effect of cutting appreciably into the sales volume of the cheaper apparel, and has also tended to curtail business in the higher-priced numbers in the acknowledged style lines. It is attributed to the apparent desire of consumers to get the best values for their money, rather than to buy price or superstyle alone.

Normal Furniture Mark-Downs.

Although more retail stores introduced furniture sales yesterday than at this time last year, the average reductions featured did not vary greatly from those of a year ago. Reductions advertised ranged from 20 to 50 per cent, as in previous seasons. Upholstered lounge chairs were most prominent in the displays. Manufacturers report increased buying by local stores and chain groups this week. Buyers were in the market early in the week for their regular Spring merchandise.

Mahogany Bridge Tables Favored.

Bridge tables, conservative in design and decorations, have led other types in the sales of higher priced models this year, producers report. Preferences indicated by retail stores in their Spring buying give mahogany-finished tables the first place. Plain black tops have been specified in such orders. Low-end merchandise retailing from $1.65 to $2.50 features the colorful effects of last year. In this range cloth tops have been made up in futuristic designs. The majority of stores have covered their requirements in bridge tables up to the end of March.

Summer Hardware Orders Start.

Hardware jobbers are beginning to show an interest in Summer specialties and have placed some small orders in the market this week. One-gallon thermos jugs for the use of motorists and small-sized thermos bottles for homes have been purchased. Delivery toward the end of next month has been specified. Styles and prices in the thermos lines show little variation from last year. The early orders, however, are said to be smaller than they were a year ago. Retail buyers are not expected to start ordering for several weeks.

CRUDE RUBBER STOCKS UP.

Dealers' Total in Far East 36,149 Tons on Jan. 1.

Dealers' stocks of crude rubber in the principal Far Eastern markets totaled 36,149 tons on Jan. 1, against 35,607 tons on hand on Dec. 1 and 31,708 tons on Jan. 1, 1929, according to dispatches received by the Rubber Exchange of New York.

In Singapore holdings were 28,478 tons at the end of last month, against 27,949 tons on Dec. 31 and 24,770 tons a year ago. Stocks at Penang were 4,993 tons, against 5,208 tons and 4,847 tons on the two earlier dates, respectively. Malacca holdings were 2,484 tons, 2,247 tons and 1,841 tons respectively.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Six selling days have been scheduled for the $4,000,000 worth of raw furs which are to be offered at the annual Winter sale of the New York Auction Company, Inc., here, beginning on Feb. 24. The merchandise will go on show in the company's warehouse on Feb. 19, General Manager J. Gordon Noakes announced yesterday.

"The Insurance Tools Available to the Credit Man" will be discussed at the open forum meeting next Monday evening of the New York Credit Men's Association at the Hotel Commodore by Alfred M. Best, president of Alfred M. Best & Co., Inc.

A new feature of "sports silk week" promotion this year will be a tie-up with leading garment manufacturers who have adopted spun silk sports fabrics, it was announced yesterday by J. Ralph Corbett, executive director of the spun-silk research committee. The programs will take place from April until well into June.

REVIEW OF THE DAY IN REALTY MARKET

Brokers Report Only a Few Sales and Leasehold Deals in Manhattan.

CHELSEA HOMES FINANCED

New Building on Columbus Avenue Is Bought for Investment—Bronx Plant Sold.

Real estate trading in Manhattan was light yesterday, owing in part to the holiday. Sales of properties and leasehold transactions were scarce, although a fair volume of space was leased for business purposes.

A good loan was announced for the financing of homes in the Chelsea district and the feature of the suburban market was the purchase by the Theurer Wagon Works of a plant in North Bergen.

On the upper west side, an investment deal was announced involving the property at 804-806 Columbus Avenue. The property consists of a new two-story business building on a plot 50 by 100 feet. The building is between Ninety-ninth and 100th Street and is under a long term net lease to the F. & W. Grand 5-10-25 Cent Stores, Inc. It was sold by J. C. & M. G. Mayer to an investing client of H. J. Rogers. Slawson & Hobbs, brokers who negotiated the transaction, said it was held at $325,000.

The three-story brick residence at 250 West Eleventh Street has been leased by the owner for a term of years to a client of Peppe & Brothers, brokers, who negotiated the lease. The lessee will occupy the house.

Dr. Alfred W. Herzog leased the four-story building at 42 West Ninety-fourth Street, near Central Park West, to a client of P. M. Hughes & Sons, brokers, for occupancy.

A large duplex apartment in the new 100 per cent cooperative building being erected at 133 East Eightieth Street, northwest corner of Lexington Avenue, was bought by Robert Cresswell, circulation manager of The New York Herald Tribune, according to an announcement by Donald W. Brown, Inc., broker. The building is being erected by the Calvin Morris Corporation from plans by Rosario Candela, architect. Although the building will not be ready for occupancy until the Fall, many of the apartments have already been sold. Brown, Wheelock, Harris, Vought & Co. represented the owners in the transaction.

In the Bronx, Eugene A. Walsh, as broker, sold for the B. X. Bo Holding Company, Inc., a three-story factory at 1,178-80 Longwood Avenue. The property was bought by the Hoover Laundry Company, A. S. Goldberger, president. The buyer will use the building for a laundry after extensive alterations are made.

Utilities to Sell New Jersey Realty.

The New Jersey State Board of Public Utility Commissioners at Trenton yesterday issued certificates approving the sale of two tracts of land, one in Elizabeth and the other in Chester, Morris County. The Elizabeth tract, which is on South Front street will be transferred to Peter J. McGurk for $12,000 by the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company. The land in Chester is to be sold to Morris Harriet Chamberlain by the New Jersey Power and Light Company for $4,600.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Henry C. Banks and Clement Cleveland Jr., associated with the realty brokerage firm of Raymond B. Thompson in Greenwich, Conn., have formed a partnership, to be known as Banks & Cleveland, to continue the Thompson business. The firm has branches in High Ridge and Westport, Conn.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. acted as brokers in a purchase last May by Best & Co. of a site for a branch department store on Boston Post Road, Beach and Tomkins Avenues, Mamaroneck.

MAKES $675,000 LOAN ON CHELSEA HOUSES

Mortgage Department of Leonard S. Gans Company Finances 23d St. Operation.

The mortgage department of the Leonard S. Gans Company, which has recently been organized, has made, in conjunction with James Boyd, a first mortgage loan of $675,000 on the two new six-story elevator apartment houses just completed by Samuel Silver at 221-233 West Twenty-third Street, running through to 214-234 West Twenty-fourth Street. They have accommodations for 244 families and are about two-thirds rented, indicating the demand for modern apartments in the Chelsea section.

The houses have a frontage of 131.3 feet on Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Streets, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, close to the subway stations.

The loan was made by the Greenwich Savings Bank for a period of five years. Leonard S. Gans Company was the broker in the sale of the plot to Samuel Silver.

M. Morgenthau Jr. has been elected vice president of the Leonard S. Gans Company and is in charge of the new mortgage department. Mr. Morgenthau has for many years been an active factor in the mortgage brokerage business in Manhattan and the Bronx. He was formerly in charge of the mortgage department for J. Clarence Davies & Co. and Frederick Southack & Alwyn Ball Jr. He has served as president of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards.

The mortgage department of the Leonard S. Gans Company will specialize in the financing and refinancing of large building operations.

WESTCHESTER SALES.

Larchmont House and Plots Near Hartsdale Change Hands.

Charles J. Moore, who is associated with H. P. Wright & Co., contractors, of New York City, has bought a new English-type stucco house in the Larchmont Hills section of Larchmont. The dwelling was erected by Joseph Williams, a local builder. Prince & Ripley, Inc., were the brokers.

The Harmon National Real Estate Corporation sold home sites in its Orchard Hill development near Hartsdale to Frank J. Holmes, Theodore B. Wyman, Charles F. Kiefer, Mary F. Whitaker, Margaret E. Lyons, Frank W. Thompson, Edward F. Donaldson, Alan P. Greeves, Thomas A. Sumner, Ernest M. Bennett and Estelle B. Pearce.

QUEENS REALTY SALES.

Industrial Firm Adds to Holdings in Long Island City.

An industrial plot 50 by 100 feet on the east side of William Street, north of Harris Avenue, Long Island City, has been acquired by Theo. Hoffstatter & Co., who own adjoining property. A. Liguori, G. Te Gussinklo and others were the sellers. The Roman-Callman Company acted as broker.

George J. Steitz sold four lots in Beach 125th Street, Rockaway Park, through W. F. Brunner, Inc. The same broker sold for Joseph Fybush three lots in Beach 138th Street, Belle Harbor, and rented for three years, for Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell, a residence at 233 Beach 123d Street, Rockaway Park.

WAREHOUSES AT AUCTION.

Chelsea Parcel to Be Offered Today—Several Foreclosure Sales Listed.

Two five-story warehouses at 141-45 Seventh Avenue and 154-56 West Nineteenth Street are to be sold today at noon in the Exchange Salesroom, 56 Vesey Street, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer. The structures, which include 48,000 square feet of floor space, form an ell around the southeast corner.

Foreclosure sales in the same building announced yesterday by Henry Brady, auctioneer, include the following: Feb. 17, brownstone house at 516 East Eighty-seventh Street; Feb. 18, nine-story loft at 661 Broadway, three tenements at 502-08 West 130th Street and brownstone house at 35 West 132d Street, in addition to the Odd Fellows Hall at 105-11 East 106th Street; Feb. 21, brownstone house at 246 West 137th Street; Feb. 25, six-story apartment at 578 West 193d Street and five-story tenement at 1,762 Third Avenue; Feb. 26, six-story flat at 352 East Third Street; Feb. 27, six-story flat at 14-16 West 127th Street.

In the Bronx Real Estate Exchange, 3,208-10 Third Avenue, Mr. Brady will sell tomorrow the parcel at 1,030-34 Castle Hill Avenue and on Feb. 21 a stucco house at 4,350 Edson Avenue.

Plans Staten Island Apartment.

Frank K. Johnson has sold to Philip Gosseen a plot 210 by 100 feet on St. Mark's Place, St. George, S. I., for improvement with a 295-room Moorish-style apartment house with garden courts. The project will be undertaken in the Spring. The purchase is said to have been made because of the complete rental of the recently erected St. George Gardens, housing 330 families.

WAGON WORKS TO MOVE OVER TO NEW JERSEY

Theurer Firm Takes Over Factory of Silk Concern in North Bergen.

The Theurer Wagon Works, Inc., one of the largest custom truck and auto body builders in the East, has taken title to the plant of J. A. Migel, Inc., on Hudson Boulevard, between Traphagen and Charles Streets, North Bergen, N. J. The Theurer Company, now at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street, Manhattan, will transfer its business to North Bergen as soon as necessary equipment is installed.

The Migel plant, said to be one of the best equipped silk mills in the country, was built in 1914 at a cost of $800,000. The four-story structure has 100,000 square feet of floor space. An easement for access to the plant from the boulevard passes through former factory space now occupied by automobile showrooms. The plant plot of 150,000 square feet fronts 250 feet on Paterson Plank Road and has a fifty-foot driveway to Traphagen Street.

The Theurer Wagon Works, Inc., was established forty years ago in Jersey City by John Theurer. His son of the same name now heads the organization, which employs about 300 persons.

The Migel plant was held at $500,000, J. I. Kislak, Inc., the broker, stated.

Dr. William Friele leased through the same broker a three-story frame dwelling of eleven rooms at 113 Newkirk Street, Jersey City, to Mrs. Emily Loufe, for a rooming house.

LET SPACE ENGINEERS PLAN YOUR NEW OFFICE

EACH department of your business has its own needs as to size and shape of rooms. Why warp it to suit existing walls, or pay for expensive alterations?

Space in the new Lincoln Building is available in whole or divided floors of varying shape, and in sizes from 33,770 to 8,445 sq. ft.

Our space engineers will gladly advise with you on the placing of partitions to give each department its proper shape and size in relation to each of the other departments.

1220 PARK AVENUE

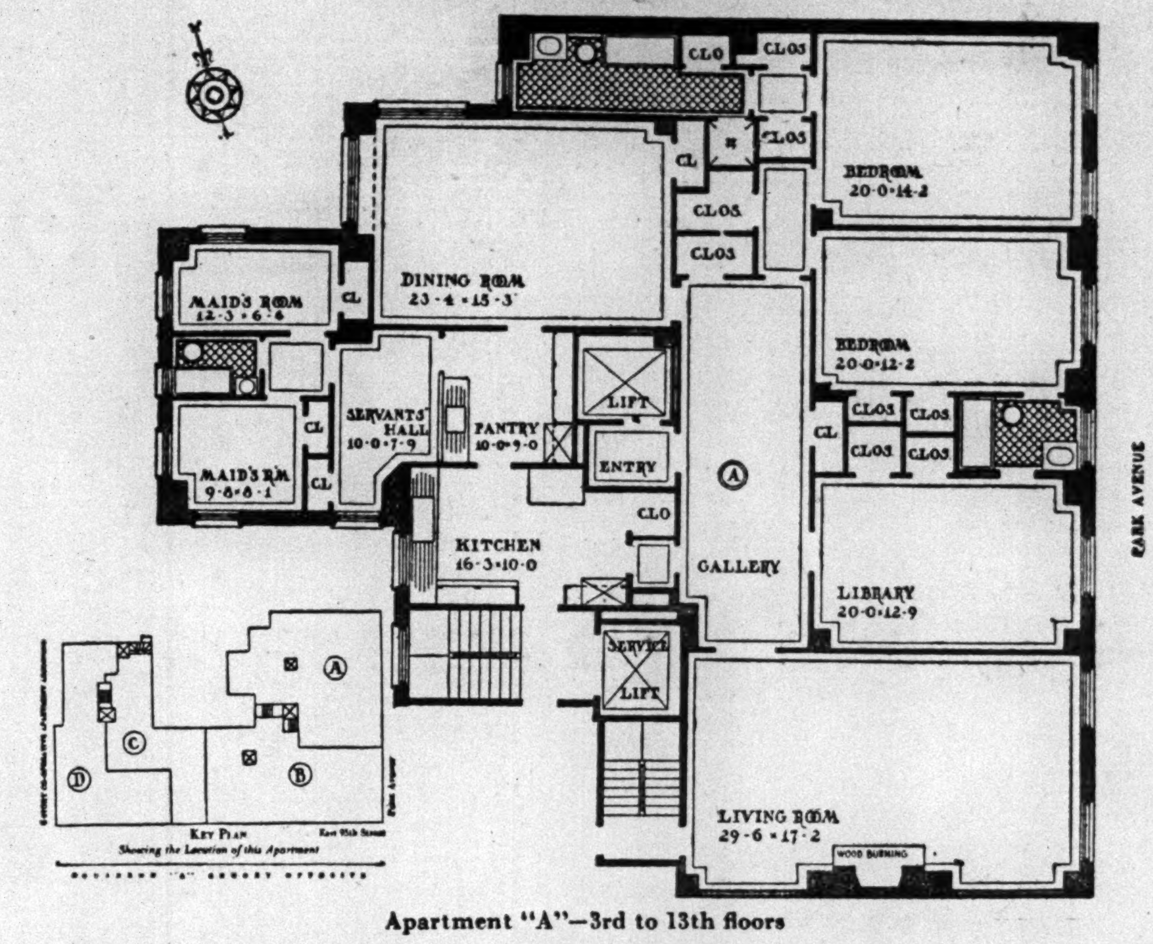
NORTHWEST CORNER 95th STREET



Apartment "A"—3rd to 13th floors

These cooperative apartments are purchasable under a new plan of payments out of income, giving full ownership at the end of five years with only maintenance to pay thereafter.

For example:

| | |
|---|---|
| Selling Price | $31,000 |
| One-third payable in three installments during construction | 10,333 |

Balance payable over a period of five years from completion at 5% interest. No finance charge.

The annual payments on account of principal will be $4135 plus average interest of $517.

This apartment would rent for $6700 a year. Estimated maintenance, plus interest on the entire purchase price, $4900. Therefore there is a real saving over rental of $1800 a year in addition to the convenience of buying out of income.

Other apartments of 7 to 14 rooms, simplex and duplex, many with terraces, loggias and conservatories, may be bought under the same plan.

GERARD SEES END OF PROHIBITION SURE

Former Ambassador, Sailing for Cuba, Says "Repeal or Revolution" Will Bring Defeat.

PREDICTS SPLIT OF PARTIES

Nassau District Attorney, Also on Mauretania, Asserts He Fights Bad Liquor Only.

The Cunarder Mauretania left yesterday for Havana with 559 first-class passengers, the largest number that has even sailed from this port for Cuba on one vessel.

Among the passengers was former Ambassador James W. Gerard, who was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Marcus Daly. He will spend six weeks in Cuba.

Mr. Gerard said he believed the effect of the prohibition question on the Democratic and Republican parties would be to split them both in two. Regarding the prospects of the Democrats in the next Presidential election, he said:

"I think they will have a very good chance irrespective of the prohibition question. Things do not seem to be going over well in Washington."

When asked for his opinion on the methods employed by Maurice Campbell, Prohibition Commissioner for New York, in raiding hotels and threatening to arrest all persons found with flasks in their possession, Mr. Gerard said:

"Fine. I can think of nothing better. The way to defeat prohibition is actually to try to enforce it. Prohibition is arousing a spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction all over the United States, and that it will be defeated is a foregone conclusion. It may be by repeal or by revolution; but by one or the other it will come about. The noble experiment is getting less noble every day."

Another passenger on the Mauretania was Elvin N. Edwards, District Attorney for Nassau County, who conducted 161 raids against speakeasies in that county last year.

"I am not sympathetic to prohibition," he said, "but the law is the law and when I take oath to enforce it I must do the best I can. There are plenty of places in Nassau where good liquor is sold which we have not raided or closed up. I am after the places where bad liquor is sold and where vice breeds. We can enforce prohibition, but we haven't the officers and the money to do it. It would take billions of dollars and millions of men, and even then there would be wet spots. My theory is to go after the bad wet spots."

SANCTIONS SALE OF 5 SHIPS

Shipping Board Authorizes $287,000 Deal With Amtorg Officer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Sale of five steel cargo steamers to Johann J. Ohsol of New York for $287,000 cash with the privilege of transferring the vessels to foreign registry was authorized by the Shipping Board today. Mr. Ohsol is an officer of the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

Three of the vessels, the Eastern Cross, Eastern Chief and Eastport, are cargo vessels of 6,800 tons deadweight, and it is stipulated that they will not be operated to or from ports of the United States for a period of ten years. The other two, the Lake Fitch and Lake Ferrona, are small vessels of 4,155 tons deadweight and must not be operated to or from the United States for five years.

The privilege is granted to take one outward cargo of coal, grain, scrap iron or agricultural or canning machinery to Siberian and Black Sea ports.

STUDY NARROWS TUNNEL.

Army Men to Hold Hearing Today, With Port Authority Represented.

The Port of New York Authority will be represented at a hearing before army engineers at the Army Building today when plans for building the vehicular tunnel under the Narrows are discussed. The Board of Transportation and the Department of Plant and Structures have completed plans for the development and will request permission to begin operations as soon as the War Department approves the project.

A study has been made of the "shield" and the "trench" methods of putting the tunnel under the waters of the harbor between Staten Island and Brooklyn. These two methods will be presented to army experts today and their opinions will be solicited. Recommendations as to the project will be filed in Washington.

REDUCES SAILINGS TO GERMAN PORTS

Bernstein Line Obtains Ship Board Approval for Freight Agreement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Under an agreement between the German port group members of the North Atlantic Freight Conference and the Arnold Bernstein Line, which is not a member of the conference, approved today by the Shipping Board, the Bernstein Line agrees to restrict its carryings to unboxed automobiles and not to endeavor to expand its business beyond its present volume, nor to have more than three sailings a month.

The lines agree to rates on unboxed automobiles to Hamburg, Bremen and interior points. Contracts are to be open to all carriers and no commission to shippers or consignees is to be paid by any line.

The agreement is to continue until Dec. 31, 1932, and from year to year thereafter, subject to right of withdrawal upon six months' written notice after June 30, 1932.

Other freight agreements approved today were:

LUCKENBACH GULF STEAMSHIP COMPANY, INC., with COMMERCIAL STEAMSHIP LINES—Through rates on carload shipments of canned goods and dried fruit from the Pacific Coast to Tampa, with transshipment at New Orleans, are specified and apportioned 60 per cent to Luckenbach and 40 per cent to Commercial after deduction of 5¾ cents per 100 pounds to cover cost of transfer at New Orleans. Wharfage charges at Tampa are to be absorbed by the delivering carrier.

LUCKENBACH, with MALLORY STEAMSHIP COMPANY—The terms of this agreement are identical with those of the agreement with the Commercial Lines.

CALMAR STEAMSHIP CORPORATION with PACIFIC STEAMSHIP COMPANY—Westbound through rates between Atlantic Coast ports and San Diego, Cal., with transshipment at Los Angeles, are to be based on Calmar tariff out of which that carrier is to absorb the charges of Pacific from Los Angeles to San Diego. Eastbound rates are to be based on the combination of the local rates of the participating carriers. On westbound traffic Calmar is to pay inward wharfage and drayage at Los Angeles and the Pacific Steamship Company is to absorb outward wharfage. On east bound traffic Pacific is to absorb wharfage over its own dock and handling cost to Calmar dock, while Calmar is to absorb the cost of drayage between docks, and wharfage charges. Pacific vessels are to call at Calmar dock for lots of 100 tons or more.

LUCKENBACH with AMERICA FRANCE LINE—Through rates on canned goods and dried fruits from Pacific Coast ports to Bordeaux, Dunkirk, Havre and St. Nazaire, France, with transshipment at New York, are based on direct line conference rates, apportioned equally between the lines, each to assume half the cost of transshipment. Minimum bill of lading charge of $5 is to be apportioned equally.

The board approved a request of the Luckenbach Company and Gulf Mail Steamship Company for cancellation of an agreement covering through shipments from Pacific Coast ports to Progreso, Mexico, with transshipment at New Orleans, because of discontinuance of service to the Gulf by the Luckenbach Company.

The following modifications of agreements were approved by the board:

AMERICAN FRUIT AND STEAMSHIP CORPORATION with GULF PACIFIC LINE—First named company is substituted for Standard Fruit and Steamship Corporation in two agreements covering shipments of coffee from Vera Cruz to Pacific Coast ports via New Orleans, and commodities from Pacific Coast to ports in Colombia, Costa Rica, Jamaica and Mexico, via New Orleans.

AMERICAN FRUIT AND STEAMSHIP CORPORATION with REDWOOD LINE, INC.—American substituted for Standard company in agreements covering through shipments of coffee from Vera Cruz to Pacific Coast ports via New Orleans and cotton from Pacific Coast to Mexican ports, via New Orleans.

AMERICAN FRUIT AND STEAMSHIP CORPORATION with LUCKENBACH GULF STEAMSHIP COMPANY, INC.—American substituted for Standard and Luckenbach Gulf for Luckenbach Steamship Company, Inc., in agreement on shipments of coffee from Vera Cruz to Pacific Coast, with transshipment at New Orleans.

The purpose of these modifications is to record the American Fruit and Steamship Corporation as the successor of the Standard Fruit and Steamship Company, and the Luckenbach Gulf Steamship Company, Inc., as the successor of Luckenbach Steamship Company, Inc. The Board opposed the following modification:

CALMAR STEAMSHIP CORPORATION with BORDER LINE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY—Agreement on through shipments from Atlantic Coast ports to Victoria and Vancouver, B. C., and Tacoma, Everett and Bellingham, Wash., with transshipment at Seattle, is extended to include shipments to Powell River, B. C.

352 Off on Mediterranean Cruise.

The French liner France sailed at noon yesterday for a thirty-day cruise to the Mediterranean with 352 cruise passengers and ninety-two others who will leave the ship abroad. Among the passengers were Gene Byrnes, cartoonist, and his bride, the former Mrs. Spring Arguimbar. They will pass six months abroad, Mr. Byrnes said.

RADIOGRAMS

SPEED and accuracy give RCA RADIOGRAMS the preference to messages abroad. Many American business houses mark their overseas communications "Via RCA" in order to avoid costly delays and errors.
